What did she feel for him now? An answering hatred? An answering vengeance? She searched her heart for the truth. It was none of these. She did not know quite what it was. Just a sort of numb horror was as near as she could get to it. Fear? No. There was no fear of him in her heart. She had told him that, and it had not been in any way a bluff. Just horror, that was all. Horror of finding that something she had loved and revered was really a thing to be hated, despised, abhorred.

Thoughts began then to go round in circles; repeating over and over again; dimly; unobscured. It was nearly dawn when she wearily addressed and got into bed; and full day before, exhausted with a sort of utter exhaustion she had never before known, she sank into sleep.

She did not see Lee again until noon next day. She had not been up long, but evidently he had, for he came into the house in riding kit. As he crossed the hall, he turned, and through the open doorway of the living room he saw her standing by a table, arranging pink roses in a big silver bowl. He stopped, startled by

Knitted Modes Set New Style Pace

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THIS many a yarn which Dame Fashion is spinning these days in answer to the call of the mode for smart knitted apparel. It is not only that knitted togs in their modern versions are so good to look upon, but the fact of their being so thoroughly practical gives them a place in the heart of the sports world which none other can occupy.

As knitted fashions stand today they acknowledge no superior when it comes to ultra-chic and beguiling charm. This, together with the fact that a knitted costume stands any amount of wear and tear without losing that well-groomed appearance which every prudent woman covets, accounts for the increasing enthusiasm expressed for outfits which are knitted or fashioned of knitted fabrics.

Straight from la belle Paris come the two knitted costumes pictured. The suit to the left is of loose-knit jersey in green and white, with the scarf and corsage in the same colors. Its belted jacket, which stops at the waistline, together with the flat stitched pants in the skirt testify that when it comes to style details there is no point missed by designers of knitted modes.

The costume shown to the right is a Paquin model as is also the suit just described. This sports ensemble chooses to combine red wool with Scotch check. The bolero which milady carries on her arm ready for wear in the outdoors is of the same. It is characteristic of French costumes as styled for spring and the coming summer that they accent color at the top, a treatment which has been most strikingly accomplished in the present instance.

For novelty, versatility and gaiety it is the sweater which carries the day with highest honors. The sweater, crocheted or knitted in loose open mesh, is a topnotch fashion. Some of them are that open they look to be little more than of snuffnetting. It's quite the swaggiest thing to wear one of these openwork sweaters over one's sleeveless sports dress. Match it to the color of your frock or have it in striking contrast, as you will.

The new skirts with built-up waistlines have brought tuck-in sweaters to the fore. Necklines, too, come in for a great deal of attention in sweater designing, frills, fichu effects, jabots and all sorts of dressmaker details adding a plangent touch to the mode.

Very elaborate ensembles are being displayed, those in all white being notably lovely. Per example, a sports outfit recently shown consisted of a skirt knitted in simple stitch with a row of open stitch marking the separation between the gored sections which achieved a snug fit about the hips with a slight flare below the knees. The sweater blouse accented an extremely open lacy stitch. The sleeved bolero matched the skirt. A beret, a belt, a scarf and an envelope pocketbook knitted and crocheted in fanciful stitch and design added notes of interest. All in pure white, this many-one costume made a striking appearance.

For berets and scarfs designers are using rayon chenille with excellent results as the chenille crochets softly and prettily, being particularly effective in pastel colorings. Women who wield the crochet needle readily are adding a touch of distinction to their bought sweaters by crocheting a shell stitch chenille edge about neckline and sleeves as well as finishing various hemlines, adding perhaps a few crocheted buttons in decorative manner.

SAILOR HAT IS IN SPRING SPOTLIGHT

A visit to the hat shops would indicate that Dame Fashion has decreed almost any kind of bonnet as long as some conditions are followed.

Right out in the spotlight is the sailor with its brim and hat band of ribbons or leather, sometimes of contrasting color. The colors are quite gay, the crowns are, on the whole, shallow, and the brims narrow. While the straws fairly blossom on the shelves there are popular arrays of knitted hats, some with straw brims, and some knitted of wool and straw. There are knitted hats popular for sports that sit like a pancake on top of the head and come in bright sports colors.

The hats sport any variety of small and striking ornaments of a contrasting color.

Irish Lace Lends Nice Touch to Spring Frock

Crocheted Irish lace is lending a chaste touch to many a spring frock of printed crepe, plain black or beige crepe or a plain navy blue woolen.

It is used in collars, vests, cuffs and on the ends of ties. It is even used to trim some of the smartest and most expensive of the new spring hats.

Perhaps if a housewife is frugal she will begin remodeling around in old trunks in the attic. Is she has an attic, and some of the old Irish lace she finds there may be the means of making lovely an otherwise ordinary dress this spring.

Anchor Clips

If you wish to be very smart you will go in for things nautical, such, for instance, as clips in the form of anchors and stars in silver or gold finished metal, or in red, white and blue enamel.

COWL NECKLINE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The craze for the hand-crocheted blouse has spread to include street, sports and informal afternoon costumes. As it is getting a bit late for wool, a number of the Paris houses are making these blouses in mercerized, or with a cowl neckline, as illustrated. This cowl neckline appears to be the latest, and a very soft, charming effect it gives when worn under the open jacket. These hand-crocheted sweaters or blouses are so easy to do, women everywhere are making them. They are lovely in pastel tones or in white.

Early Surgical Operations

Garrison's History of Medicine says that certain pictures engraved on the doorposts of a tomb near Memphis, Egypt, are regarded by their discoverer, W. ### OBITUARY

Robert Dale Hart, son of Fred and Winifred Hart, was born in Spencer township on September 9, 1916 and departed this life in Jackson, Michigan at 5 o'clock in the morning April 21, 1932, at the age of 15 years, 7 months and 12 days.

His sickness dated from February 9, his last day in school was on February 8, from that date everything that loving hands could do was done to restore his health but the dreaded malady refused to yield to medical treatment. During it all he was uncomplaining.

The many letters he received during his illness was a source of great pleasure and comfort to him.

Robert had a natural inclination for music and could readily play most any instrument by ear and had a natural mechanical ability which is revealed by the many toys and devices found around his home made by his own hands.

On July 7, 1929 he was baptized by Elder J. N. Scholes, he was faithful to church and Sunday School having missed but few Sundays since babyhood.

He was a great lover of outdoor life and was never so happy as when in the association of other children.

He leaves to mourn his vacant place in the home, father, mother, two brothers, Glen of Goshen, Ind., and Elwood of Jackson, Mich., one nephew, Earl Richard Hart, two grandmothers, Mrs. Alice Hart and Mrs. Dora Coburn, and a large circle of relatives and friends.

Funeral services were conducted at the Coburn's Corners Church of Christ, Saturday, April 23 at 2 P. M. by Elder J. O. Rose assisted by Elder J. N. Scholes and his body was laid to rest in the Alton cemetery.

A WORTHY CAUSE SPONSORED BY THE HOME BUREAU

Latest word from the Shriners Hospital for crippled children in Chicago is to the effect that Master Bobbie Loucks has undergone a third operation for correction of club feet, and is getting along nicely, but with a possibility that he will be in the hospital longer than was at first expected, due to the fact that the distance is so great that it is impossible to take him back and forth for treatment and adjustment, which could be done every six weeks were he close to the hospital.

Looking forward to the time of his return home, the Ladies Home Bureau is preparing for the necessary expense involved, and will present the benefit play and program Friday night at the St. Joe Gym. The admission charge will be only 10 and 20 cents.

The community is promised a good evening's program, and should be glad to share with the Home Bureau the joy of giving to one little child the opportunity of a life with no physical handicap.

CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

(Evening Star)
Fifty years of married life were celebrated Sunday by Mr. and Mrs. Dan Herrick at their home in Auburn. A family reunion commemorated the event and in the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Herrick received callers.
The dinner at the noon hour was a feature of the occasion. The table, laden with good things was a picture, with masses of roses, the gifts of relatives and friends, while in the center was a large 5-tiered golden wedding cake prepared by the Phelps bakery. Suspended from the chandelier was a gilded horseshoe which had been removed from a floral piece of roses sent by the Auburn High School Athletic association. Mr. Herrick has always been an enthusiastic basket ball fan and the horseshoe was the one which he always carried to the games for good luck.
Besides huge bouquets of roses there was a large one given by the grandchildren consisting of snapdragons, delphinium and a mock orange blossoms. Mr. and Mrs. Herrick were remembered with numerous gifts of gold pieces, a beautiful gold table lamp and many cards.
The happy couple was married at Spencerville on May 7, 1882, at the home of Mrs. Herrick's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fales with whom the then Ida M. Spiller resided for a number of years. They moved onto the farm of Mr. Herrick's father, eventually leaving the farm to reside in St. Joe where Mr. Herrick operated a meat market.

In 1898 Mr. Herrick was elected recorder of DeKalb county, taking the office in January, 1900. He served until 1904. After leaving the office Mr. Herrick bought Hadermann's restaurant on East Seventh Street which he operated fourteen years. He then was in the employ of the Indiana Service Corp., at Kendallville and Waterloo from 1920 to 1926 when he bought the restaurant which he and his daughter, Mrs. Estella Welch now own. Mr. and Mrs. Herrick have been residents of Auburn for 32 years.
Those present at the anniversary were Mrs. Frank Herrick of Baltimore, Md., Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Herrick of St. Joe, Mrs. Nettie Culbertson, a sister of Mr. Herrick residing at St. Joe, his brother, Mel Herrick of Angola, Mrs. Herrick's sisters, Mrs. Ruby Rhodenbaugh of Ft. Wayne and Mrs. Lydia Kresley of this city, a grandson, Albert Herrick and wife of Kendallville and Mrs. Estella Welch and children, Frank, Edward, Charles, Blanche and Ethel Mae of Auburn.
Mr. and Mrs. Herrick have sixteen grandchildren living.

WM. CURIE LEFT ESTATE VAUED AT ABOUT $8,000

The late Wm. Curie, St. Joe merchant, who died suddenly April 29, made a will June 17, 1915, by which he left his property to his three sons, Lester, Elgin and Paul, subject to its use by Delora Curie as long as she remained his widow. In case of her remarriage she is to receive one-third of the property in fee simple and the balance was to be equally divided among the sons.
The will was witnessed by W. N. Miller and J. Glen Miller and was admitted to probate Friday in the DeKalb circuit court.
The widow was nominated in the will for executrix, but upon her application and that of Paul Curie, Elgin Curie was appointed administrator. He qualified by filing $15,000 bond, with his mother and H. S. Platner as sureties. The value of the personal property is estimated at $7,500 and that of the real estate at $500.
The son, Lester, mentioned in the will, is now dead.

MEMORIAL DAY OBSERVANCE PLANNED

Memorial Day exercises will be observed here in the afternoon this year with a program consisting of songs, recitations, and a patriotic speech, to be given at the High School Gymnasium at 2 o'clock. This will be followed by a march to the cemetery for the decoration of graves.
In the forenoon the outlying cemeteries will be visited ending at Alton Cemetery and the service at Coburntown.
The whole community is strongly urged to attend all these services, especially is it desired that a large body of ex-service men be on hand to make the observance of this day a big success.

BREAK GROUND FOR NEW BUILDING

Prosperity is just around the corner, and no joking either. Ten men began work at the St. Joe Filling Station Monday morning on the excavation work for their new building.
The building will be about 22 by 30 feet with basement, so as to accommodate all their work in doors.
Elgin Curie made a business trip to Indianapolis this week.

RUSSELL GRATZ GETS SIX MONTHS IN JAIL

Russell Gratz, of Leo, who is said by Maj. Howard Long, prohibition enforcement officer for northern Indiana to have had one of the most complete plants ever uncovered in Allen county for making bootleg liquor look like bonded whiskey was sentenced to serve six months in the Allen county jail Tuesday by Judge Thomas W. Slick in federal court.
Gratz was also fined $300. His wife, Anna Gratz, was given a suspended sentence of three months in jail. She was placed on probation to Joseph E. Lewis, district probation officer, for one year.
The prohibition officers who raided the place of Gratz on New Year's Eve found counterfeit labels, corks, foil, bottles, coloring, flavors, wrappers and everything necessary to make the product, which was doctored alcohol, appear as bonded liquor.
Maj. Long said that Gratz also frequently drove a large automobile to Detroit which left the impression with his customers that he was hauling good whiskey from Canada. A large quantity of alcohol was found in the Gratz establishment at the time of his arrest, the federal men said. The court ordered the destruction of the liquor.

In the meantime the parents of the boy, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Watson, living southwest of Spencer-ville, were looking for him. They had gone to the Troyer home, a half mile east of the Olinger home, early in the evening for a visit. The boy was sleepy and he was left in the automobile. It seems that eventually he awoke, opened the car door and started to look for his mother. He walked half a mile down the road to the Olinger home.
Mr. and Mrs. Watson did not notice the boy was gone from the car until they reached Auburn on their way home. They immediately returned to the Troyer home and a search was instituted. Sheriff John P. Hoff and his deputy, Herbert N. Grimm, responded to a call and joined in the hunt. The telephone at the Harry Diehl home, opposite the Troyer place, rang and someone answered. It was found to be Mr. Olinger trying to telephone to the sheriff at the county jail to report his find. It was not long before parents and baby were happily reunited. The youngster apparently was none the worse for his experience.

ENTERS PARTITION SUIT

Mrs. Pearl Cochran Friday sued her former husband, Chas. Cochran, and M. C. Blue in the DeKalb circuit court for the partition of real estate at St. Joe. The court is asked to appoint a commissioner to sell the property and distribute the proceeds. Howard S. Grimm is the plaintiff's attorney.

Mrs. Diadem Bone, of Concord, has been a very sick woman for some days, having an attack of pneumonia. Last reports say she is sitting up a little each day.

Walter Greusbeck, who has been working at H. K. Tower here for several years, was bumped from his job by W. P. Donahue of Kimmell, Ind., taking his place Thursday.

Myron and Ralph Hoyt, enroute from Florida to their home at Fennville, Mich., are spending a few days here as guests of Mrs. Lela Northrup and also in the Wm. Hamilton home.

Some time Friday night, thieves entered the Boon-Bevington store at Hicksville and made away with wearing apparel valued at more than $3,000. They made entrance by cutting off iron bars at a rear window.

Mrs. Hazel Steward, son, Erill daughter, Florence, George Berry and Jeanne Hatch, of Spencer-ville, also Miss Estella Baumgartner of Fort Wayne spent Sunday with Mrs. Mary Betz and Mrs. Ada Berry.

Mr. and Mrs. Delvin Armstrong of Auburn and Mr. and Mrs. Sam Armstrong took supper Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Ridgway. Ronald and Betty Armstrong, who had spent the week-end here returned home with their parents.

The trial before the Public Service Commission, in which the local citizens are protesting the discontinuance of station agent at St. Joe, will be heard this forenoon at 10 o'clock, at the court house, Auburn, and every interested citizen should be there with his defense. Attorney Henry C. Springer, town attorney, will be present and represent the community, and our largest shippers will be present with their data.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS ENTERTAIN GRADUATES

The Tri Mu class of the Lutheran Sunday School entertained in honor of the Seniors of their class at a banquet in the church basement Wednesday eve. The decorations were carried out in the class colors, red and white.
At 6:30 we were served with a delicious supper consisting of meat loaf with gravy, mashed potatoes, baked beans, pickles and pear salad.
Lucille Curie gave a short talk on "The interesting things in the East."
Second course was then served which was composed of fruit salad with whipped cream, cake and coffee, after which Rev. Fabian-ski gave a very interesting talk on "The part we play in the church."
Joe Woodcox displayed his musical talent by singing "Somewhere a Voice is Calling." Grace Dilley accompanying him. The rest of the evening was spent in contests and games.
The seniors of the Tri Mu class are George Wade, Gladys Dressel, June Ridgway, Floyd Pilsaumer, Everett Collins and Alden Engle. The parties responsible for this evening of unusual enjoyment were the members of the class and their teacher, Mrs. Dilley.

OBITUARY

Matilda Elghinger Cowan, daughter of George and Elizabeth Elghinger was born in Ashland County, Ohio, September 6, 1843 and departed this life May 3, 1932, at the home of her niece, Mrs. Pearl King of Sturgis, Michigan; at the age of 88 years, 7 months and 27 days.

December 30, 1869 she was united in marriage to Wm. A. Cowan, who preceded her in death June 19, 1914.

They lived for a time in Ohio and then went to Pennsylvania, where they lived and cared for an elderly uncle and aunt of Mr. Cowan's. They remained until the death of both their uncle and aunt. Then they moved to Springfield, Mo., at which place they lived until nine years ago. Mrs. Cowan becoming feeble with age came to make her home with her sister, Mrs. Wm. Staman, at this place. Shortly after coming here her condition became more serious and she was bedfast most of the time.

Last October when Mrs. Staman's health became poor and she was unable to care for Mrs. Cowan longer, Mrs. Cowan went to Sturgis, Mich., to make her home with Mrs. King, where she died.

At the age of fifteen Mrs. Cowan was united with the Lutheran Church at Mifflin, Ohio. But after moving to Springfield, Mo., she was united with the Presbyterian Church at that place. She has always been a church member and a staunch christian.

Mrs. Cowan leaves to mourn her departure two sisters, Mrs. Eva Dennis of Toledo, Ohio, and Mrs. Abie Reed of Columbus, Ohio; two brothers, John Elghinger of Hicksville, Ohio and George Elghinger of Decatur, Ill.

The funeral was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Staman, Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. H. F. Craven of Auburn Presbyterian Church, officiating and burial was made in Riverside Cemetery by E. R. Kinsey.

The Silver Kiss

By Fannie Hurst

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) (WNU Service)

WHEN Myron Gilmore went away to the World War, and two-thirds of the town, eyed, crammed the small station to see the boys off, he took a girl he had called Sweet Annie Laurie for the greater part of his life into his arms, and there in the melee of unleashed emotions, kissed her roundly and soundly on her beautiful lips.

"Let this last you, Dear Heart, until I return," he said.

"You know I will, without my saying it, Myron."

And so she would have, except for what happened.

War boomed on; the weeks stretched into months and the months into years and in a small Middle Western town a girl named Laura Moore kept tryst and waited. It was a fearful kind of waiting, the kind that caused one to pick up every morning's paper with bated breath, and the sight of a messenger boy running up a flight of front steps was sufficient to strike terror into the heart. Strained waiting months of anxiety, mingled with hope; of terror, mitigated by prayer.

And then one day, near Verdun, under an exploding shell, that as it fell lighted the countryside in a wide white grin, Myron Gilmore, crouching for attack, felt the lower half of his face seen to move; take wings; take flight. Almost just that had happened. One of those devastating facial accidents that brought about the wonders of a new science called plastic surgery had befallen Myron, tearing away part of the lower jaw and mutilating, almost beyond recognition, the personable face of the young man who had bidden Laura Moore good-by.

Then the same old story. Month after month in one hospital after another, where from time to time the various experimental treatments were tried out. The wound had healed fairly well, but the great problem lay in restoration. Paraffin and silver had been tried for purposes of filling out the shot away jaw and lower lip, but because of certain inherent difficulties, the substance would not hold and slowly but surely the improvised structure of Myron's lower jaw would begin to collapse, revealing the upper, line of his side teeth.

It made him rather horrible. Something like a skull-head, if you will, as the left side of his face, but the doctors dragged on, there developed in Myron, over this recurring tragedy of the exposed side of his face, a sensitiveness that was torture and torment. Day after day, he lay on his cot, face to wall, concealing from even his wardmates what he regarded as the horror of his countenance.

Months since he had ceased replying to the eager inquiring letters that came from Laura.

Then one day he resorted to a ruse. Two weeks after the signing of the armistice, there went across seas a letter to Laura Moore bearing the tidings that Myron had died of a septic infection of the jaw.

That somehow made things simpler; easier for Myron to bear. You could manage to go through life with a paraffin jaw, if need be, but just so long as you did not drag into the torment of your little hell, the lovely figure of the girl whose lips your own had pressed in promise of bright days to come.

It was at a hospital in Paris they finally succeeded in perfecting a lower jaw or silver and paraffin that held firmly and except to the closely observing, the face of Myron, with the exception of a rigidity which suggested partial paralysis, was not any too noticeably scarred. Of course it was obvious that there was a face somehow not of normal cast, but it was not a countenance to cause one to recoil.

In other words, but for the inevitable handicap of such a defect, Myron's disability, except in his own consciousness, was not the calamity it had threatened to be. Pulling himself together and taking up the routine of life, there remained within him this one form of sensitiveness that was little short of mania.

He believed himself a horror in the eyes of man. Which he was not. He molded his life accordingly, finding himself a position in an English bank in the city of Paris and practically living the life of a recluse.

It was too bad all the way around, not only because the obsession that his silver lips were to have been so terribly repulsive to Laura, but because the further reduced his life to the narrow lustreless plane of an eccentric. There were no mirrors in Myron's rooms; he allowed himself no social life; women were omitted from his scheme.

At forty, skilled in a colloquial knowledge of the French language, an honor student at the Sorbonne and a graduate in French law, he had managed to fill the wide empty niches in his life by qualifying himself for a professional career.

It was remarkable in its way, and created no small amount of comment. The idea of this American who called himself Myron Stewart, qualifying so brilliantly for the French bar, caught popular fancy. Americans, flocking, brought him wide clientele and then his success began.

Meanwhile Laura, whose heart was a grave for him, had done the not unusual thing. She had married the next-best, a bosom friend of Myron's, in fact, who had loved her, prospered, provided her with worldly goods and died in a fashion that had been a shock to the entire community. One of those untimely deaths by motor car accident, of one of the thriving and successful business men of the town. Out of a clear sky, a devastating bolt from the blue, and Laura at forty, childless, a widow.

Inevitably, props thus knocked from under, she found herself following the nomadic trail of the widow. Her first trip abroad, in the company of a personally conducted group of five, landed her in Paris in April, the perfect month of the Paris year. There were bitter memories in her heart for this city which she had never seen; bitter memories all crowded around with the pain of her new grief.

It was while she was standing alone one day before the perpetual flame on the grave of the Unknown Soldier at the head of the Champs Elysees, that glancing up, she found her eyes riveted to the gaze of one who had evidently risen from the casket in her heart.

He had not, though, because as she gazed, stealthily he began to move away and as one possessed, she began to push through the traffic of the Etoile after him.

"Who are you?"

"I am no one you know."

"You are Myron."

"You are mad."

"You are Myron."

"What if I am?"

"How dare you talk like that! What if you are! If you are, you are a life come back, when I thought life dead."

"How did you know me?"

"Why not?"

"My face."

"Myron—Myron, it is dark here—just to prove to me I am not dreaming—and may wake up—kiss me, Myron—"

Coldly he laid against her, lips that were rigid with silver.

"Now are you sure?"

"Surer than heaven. Kiss me again."

Men of High Ability

Buffeted by Fortune

When the papers announced the other day that a man named Leo Melanowski was living in the home of the Little Sisters of the Poor in Middle West city, it didn't sound especially interesting—unless you read on and learned about the man's background.

For Melanowski was one of the big men in the early days of the automobile industry. Three decades ago he was considered probably the best automotive engineer in the country. As a matter of fact, some men still feel that way about him.

At one time Henry Ford asked him for a job. He guided the early development of the motor industry; he once held five shares of Ford stock, which, if he had held on to it, would have netted him more than a million and a half in cash in 1919.

But today he lives in the home of the Little Sisters of the Poor; and the whole story emphasizes the prodigious way in which business, like life in general, uses human talent in order to get the results it wants.

Melanowski is not the only one of the early giants of the automobile trade to wind up in poverty.

David Buick died almost penniless in Detroit a few years ago. R. C. Hupp, if not in poverty, was not among the mighty and the rich when he died. And the automobile business is not the only business that has tales like that. Nearly every industry can duplicate them.

Just why things like that should happen is not at all clear. No industry ever had a surplus of brains. The old saying, "There's always room at the top," is perfectly true. A man of outstanding ability is always in demand.

And yet—every now and then such a man of that kind gets absolutely nowhere. It is as if there were some hidden and inexplicable rule by which business must sacrifice, now and then, a keen head to some invisible and unaccountable power.

—you could make a long and dismal list. It testifies to one of the most distressing and wasteful ailments of modern business.—Rocky Mountain News, Denver.

Desotes Proliferousness

The original application of the phrase "apple of the eye" is not clear, some supposing it to be a perversion of "pupil of the eye," and others adhering to the theory that it originated in the notion that the pupil of the eye is a round solid ball like an apple. At any rate, "the apple of the eye" is the symbol of that which is cherished and most precious. The expression refers to anything extremely dear, greatly beloved or highly valued.

It is very old and occurs a number of times in the King James version of the Bible.—Pittsburgh Courier.

WHITE TERRORS of the SEA

A White Terror of the North Atlantic

(Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

ICEBERGS of the white terrors of the North Atlantic ship lanes, are on their annual migration from the Arctic to their doom in the warm waters on the gulf stream. Already North Atlantic traffic lanes have been moved 90 miles southward by order of the ice patrol which reports that some 250 bergs will move southward during the 1932 ice season of April, May and June.

Icebergs have always been the dread of the transatlantic navigator. They drift hither and yon. They give no warning of their presence. They are propelled now by ocean currents, now by tides, and now by winds and waves. Fog is their constant companion.

A vessel speeding through an area infested with moving ice, during night or in fog, plays a game of chance. Even at a starlight night a berg cannot be seen beyond a half mile; but when the position of the ice is known to the navigator, the danger is eliminated; he can alter his course to avoid the menace.

The ice comes down every year, as it has for centuries; but now every year a startling new danger has been added. The Grand Banks into the steamer lanes is kept under surveillance by the international ice patrol. From this service navigators can learn the answer to the question which each asks: "Where is the ice?"

Not a single ship has been lost through collision with an iceberg since the patrol was inaugurated.

Greenland's "icy mountains" alone are the source of the icebergs that come as far south as the steamer lanes, journeying about 1,800 miles—approximately the distance from Washington, D. C., to Denver—before they become "white specters" to shipping.

With the exception of a small strip of coast line, Greenland is completely covered with a vase ice cap. Its estimated thickness is 5,000 feet.

Always the ice mantle is moving down the slope of the land toward the sea, in great glaciers, pushing out through the valleys. As the ice reaches the sea it noses out into the water until buoyancy lifts it up, and then the front of the glacier breaks off at a weak spot.

There is a deafening roar and a thunderous crash, and with a tidal splash the glacial fragments plunge heavily into the sea, almost submerging. The water is churned into creamy waves as the newborn berg shakes off the sea, regains its equilibrium, and settles itself comfortably for a long journey southward.

Come From Greenland There are six principal berg-producing glaciers in Greenland. The worst offenders are those of Diabolo, Jakobshavn, and Torsukatak. Karajak, and Umanak on the west coast.

Bergs are discharged in vast numbers from these and other Greenland glaciers. Yet few come south of Newfoundland. Many are too small to last long.

Only the fittest survive the buffeting of the sea, to be carried south on the flow of the Labrador current and along the eastern edge of the Gulf stream. The banks current gives them short shrift; but until they have dwindled to the size of an ample library deck they are capable of staying in a vessel's plates.

The Labrador current, although it carries with it all kinds of marine life, affording breeding and feeding grounds for our best food fish. The berg danger period coincides with the heavy flow period of the Labrador current each year—that is, from March 1 to July 1. It is during this period that the cutters patrol the ice-endangered areas.

Two cutters are assigned to the ice patrol, with a third cutter held in reserve. The cutter on duty is a busy place every day. To carry out the orders, "to locate the icebergs and ice fields nearest the transatlantic ship lanes, and to determine the authority, easterly and westerly limits of the ice as it moves to the southward, and keep track of all ice seen or reported," is not an easy task.

The oceanographer's day begins before the break of dawn, because he must get his bearings for position if he is to make and check all during the day.

At six o'clock the first ice broadcast goes out to the ships with modern equipment: "Patrol vessel near two bergs—latitude, 42 degrees 30 minutes; longitude, 48 degrees 30 minutes; set and drift, 180 degrees twenty-fourth of a knot per hour; foggy, smooth sea." Added to this will be the position of perhaps twenty other bergs.

The set and drift data enable the ship navigators to know that the two bergs, which are the two southernmost, are coming south at the speed given.

The oceanographer notices, while plotting the water temperature, reports from ship that their present courses might carry them close to a number of dangerous bergs. An ice warning is immediately dispatched, which the vessels acknowledge with thanks. The vessels alter their courses to clear the ice.

On the great steamer lane between Europe and America liners, cargo carriers, and tramps pass constantly. It is an avenue of the sea just as much as Michigan boulevard or Fifth Avenue is a heavy traffic street. On what is known as the "westbound tracks," the ships coming from Europe, and on the "eastbound tracks," 60 miles south, are the ships going to Europe.

All vessels off the tracks are reported for violation of the rules. A vessel off the track is just as dangerous as an iceberg or a derelict. The ice patrol cutter stands as a traffic officer on this avenue of the sea. If the ice threatens blockage, the cutter sets the stop sign and turns the traffic into a "side street" detour to the south.

Three separate charts are plotted recording the ship's ice and water temperatures. The latter is very important, because by using from 900 to 1,300 messages in 15 days one can locate the "cold wall," the line of demarcation between the gulf stream water and the cold Labrador current water.

The Danger Line. This line is the danger line, because icebergs that are perils to shipping seldom cross it. The location of it at the beginning of the season is an index to the severity of conditions to be expected.

A berg that crosses the line commits quick suicide, for water at 55 to 60 degrees melts ice very rapidly. A big berg will disappear seven days after it crosses the line.

The cold wall is easy to see. North of it the ocean is a beautiful blue-green, south of it the water is indigo blue. The higher content of microscopic marine life gives the Labrador current its olive-green tone.

The prow of a cutter can be in green water of 40 degrees Fahrenheit, the stern in warm blue water, that registers 60 degrees. The crew may swim in tropical temperature water, while half a mile away to the north floats a large iceberg, drifting in cold water.

As a boat approaches a floating ice island a sizzling sound become audible. Close attention shows that this comes from small pieces of ice slipping off into the sea. Unlike ordinary ice lumps, the pieces are feverish. This is a peculiarity of glacial ice due, in all probability, to the fact that it is compacted of snow.

Thousands of Americans sailed to Europe last year. Few of them were aware, as they retired to their state-rooms at night, of what precautions were being taken for their safety. They did not know that the radio room on the upper deck of their ships, a message from the ice patrol was coming in, telling about fog and icebergs.

Nor did they realize that their liner was reporting a coast guard cutter drifting on the Grand Banks, so that officers on the cutter could check to learn if the liner's course was entirely clear of danger.

The Titanic catastrophe in April, 1912, shocked the entire world, and a universal demand for a patrol, gave birth to the International Ice Patrol. Immediately after the Titanic disaster the United States navy detailed two cruisers for guard duty until the last bergs disappeared from the steamer lanes in late June. In the spring of 1913 two revenue cutters were detailed to carry out the patrol.

During the fall of the same year the international conference for the safety of life at sea was convened at London, to organize this patrol on an international basis, in recognition of its services to ships of all nations. Representatives of the principal maritime nations of the world signed the agreement on January 30, 1914, creating the International Derelict Destruction, Ice Observation, and Ice Patrol service.

The United States was asked to undertake the management of this service. This country agreed to send two vessels which would patrol the danger area during the iceberg season. Each of the contracting parties consented to bear a share of the cost in proportion to its shipping tonnage. The United States coast guard is charged with the duty of maintaining the patrol. Therefore, when the cutters sail for the Banks' ice guard every March, they go in the name of Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Germany, Great Britain, Italy, Netherlands, Norway, Sweden and the United States, but serve the shipping interests of the entire world.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago (©, 1932, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for May 15

JACOB AT BETHEL

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 28:10-17.

GOLDEN TEXT—And, behold, I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest, and will bring thee again into this land; for I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of. PRIMARY TOPIC—Finding God in a Strange Place.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jacob Makes a Great Discovery. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Jacob Learned at Bethel. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Face to Face With God.

1. Jacob's Flight (v. 10). 2. The occasion (27:34-40). Jacob had by deceit and trickery secured Isaac's blessing. Because of this, Esau determined to kill Jacob as soon as his father was dead. When Rebekah realized that Esau's anger was hot against Jacob, even to the point where he was likely to kill him, she urged him to flee to her brother Laban. Rebekah had a mixed motive. She not only realized that remaining at home meant death, but she realized that if Jacob remained in that land, he would likely marry a heathen woman and thus defeat God's purpose regarding the covenant nation. This latter she pressed upon Isaac as a motive for sending Jacob away. Isaac at once recognized the wisdom of her suggestion. Isaac, alive to Jacob's destiny, issued his command as to marriage and bestowed upon him the covenant blessing which had come from God Almighty to Abraham (Gen. 17:1). This covenant (Gen. 28:1-4) embraced:

a. A numerous offspring (v. 3). b. Possession of the promised land (v. 4). c. Everything included in the Abrahamic Covenant (v. 4).

2. The Journey (v. 10). He went toward Haran. He was fleeing from an outraged brother in order to save his own life.

a. Be sure your sin will find you out. Jacob deceived his father. He, in turn, was deceived by his children.

b. Wrong home life has its perils. Isaac knew that the blessing was to have the place of pre-eminence. He was willing for the sake of a little venison to give to Esau that which God had planned for Jacob.

3. Jacob's Vision (vv. 11-15). A big berg was peculiarly tested. He had to leave home and mother. On the way to Haran night overtook him and he was obliged to sleep in a field with a stone for his pillow and the canopy of heaven for a covering. It was under such circumstances that the Lord gave him the wonderful vision at Bethel.

1. He saw a ladder reaching from earth to heaven (v. 12). This suggests a means of communication between earth and heaven, between man and God. It showed Jacob that in spite of his awful sin there was a way to heaven for him. Jesus Christ is the ladder connecting earth and heaven for us (John 1:51; 14:6; Heb. 10:19, 20).

2. He saw angels of God upon the ladder (v. 12). They were ascending and descending upon this ladder. These angels were the divine helpers to render needed assistance along life's way (Heb. 1:14). Though unseen, God's angels guide and protect us on our earthly pilgrimage.

3. He saw the Lord standing above the ladder (v. 13-17). To show Jacob that the ladder did not merely reach into space, the personal God appeared and talked with him.

a. He declared that he was the God of Abraham and Isaac (v. 13), thus assuring Jacob that the same hand that guided his fathers was over him.

b. He renewed the covenant as to the land (v. 13). Though Jacob was now fleeing from the land, and yet he would return and his seed should yet possess it.

c. He assured him of numerous seed (v. 14). His descendants would spread abroad—north, south, east, west.

d. The divine presence to be with Jacob (v. 15). God promised not to leave him till the covenant promise should be fulfilled.

4. Jacob's Vow (vv. 16-22). God's gracious visitation provoked Jacob to make a vow. He set up as a monument the stone which he had had for a pillow. He named the place "Bethel," which means "the house of God." His vow included:

1. The dedication of himself to God (v. 21).

2. The establishment of worship (vv. 18, 19). He declared that this stone should be God's house.

3. The consecration of his possessions (v. 22). He obligated himself to give back to God one-tenth of all that was given him.

Razing of Babylon Not Completed by Darius

Babylon was never entirely destroyed after the time of the conquest by Darius, described in the Book of Daniel. That conquest took place in the year 521 B. C., but except that part of the walls was razed during a rebellion in 514, Darius did not destroy systematically. His son, Xerxes, destroyed part of the great temple of Bel, or Bael, called E-Sagilla, which was also a fortress. The religion of Darius, however, was monotheistic zoroastrianism and because of this many temples fell into disrepair. About 330 B. C. a dynasty arose called the Seleucids, founded by a general of Alexander the Great. He conquered Babylon in 323. When the Seleucids founded the new capital Seleucia near Babylon they used the ancient city as a quarry and there is record that in 275 B. C. all the inhabitants of Babylon were transported to the new town, though it is known that religious services were still held in the old temple of Bel a century later.—Montreal Family Herald.

Gavel Constructed of Wood Oddly Preserved

A gavel made from what is believed to be the oldest living unperturbed wood on the American continent has been sent to Dr. Walter Williams, president of the University of Missouri. The history of the gavel goes back to a time some thousands of years ago when a volcano burst forth at a place about 100 miles east of Eugene, Ore., and in the high Cascades. A lava stream gradually built up a dam at one end and a deep canyon, in the bottom of which grew tall Douglas firs. As the canyon filled with the cold mountain water a lake was formed, and the trees were surrounded and covered by this water of unchanging temperature. When the wood was cut from one of the trees for the gavel it was found to contain all its natural juices and had the pungent odor of freshly cut timber.—Montreal Herald.

Pilot Sings; Order Comes "Pipe Down"

Plane Broadcasts Entertain Short Wave Radio Owners.

Chicago.—Owners of short wave radio sets who have heard amusing things going on in the ether during the early hours of the morning are to have much of their enjoyment curtailed as airline officials have instructed their pilots to confine their broadcasting to routine matters. During the still night/lonely air mail pilots, flying high above an almost invisible earth, have no company, but the microphones of their two way radio telephone sets, and they have been wont to drift into song or carry on conversations with other pilots flying miles away.

Heber Miller, who flies between Seattle and Medford, Ore., tried his voice on "Life Is Just a Bowl of Cherries" recently at 2 a. m. one clear night. He got a stack of fan mail the following night that would have been envied by a professional crooner.

Al Gibbousen and Ralph Yrden, talking over the "good old days" one early morning while flying miles apart along the west coast, learned later that apparently most of the Pacific coast had been listening to their reminiscences, and so the orders to "pipe down" have gone out. Many interesting stories, however, are told of some of the broadcasts.

One mail pilot, for instance, got voiced with threatening weather one early morning and spoke about it in no uncertain terms. Too late he realized that his microphone had been switched on, and his remarks, intended only for a dark cloud bank, had been carried far and wide. He did the only thing he could think of—broadcasted a rather profuse apology, and then he lapsed into a silence that he now breaks only for the short cryptical reports the pilots make every 20 minutes to ground stations along their routes.

"Gosh, wouldn't a good stiff drink of whisky be swell on a morning like this?" was the contribution of another, unknown pilot to the lore of early morning reflection. As a rule, these remarks are noted for their scarcity.

An interesting phenomenon that arises to disturb the radio reports of the pilots is "skip distance," a peculiarity of short wave sets. The pilot of a night mail plane flying from New York to Chicago recently found that the ground station at Chicago airport could not hear his calls, while the station at Fort Worth, 1,600 miles away, reported fine reception. His message and the answer were relayed through the Fort Worth station.

Another pilot flying over Redding, Calif., was heard at Des Moines, Iowa, while his dispatcher at Oakland, only 300 miles away, could not hear him at all. Provision is made to counteract these reporting conditions by having the reporting pilots covered not only by their home station but by all other stations, which are situated at intervals of 250 miles along the airways. Thus, when a pilot is not heard by his dispatching station, the message is relayed to that station by a distant station that has heard it distinctly. The answer flies back via the relay.

Died "Pauper"; Her Will Bares $30,000 Bequest

Los Angeles, Calif.—The will of Villa Kaufman, seventy, who died an apparent pauper in Memphis, Tenn., a month ago, was admitted to probate here.

Mrs. Kaufman bequeathed $30,000 to the national committee of federal legislation for birth control, and directed that only $100 be spent for her funeral, at which she asked that there be "no music, no flowers and no clergyman."

King Tut-Ankh-Amen Is Now Accused of Thievery

Tomb Treasures Stolen From His Predecessor.

London.—King Tut-Ankh-Amen's splendid golden treasures, which astonished the world when they were discovered, by Lord Carnarvon and Howard Carter in 1922, were mostly second hand, according to J. D. S. Pendlebury of the Egyptian Exploration society.

As a result of his investigations, Pendlebury claims that most of the rich jewels and trappings of state in King Tut's tomb were really the property of King Smerkh-ka-Ra, whose tomb King Tut raided, appropriating the treasures for his own funeral palace.

The theory is based on the recent discovery that the mummy thought to have been that of King Akhenaten III, was really the mummy of some body else. When this was discovered, the Egyptian government called in Pendlebury to solve the mystery. He found that the mummy in question was really that of Akhenaten's son-in-law, Smerkh-ka-Ra.

"What I discovered," declared Pendlebury, "was that after the heretic Akhenaten died the population of Amarna rose up and cursed his memory and cursed as well the worship of the sun's disk, which he had founded. They smashed everything possible in the tomb, defaced all the monuments by hacking out the king's name.

"Amarna was then deserted after a life of only 20 years, and the people returned to the old gods. Thebes became once more the Egyptian capital.

"Smerkh-ka-Ra, who married the eldest daughter of Akhenaten, may have ruled with him, or he may have succeeded; we are not quite sure. However, he died at Thebes and was buried with magnificent splendor.

"When Tut-Ankh-Amen, his brother-in-law, succeeded to the throne he desecrated the tomb and acquired all the treasure buried with the last king. All the magnificent funeral furniture was 'done up' and placed in his own tomb in the valley of the kings.

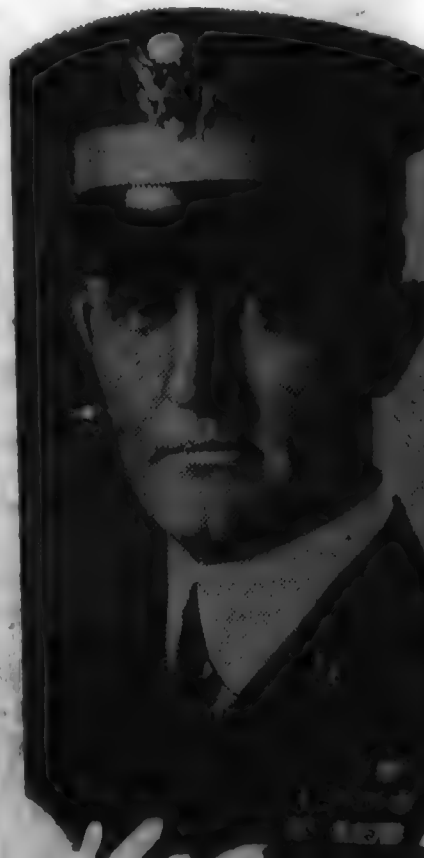

"The body was not destroyed, however, and it is Smerkh-ka-Ra who is now in Cairo museum labeled at Akhenaten."

Rare Northern Bird Is Found in Oregon State

Portland, Ore.—One of the rarest birds of the north, an emperor, or painted goose, third of its kind ever to be seen as far south as Oregon, drifted ashore dead here recently.

The specimen, an adult in fine plumage, is the most beautiful of wild geese. The head, neck and tail are ivory white, the upper parts are a very bluish-gray with lavender tinting and sharply defined marks. Its feet are orange-yellow and the bill is a livid flesh color.

several days later, his general progress toward recovery is reported "most satisfactory." The operation is considered a distinct contribution to surgery.

Fussy Proves Help to Electrician in Wiring

Kingston, N. C.—Paul Long, an electrician, recommends that every electrician carry a cat.

Long had to run a cable through a small space between the roof and ceiling of a house for a distance of 80 feet. He tied a string to the cat's tail, shoved it in one end, and closed the opening. He opened the other end, and in a few minutes the cat came out with the string. He pulled the cable through.

Harvard University Has a Varied Student Body

Cambridge, Mass.—The Harvard university student body is composed of students from the 48 states of the Union and 46 foreign countries, recent statistics show.

Canada with 99 students and China with 40 students are the best represented of the foreign countries. Men from such far-off lands as Abyssinia, Persia, Palestine, Syria, and the Virgin Islands are enrolled.

Girl's Head Used as Tee by Golf Player

London.—In a freak golf match at a golf club in Surrey, England, a girl's forehead provided the tee for a young professional, George Ashdown, and a less skillful player, C. Mansell.

One of the conditions of the match was that Ashdown should tee up at every hole on the girl's forehead.—Miss Ena Shaw, a young London nurse, agreed to be the "tee." At every hole a tee peg was fastened to her forehead by an elastic band. She reclined on the ground and did not appear to be in the least nervous.

The professional, conceding one stroke at each hole to Mansell, made some remarkable shots from the unusual tee and won the match in seven up and five to play.

Asbestos Has New Use

Wenatchee, Wash.—Asbestos fiber found under fingernails of Ted McClure, twenty-nine years old, led to his arrest on a charge of safe robbery here. The safe of an auto freight depot was robbed of $40 and McClure was suspected. It was lined with asbestos.

Patient's Own Blood Is Used for Transfusion

Pittsburgh, Pa.—One of the rare instances of successful autotransfusion of blood is attracting attention here. The operation was performed at the Homeopathic hospital by Dr. Frederick S. Morris.

Russell M. Evans, Jr., a fifteen-year-old high school student, was injured in a coasting accident. X-ray examination showed that he had suffered a ruptured spleen, with an internal hemorrhage resulting. The anesthetic relaxed the lad's muscles, allowing the blood to flow into the abdominal cavity. Even the latty scarcely needs to be reminded that this was the most critical stage. With such a large loss of blood in his weakened condition, the boy's life wavered in the balance.

Dr. Morris, quickly transferred the blood from the abdominal cavity, filtered it and placed it in a glass container surrounded by hot-water bottles to restore it to body temperature. Then, with the surgeon working at top speed, the youth's own blood was injected into his body through a vein in his left arm. Next the ruptured spleen was removed.

When the boy left the operating table his pulse and blood pressure were declared normal, and at this writing,

DAIRY FACTS

REASONS FOR "OFF" FLAVORS IN MILK

Charged to Undue Amount of Chemical Ferment.

Unusual "off" flavors and odors in their milk have been troubling several New Hampshire dairymen recently. According to examination of samples by J. M. Fuller, professor of dairy husbandry, University of New Hampshire, the milk contains an excessive amount of a chemical ferment known as an enzyme.

The remedy is to feed a laxative roughage such as silage or soaked beef pulp and give two or three doses of Epsom salts to the "guilty" cows. Reducing the amount of grain may also help, he says. The enzyme can be destroyed by boiling the milk as soon as possible after milking.

Perhaps the best way to discover which cows are responsible is to take about a pint of milk from each animal, place it in individual clean jars, and keep it in a warm room at about 70 degrees temperature for a least 24 hours. Examination of each sample at the end of this period should indicate the cows that are producing the troublesome product.

Examination of samples indicates that the abnormal flavor and odor were not due to ordinary souring. As a rule the trouble has occurred in small herds of five or six cows. Certain cows, usually well advanced in lactation and due to calve soon, are to blame.

In some instances a cow may give milk containing an abnormal amount of ash or minerals, with a resulting bitter taste. In most cases, however, the abnormal flavor and odor are due to an excessive amount of the enzyme, lipase, in the milk. A small quantity of this is found in normal milk—American Agriculturist.

Hard to Explain Reason for Variation in Gains

It has been experimentally demonstrated that dairy heifers liberally fed during the winter, making gains considerably above normal, will make gains considerably below normal the following summer on grass. Why this is so no one seems to have given a satisfactory explanation.

This fact was clearly demonstrated by the results of feeding trials reported recently by the West Virginia station. In four comparisons of three groups of heifers (one group for two pasture seasons) that were self-fed grain, and given free access to roughage, the average winter gain was 316.5 lbs. per head, whereas the summer heifers gained only 85.2 lbs. per head on pasture. No grain was fed on pasture.

Similar heifers hand-fed averaged 152.4 lbs. per head for the winter feeding periods and 190 lbs. per head during the pasture season. No grain was fed on pasture.

Beet Pulp for Dairy Cows

Most dairymen think it is necessary or at least desirable to soak beet pulp before feeding it to cows. Investigators at the United States dairy experiment station at Beltsville, Md., found that dry beet pulp gave as good results as the soaked beet pulp. In the experiment the cows were watered twice a day. The beet pulp when fed either wet or dry was mixed with the grain ration. The ration containing the dry beet pulp was fully as palatable as that containing the wet pulp. The cows when fed the dry pulp ate as much hay and gave as much milk as when fed the wet pulp. The gains in weight were a little greater when the cows received the wet pulp than when they were fed dry pulp.

Wheat Excellent Feed

Extensive experience of practical dairymen, and careful tests at several of the leading experiment stations indicate that wheat makes a satisfactory substitute for corn in a grain mixture for dairy cows. At present prices the cost of the cow's grain feed can be reduced by making the substitution. Wheat and corn have substantially the same feeding value ton for ton.—Southern Agriculturist.

DAIRY HINTS

If your creamery isn't what it ought to be, investigate yourself first, and see if you are giving it the right support, the kind it deserves.

The winter season calls for good care and feeding of the dairy cows. Careful attention should be given to proper balancing of rations, to the water supply, and the general cow comfort. Profit dollars increase with attention to details.

James Stark's 20-cow herd of Holsteins ranks first in New York state and second in the United States in the Holstein herd test. The herd averaged under ordinary conditions, 548 pounds of fat to the cow.

The typical New York state cow gives about 5,000 pounds of milk a year. The herds in dairy herd improvement associations averaged 8,047 pounds to the cow last year. Economists say a cow must give at least 7,000 pounds of milk to pay profits.

JUNIOR-SENIOR RECEPTION

The basement of the Lutheran Church was transformed into a banquet hall last Saturday night when the eighteen seniors of St. Joe High School were honored at a reception given them by the juniors.

Long tables were lovely, dressed in red and white, the senior class colors. Each place held a red and white program and place card, an American Beauty rose, and a favor in the form of a tiny China doll. Red and white crepe paper roses held mints at each place. Other decorations in the hall consisted of bright colored balloons and red and white crepe paper festoons.

A delicious three course dinner was served, after which Mr. Noffsinger, as toastmaster, took charge of the program. The first two responses were given by the two class presidents, Milton Garrison and Gladys Dressel. Lucille Smith responded with a vocal solo, after which Mr. Stallman gave a brief, but inspiring talk on "Individuality." Dorothy Wasson gave the class prophecy, which took the form of a letter from herself to Mr. Maxwell some years hence. Helen Washler and Jean Goodwin entertained next with "Rhapsody on the Piano." Mr. Shull gave a little talk on our schools, past and present, and the program closed with the reading of the class will, by Margaret Hamilton.

Others present, besides members of the junior and senior classes, and their teachers, were

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Stallman, Mr. and Mrs. O. K. Shull, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Curie, Mrs. Willis Cox, Miss Helen Washler and Miss Jean Goodwin.

ENUMERATION SHOWS INCREASE FOR 1932

The 1932 school enumeration compiled by Carl F. Stallman, county superintendent of schools, shows an increase in DeKalb county over a year ago. The gain is one hundred and twenty-nine.

The report this year gives a total of 6,830 as compared with 6,701 last year, consisting of 3,549 males, 3,283 females 8 colored males and 10 colored females.

The total number attending school is 5,760, the regularly employed number 527 and those unemployed 543.

The enumeration by townships, towns and cities follows:

	Boys	Girls

W. S. PULLEN OF PEACH CREST FARM IS MARRIED

Mr. Walter S. Pullen and Mrs. Mary McCormick were married at St. John's Episcopal Church in Milwaukee Wednesday, May 18.

Mr. Pullen is known as the developer of Peach Crest near Camden and has recently developed one hundred acres of peach and apple orchards near Jonesville and Somerset Center, all in Hilldale county, known as Flavor Fruit Acres.

Mrs. McCormick is a registered nurse and for many years head nurse in West Side Hospital, Chicago.

They will make their home on the Somerset Center Farm on U. S. 127 near Junction 112 where their friends will be made welcome.

Miss Martha Miser, of Garrett, was in St. Joe Tuesday.

Miss Ruth Grove was a Sunday dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Hull.

Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Bowman were at Cold Springs Saturday and Sunday and are now all ready for summer weather.

Grant Baltz and family moved Thursday from St. Joe, to the Baltz farm, which he has purchased from the heirs.

Master Maurice Woodcox fell from a tree last week and broke his ankle, so that the bone pierced the skin. He is getting along fine.

The W. P. Donahue family, of Kimmell moved into the Currie home the first of the week. Mr. Donahue will work at the HK Tower taking the truck of Walter Gruenbeck.

The Angola Brick & Tile Co., secured the building contract of the St. Joe Filling Station for their new building and the concrete wall is in ready for the structure. The building is a much needed addition to their growing business.

A RE-NEWED COMMUNITY PRIDE HAS COME

All of the folks living along Road Number One, should take a very special pride in keeping things cleaned up in "apple-pie" order. It will not be long until traffic will begin to use this road, and the better "imprint" you can make on the public, passing in their cars, the better estimation you will have made of our community. Little did the general public think 10 years ago that a state highway would pass through our community, but by the foresightedness of some, it has come to pass, and we are all rejoicing in the success of the effort of those men.

It is a source of pleasure to see a renewed pride in our farm homes along the highway, and then in order to link up each farm home, the state maintenance forces of the state highway department, in addition to the regular upkeep of the highways under their jurisdiction, also are engaged in what is known as the general spring clean-up of roadsides.

Dead grass is burned, side ditches opened for better drainage and many thousands of yards of gravel and stone are being applied on the berms of the paved roads and for new surface coating of unpaved highways. Part of this form of maintenance likewise includes painting signs and replacements where they have been destroyed or damaged and the building and painting of many miles of guard rails. Indiana is known nationally not alone for its superior road surfaces, but for the splendid signs, warning and information signs and the upkeep of detour roads necessitated when the regular routes are closed for paving.

In fact hardly a week passes but the department receives letters from all over the state commending the splendid work in progress. Let it not be said of the folks along our road, that they use the highway for dumping of trash, but that each one will take a special pride in seeing how free from rubbish it can be kept.

Will B. Gutelius, age 60, executive vice president of the Citizens Trust company, Fort Wayne, shot himself to death Monday afternoon. Gutelius went to the furnace room of the bank and ended his life without revealing a motive for his act. Tumor on the brain is attributed as the cause for his act.

At the Wabash crossing on State Road No. 8, three miles north of town, a siding has been constructed to accommodate the unloading of materials for the improving of Roads No. 8 and 1. Already the road is being surfaced with materials preparatory to applying of black top applications. The improvements will be welcome indeed to the community and especially to those along the road.

Mrs. Carrie Harman, 61, mother of W. G. Harman, of St. Joe, died Monday afternoon at the home of her son, Eugene at Avilla. She was the widow of Fred Harman and is survived by five children. The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock from the South Scott Church near Angola. Mrs. Harman has been in poor health for some time. As a resident of St. Joe she made a great many friends.

600,000 Wall Eye baby fish were planted in the local streams Monday by the local Fish and Game club, through the co-operation of the Isaac Walton League, of which L. H. ## ST. JOE OBJECTS TO CLOSING (OF B. & O. STATION)

Hearing is Held on Railroad's Petition

Business men of St. Joe offered resistance Thursday to the petition of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. for authority to abandon its station here.

A hearing was conducted at the court house by L. C. Phillips, an examiner for the Indiana Public Service commission. The petitioner was represented by J. E. Fahy of Garrett, Chicago division superintendent, and Ralph G. Crow, relief agent. Attorney H. C. Springer of Butler, is counsel for the town board, of which Fred B. Leighty is president. F. F. Cowley, vice president of the Order of Railway Telegraphers, also was present and participated in the hearing. At the close, Mr. Phillips stated, that the commission would probably be ready to report its decision in two or three weeks.

St. Joe is an incorporated town of about 400 population and it was estimated by witnesses that many people residing in the rural districts were served by the railroad there. The business interests of the town include an elevator, a bulk gasoline and oil station, a pickle packing plant and nine retail merchants. The Leighty orchard is also a customer. The railroad's station agent is L. D. Young and he is on duty during the daytime. No telegraph office is maintained in the town.

One mile distant from St. Joe is an intersection of the Baltimore & Ohio and the Wabash railroads. Telegraph operators and levermen are on duty in the tower. The distance from St. Joe to Hicksville, the first Baltimore & Ohio station east, is eight miles by rail and the distance to Auburn Junction, the first station west, is ten miles.

Methods Proposed

The Baltimore & Ohio contends it could handle its business at St. Joe expeditiously and without inconvenience to the public if no agency were maintained there. Shippers could telephone to the tower with requests for service, it was stated, and bills of lading for outgoing shipments would be forwarded from the next station. The station doors would be left unlocked and shippers could deliver less than carload shipments to the station at the approximate time of the arrival of the local freight trains, which stop at St. Joe on alternate days. However, the railroad would provide no protection from thefts at the station. Notice by telephone or mail would be given of the arrival of inbound shipments.

The railroad set out that receipts at the station had been reduced from about $17,000 for each of the two previous years to $11,636 for the fiscal year ending November 30, 1931. The pay of the agent has been about $1,600 a year and the total expense of the station $1,650 a year.

After Mr. Crow had testified to these figures, he was cross-examined by Attorney Springer. He was asked if it were not a fact that the business of the company at St. Joe in proportion to the size of the town is as large as other stations, but Mr. Crow was unable to say. It was brought out that the Leighty orchard shipped 25 cars of apples last year, 8 cars in 1930 and 2 in 1929. Mr. Springer inquired also if it were not true that the sale of passenger tickets at the station had been reduced chiefly because of the curtailment of train service and the fact that passengers boarding trains at the station pay cash fares, but Mr. Crow did not think this was a large item. He was asked if the station had been operated at a profit or loss, but he did not know. Mr. Fahy said it was not a question as to the profit of the individual station, but a desire to serve the people satisfactorily and at the same time to reduce the overhead expense of the railroad.

Comment by Examiner
"The amount of the revenue is of only secondary interest to the commission," the examiner commented. "This goes only to show the extent to which the public uses the station. The question here is the degree of convenience and necessity."
An inquiry by Mr. Crowley elicited from Mr. Crow the information that the operators in the tower are not provided with tariffs or rulings for the handling of shipments, but that these may be obtained by the operators by wire from the division freight office.

Ben Levy of Fort Wayne, who owns the coal, grain and lumber business at St. Joe, testified that his business with the company in and out of St. Joe last year amounted to about 50 carloads, which was less than in previous years. He said the proposed change would be a great inconvenience to him, particularly delays in the forwarding of bills of lading to buyers.

E. R. Kinsey, who has a hardware, furniture and undertaking business in the town, declared the change proposed would inconvenience him greatly and add to his expense. Mr. Leighty said he had talked to many patrons of the railroad and they were all opposed to any change. A remonstrance from citizens of the community was introduced into the record.

Mr. Crowley made a statement in which he said the railroads had agreed when wages were reduced 10 per cent last February 1 to stabilize employment as much as possible and that the dismissal of the agent at St. Joe would be serious under the present conditions. Mr. Crowley insisted that the evidence submitted by the railroad had not shown the necessity of closing the station.

Mr. Fahy closed the hearing with a reference to reports showing the revenues at the station have been declining so far this year. This was to counter the evidence of the reduction of expense by the lowering of wages.

Mr. Fahy revealed a suggestion that half-time service be provided at the station, but he said he understood this would be prohibited by the company's contracts with the labor unions.

MEAT MARKET CLOSED DOORS MONDAY

The Harman meat market closed Monday indefinitely, due to lack of trade, feeling that the expense of refrigeration would not be justified by the few sales.

We are sorry that conditions are such that Mr. Harman cannot see his way clear to continue. The loss of any business to a small town is felt greatly.

Charles Cochran has taken over the restaurant building and moved in last week.

State men were stationed on Road 1 east of town last week checking the traffic.

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Yeiser and daughter, of Kendallville, were Sunday guests in the D. W. Yeiser home.

Corunna suffered a $3,000 fire loss Friday night when the Poor barber shop burned, spreading to the Schlosser cream station, and Zonker's grocery and dry goods store. Four fire companies were present.

A home coming for Judge Dan Link was tendered him Tuesday evening by Auburn Masons, after an absence of a few years in Chicago. Mr. Link is a past master of DeKalb lodge and a thirty-third degree Mason.

Adrian Hankey, Edgerton, Ind., moved to St. Joe last week and has taken charge of the garage, operated by Day Bros., of Edgerton. Mr. Hankey has worked for eight years for the Edgerton firm and is reputed as being an experienced mechanic. His family occupy the Methodist parsonage property. We welcome the Hankey family to our city.

E. R. Kinsey and Roy Ridenbach, accompanied by their families, were at Blomington Sunday the guests of DuWayne Kinsey. They were persuaded to stay for the evening services at the First M. E. Church, where the Indiana University Men's Glee Club sang, and DuWayne being a member of the club, made the program more of an attraction to them. The musical part of the service was in five parts as follows: First, Alma Mater. Second, three songs of aspiration: Worship; Feasting; Watch; Judge Me, O God. Third, England and the Cavaliers: The Sword of Ferrara; The Bells of Shandon; Give a Rouse. Fourth, A Sea-chantey and two Negro Spirituals: Shenandoah; Didn't My Lord Deliver Daniel; Across the River. Fifth: Indiana.

Lights of New York

By WALTER TRUMBULL

Young Oliver La Farge, who wrote "Laughing Boy," is now in Guatemala, the country which has the parrot on its stamps. Mr. La Farge, on an expedition backed by Columbia University, is living in a wild little Indian village, studying the ancient ceremonials. He believes he is far enough away from civilization so that the Indian customs are still in their native state, uncolored by contact with the white man. His only outside companion is a western Indian, who has been with him in other places. He acts as a sort of liaison officer with these other redmen.

Since the pipe and tomahawk chiefs have disappeared from in front of tobacco stores, about the only Indians we have in New York are members of the Tammany wigwag. The original Tammany was an ancient and noted Delaware chief, and his name meant "The Affable." The first Tammany society was organized in Philadelphia in 1793. In 1796 Tammany was organized in New York as a national organization, with thirteen branches, by William Mooney, a veteran of the Revolution. Originally, it was a patriotic and charitable society, and the emblem of the New York branch was the eagle. All except the New York branch passed out of existence, and the Delaware branch, in passing, apparently bequeathed New York its emblem, which was the tiger. The New York branch seems to have decided that charity begins at home, and turned its hand to politics. The original Tammany was so good a man that he was supposed to associate with spirits. According to Judge Seabury, some of his namesakes still do.

It was about two o'clock in the morning when the prominent clubman, with his silk hat perched at a rakish angle, made his entrance. The only other inhabitant of the club at that hour fortunately happened to be one of his good friends. The newcomer announced he had just seen the most beautiful woman in the world. The friend demanded her whereabouts. "Well," said the first, "didn't exactly see her. Saw her photograph. Most beautiful woman in the world." "Don't believe it," said his friend. "Where's photograph?" "Come on. Show you," said the discoverer.

So they left the club, hailed a taxi, and drove to upper Fifth avenue, where there was a darkened photographer's window. There they left the car and insisted that the taxi driver also dismount. Wanted to show him the most beautiful woman in the world. They couldn't see anything through the glass, so the first man lit a match. The second man lit a match. The taxi driver lit a match. They all flattened their noses against the window.

Down the avenue a bit, the watchman from a detective agency saw the flickering lights. He approached rapidly, but cautiously. "What do you guys think you're doing?" he inquired. "Looking at most beautiful woman in the world," said the first and second prominent clubmen in chorus. "Gotta flashlight?" "The watchman had a flashlight. He threw it on the window. The first and second prominent clubmen, the taxi driver and the watchman looked at the picture of the most beautiful woman in the world.

A block away, a second watchman saw the beam from the flashlight and the group of figures. He came to investigate. He had a flashlight. In a moment, the first and second prominent clubmen, the taxi driver and the watchman were looking at the picture of the most beautiful woman in the world. Several blocks away, a policeman saw a flashlight. He watched it for a moment and saw two flashlights. He saw a parked taxi. Loosening his gun, he made for the scene. Well, he saw the picture of the most beautiful woman in the world.

And so it went. Demonstrating that there is no hour at which you cannot draw a crowd in New York.

"DOWN AT THE HEEL"

THIS phrase is too well known to require any extended explanation. It is heard, seen and used by all of us, and always as a reflection on one's personal appearance and as an implication of either carelessness or poverty.

It will interest many of us to know that as in the case of so many of the expressions current nowadays on our lips and in our literature, the author of this line is none other than William Shakespeare.

Its earliest recorded use is in his "King Lear, Act 2, Scene 2, published in 1608.

The train started away. The guards returned and lined up the prisoners for a count. Seventeen had boarded the freight and were gone.

After-dinner coffee (cafe noir) is prepared by using twice the measure of coffee, or half the amount of water. Serve in after-dinner cups (demi tasse) with or without sugar.

Cafe au Lait.—Prepare the coffee and scald the milk, using just as much boiling water as milk. Combine the two after the coffee is ready and serve in hot cups. This is a favorite breakfast coffee for the French nation. It is a most delightful way of serving coffee when cream is scarce.

Cocoa.—Mix four tablespoons each of sugar and cocoa and one-eighth teaspoonful of salt. Add three-fourths of a cupful of hot water, slowly stirring occasionally. Boil five minutes. Scald one quart of milk in a double boiler, add the cocoa mixture and beat two minutes with a wire egg beater. Add a pinch of cinnamon or a few drops of vanilla to flavor. Serve in tall cups with whipped cream or a marshmallow on top. Omit the vanilla if marshmallows are used.

Mint Punch.—Wash fresh mint, dry by shaking in a cloth. Pick off the leaves—there should be a quart. Put them into a pitcher and mash with a wooden pestle until soft. Add freshly boiled water to cover the leaves. Infuse ten minutes well covered, then strain, and when cool set into the refrigerator. When serving add two cupsful of grape juice and enough lemon juice to bring out the flavor. Sweeten with granulated sugar and stir until dissolved. Just before serving add a quart of ginger ale. Turn into glasses with chilled ice and serve.

Delicious Punch.—Prepare a sirup by boiling one cupful of sugar with one-half cupful of water until it spins a thread; pour over the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs, beat until fluffy, add one quart of English breakfast tea infusion that has been well chilled; add this mixture to one quart of ice cream flavored with lemon, mix carefully, turn into a freezer. Serve from a chilled punch bowl in tall thin glasses.

Happy Gimatin was a boy who liked tabofof and keycho, better than almost anything else in the world. His mother said he medards about it as well as played it. Which is probably true. He was out playing the first mentioned one mfanators, when the boys on the team decided it was time they elected a napaet. Happy had not the slightest idea which of the boys he would vote for, for he liked them all equally well. The boy chosen of course would have to be not necessarily the best repyal but rather the finest darele.

"Let's take the day off," suggested Happy, "and decide this thing lytrecafu." The boys all agreed that this was a wise thing to do. Each went his separate way home to derpno the subject thoroughly. ## THE STORY

By chance James Lee meets Lucy Gresham, daughter of Sir John Gresham, wealthy ship builder. Lee, unjustly accused of robbing the Gresham firm, was sent to prison. He blames Oliver Ames, Lucy's cousin, and Gresham's manager, and seeks revenge. Lee inherits wealth, and in compliance with the will, changes his name from Warrington. He secures an invitation to the girl's birthday party. Lucy is practically enraptured by Ames. She meets Lee, who makes love to her, planning thereby to hurt Gresham and Ames. With Gresham's approval, Lucy and Lee are married. Lee stuns the girl by telling her he does not love her, and hates her "whole breed." She hears the story of his wrongs, and his determination to be avenged. She believes in his innocence of the crime for which he was convicted.

CHAPTER IV—Continued

Everything she said was unexpected, and the unexpected is nearly always disconcerting.

"First of all, Jim," she said to tell a moment, "I want you to tell me all that you haven't yet told me. You owe me that, I think, and I believe you will have the justice to think so, too. What was your name when you were at Gresham's? I don't remember ever hearing father or Oliver speak of James Lee."

"Warrington, James Warrington," he said at once.

"Why did you change your name. Was it just so that father shouldn't know you when you . . ." She hesitated.

"Come out again?" he put in bluntly.

"No. It was because the cousin who left me his money made it a condition that I took his name, and his name happened to be Lee. And I happened to have plenty of use for several hundreds of thousands of pounds, and so I took it."

"I see. And will you tell me just how the disaster happened?"

Standing there, back against the door, he told it bitterly, with many a pause, unkind bit at her father, but that did not affect her. The main thing was that she must know everything. He told it all with the exception of one point. He doggedly refused to tell her whether he had been innocent or guilty. But she didn't need to be told that. She knew that he was innocent; just how, she couldn't have told, unless it was that his mad anger against the people who had made that three years of purgatory possible, could not have been so great, except for justice. . . .

"While I stood, threatened by the disgrace and the torture of prison, your father, dear him, went on crying. . . ." He finished violently. "He's one of the careless people; the careless people who have to be hurt. . . ." His voice fell abruptly to silence, which remained unbroken during several minutes. Then she said:

"Thank you for telling me everything, Jim. I think I see things rather more clearly now. And now, I'll state my terms."

He looked at her in blank astonishment.

"Your terms?" he echoed.

"You speak of my going back to my father. Now that would be to confess the utter failure of this marriage I have made. And, Jim, I am not used to confessing failure. I'm rather used, in my very small way, to succeeding in whatever I undertake. You'll laugh at this, perhaps. . . . but I do, usually, carry things through successfully. It's dead against something that was born in my nature, to knuckle down to failure."

There was a gleam of admiration in his sullen eyes as he looked at her. Then he said:

"You aren't going to leave me, then?"

"At least, I am not going to leave you yet. I may, later. I cannot be sure. But to go now, would be to go—crawling. And I . . . just can't." She drew a breath.

"We are at one there," he said quickly. "Failure is a word I've no use for. But can't you see that it suits me best that you should stay? It was just the thought that you would go back to your father and reveal to all the world who I am, that made me curse myself for telling you the truth last night. Not that it would alter my ultimate plans; but it would certainly make them harder to carry out."

"Yes, I do see that," she answered.

"And it may seem odd that I should . . ." She paused.

"Step into the hands of the enemy?" he suggested with an abrupt laugh.

A shade of pain passed over her face.

"If you are my enemy, Jim," she said in a low voice, "You have made yourself so. But perhaps your revengeful schemes will prove bigger than you can manage."

"They won't," he said sharply. "I've thought too carefully."

"I have thought, too." There was a touch of stubbornness in that that gave him the impulse to sting her.

"You can't win," he said bluntly. "There is too big a weakness on your side."

"And that is . . ." she asked, her eyes meeting his.

"Love." His look challenged her. She drew a breath, but met the look unflinchingly.

"The love I have had for you?" she said slowly.

"You say the love you have had. . . . You don't love me still, then?"

She colored hotly.

"Do you think love could outlive last night, Jim?" she asked quietly.

"No, I suppose not. Well, what do you feel for me?"

She looked at him steadily. "I don't quite know," she said slowly. "The man I knew and loved is—gone. You are strange to me, Jim. And rather—awful."

She caught a sharp breath.

"You said last night that you were not afraid of me," he said roughly.

"I'm not. Not in the least. What more have I to fear from you, Jim? I don't believe you would hurt me, physically; and you have hurt me all that is possible in every other way."

What more can you do?"

He came toward her quickly, an odd light in his eyes, and stretched out a hand toward her; but she stepped back from it, her face suddenly white; eyes wide.

"Don't touch me, Jim!" she said in a tone of almost fierce command.

He fell back from her, amazed again by the totally unexpected spirit of her.

"Yet you say you are going to stay with me," he cried after a moment.

"Because to go would be to confess my failure," she answered at once.

"And I am not ready to confess it yet. I'm all in the dark; can't see my way. But there is a faith deep within me that no matter how dark things seem, there is light ahead; always; inevitably; and somehow, sometime, I am going to find it. Meantime, I shall pretend to my father and to the world generally, that our marriage is a success. And, Jim, . . .—this very slowly—I shall expect you to keep up that pretense, too. You married me to suit your own convenience. Now you will please do this," she raised her blue eyes very straightly to him—"to suit mine. That's why I am not going to leave you, Jim; I'm going to stay with you, here, until the three weeks of our . . . honeymoon . . ."

—she said the word bravely—"are through. After that, it will all depend. One cannot plan too far ahead."

She stopped speaking, remained looking at him for a moment longer, then finished her roses and carried the silver bowl to a wide window.

Lee listened in astonishment. That little, childish thing should show so much spirit; so much determination; should be so definite and decided. Whatever he had expected as a result of his revelation to her last night, it certainly had not been this.

She turned and spoke from the window.

"Perhaps it is pride; vanity; something utterly weak and small that makes me do this, but those are my terms, Jim, and I shall expect you to help me to carry them out. . . ."

"Very well," he said, after a moment of thought. "As far as I am capable of giving such an impression, the world shall be given the impression that we are a blissfully happy couple. . . ."

He swung round, strode back to the door and went out. And as he went her voice followed him, saying quietly:

"Thank you, Jim."

• • • • •

A few days later, when they were out walking, he suddenly linked his arm through hers, and said close to her ear:

"See that man at the top of the lane? Well, he owns the place next to mine. It will look convincingly blissful, if we pass him arm-in-arm. . . ."

And another time, when he was going out by himself, he stooped and kissed her forehead, and when she raised her face, quickly, startled, to his, he said in a whisper:

"Mrs. Jobb is in sight. You imposed the terms, remember."

She did remember, and, in consequence, had nothing to say.

But when there was no one to show off to he seemed content to maintain a condition of neutrality. Armed neutrality, perhaps, but he did not make that too obvious. Sometimes, and it rather bewildered her, they seemed to be almost friends. At these times it was impossible to believe that he was plotting revenge against her and hers. Impulsively, one day, she spoke this thought to him, and he answered instantly.

"I'm not. I'm on a holiday. More, I'm on a honeymoon."

"So we can call a truce while this—honeymoon—lasts?" she asked.

"Yes; if you like to put it that way," he said. And that same day while they were riding together, he looked at her a great deal, and out of a long silence said suddenly:

"I'd like to ride as well as you do, Lucy."

"I've ridden all my life. More, I'm on a honeymoon."

Brides Yield to Lure of Lovely Lace

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WITH enchantment of springtime all about her, the bride of today must needs look her prettiest in order to tune in with the picture. In answering this challenge for trid artful of glamorous beauty, fashion turns to lovely lace as the happiest solution. Of course some brides are loath to depart from traditional satin, and so the mode enters into a compromise, announcing a fifty-fifty proposition of lace and satin for the smartest wedding gowns, or of all-lace if you really prefer.

Fortunately for brides and others who look their winsomest in lace, American lace-makers are producing replicas of antique designs and textures which are that authentic in motif and mesh as to defy experts, nor is the cost prohibitive.

As to the picture herewith "the bride wore" or is wearing a gorgeous gown of off-white satin handsomely garnished with durable lace in a helix pattern—a lace that would be priceless if it were as "down-through-the-family" as it looks.

The lace makes a bolero bodice, closely fitted with an under-bust waistline which is the very newest silhouette—infinitely flattering to good figures. There's a quaint pelm of lace, too, and you will please to note the pointed panels of matching lace which are so decorative on the skirt. The long, formal satin train also has a sumptuous lace border.

The court veil is arranged from the confines of a charming little point and lace Juliet cap that forms an alluring aura about the bride's perfectly coiffed head, setting off to perfect.

Next day they went up to town. While they had been in the country, St. Abb had been busy getting the flat ready for its new mistress, and they found it in apple-pie order. Lucy found it a little difficult to seem genuinely hearty in her approval of what he had done. This was the home that she had imagined was going to be a paradise of love, and her heart ached as she thought of how tragically differently things had turned out. But she played her part pluckily and well, and St. Abb didn't guess what it cost her.

As soon as they came to town, Lee became immersed in business which kept him either busy in his study with St. Abb, or else took him out, so that Lucy saw very little of him.

One of the first things to happen as soon as they were fairly settled, was that people began to call. Lady Cordelia was the first. To all appearances, Lucy was radiantly happy. Even Lady Cordelia's eagle eye could detect nothing wrong. It was less easy to pretend to her father, when he came to see her the first time. His adoring eyes were so very searching. Lucy felt that the miserable truth must be as obvious to him as if it were written in letters of flame around her head. But it wasn't. He was predisposed to think her happy, and put her nervousness down to natural shyness.

"Oliver's back," he told her. "He came to see me and then went straight to Gresham's. . . . I don't fancy he'll call yet awhile. . . . He's pretty hard hit, darling. . . ."

"I'm afraid so, dad. . . . He doesn't take things easily. . . ." she answered. "But . . . I couldn't help it. . . ."

"No," he smiled; and then: "My girl happy?"

Lucy felt the pressure of tears in her throat, but she answered with a gallant little smile:

"What do you think?" And the old man was content. She even managed to steer the conversation round to Gresham's, and from there on to the story of the man who had been imprisoned for robbery with violence, and talked of it without a tremor. He wanted to hear just exactly what her father had said to her part in it, and when he had told all that he knew of the affair, she sat silent for a long time.

"We went on that cruise," she said slowly. "We went on that cruise while he . . . that man . . . went to prison. . . . Daddy, why didn't you see him when he asked you to?"

Coburn's Corners

Mr. Chas. Curie is on the sick list.

Walter Coburn gave his first sermon as pastor of this church, Sunday, May 15th.

Mr. and Mrs. George Millman, of St. Joe were visitors at Sunday School and church, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. LaVon Murphy, who have been making their home with Mr. and Mrs. Claude Mason, have moved to Hicksville.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Laub were at the home of Mrs. Laub's father, Mr. Fred Blaker, of near Butler Sunday. Mr. Blaker is very sick.

Mrs. Fred Hart and son, Elwood attended the funeral of the former's brother-in-law, Mr. Richard Sommers at Fremont, Mich., Saturday. Mr. Sommers died very suddenly while on his way to work.

About twenty young people from the Hicksville M. E. Sunday School, accompanied by their superintendent, Mr. A. E. Hart, were given a hearty welcome when they came to Coburn's Corners last Sunday morning to attend Sunday School. The guests assisted in the program of the forenoon by rendering a piano solo, a reading, saxophone duet, and a chorus. Mr. Fred Hart, superintendent of the Coburn's Corners Sunday School, is very enthusiastic in his praise of the work of the young people from Hicksville and they will be made welcome at any time. The class teacher, Miss Bernice Sowers also accompanied them, Mr. Neff Culler bringing them in a school bus. The morning session was enjoyed by all.

CONCORD

The sheep shearing crews are busy around here these days.

Mrs. Sarah Widney and daughter, Miss Ida, are expected here the last of this month for a vacation of about three months.

THE PHYSICAL EFFECTS OF SMOKING

From Scoutmaster Manual)
This article by Dr. George J. Fisher and Elmer Berry, was published in 1917 by the Association Press, 347 Madison Ave., New York City.

It is a record of scientific experiments, some results of which are here summarized:
Smoking raises the heart rate and blood pressure and it impairs the neuro-muscular control both fine and gross. One cigar suffices to measurably produce the above effects. A cigarette inhaled is equal to one cigar in effect.

The Y. M. C. A. has prepared a valuable set of post-card size statements, which are here summarized:

1. Smoking Affects Endurance
One cigar or three cigarettes reduced the endurance of bicycle riders by 9% and increased heart beats 10 per minute.

2. Smoking Affects Control
One cigar produced an average loss of 12% in accuracy in pitching base ball. Two cigars made the percentage 14%. When not smoking the practice effects increased their accuracy 9%.

3. Smoking Affects Precision
Careful tests of athletes lunging at a target with a fencing foil paralleled the findings in No. 2.

4. Smoking Affects Marksmanship
One cigar reduced the rifle range score an average of 48%. Two cigars made 6% less. When not smoking the men gained 18.2% in their score.

These are typical of the effects of tobacco use as measured in various investigations.

The physical effects of alcohol should also be presented to the boy.

"I am the greatest criminal in history."
"I have killed more men than have fallen in all the wars of the world."

"I have turned men into brutes."
"I have made millions of homes unhappy."

"I have transformed many ambitious youths into hopeless parasites."
"I make smooth the downward path for countless millions."

"I destroy the weak and weaken the strong."
"I make the wise man a fool and trample the fool into his folly."

"I ensnare the innocent."
"The abandoned wife knows me, the hungry children know me."

"The parents whose child has bowed their gray heads in sorrow know me."

"I have ruined millions and shall try to ruin millions more."
"I am Alcohol."

ST. JOE ORGANIZES BALL CLUB

The has, will, woulds and could-been and have been, met at the town hall Monday eve for the purpose of counting crutches.

After two hours of accounting and counting it was discovered that there were plenty of ash crutches to step up and knock the thread out of the horse hide.

Anyway, there were eighteen players reported at the meeting Monday night. After a bit of retrospection the meeting got underway and the players unanimously chose: Walter Zonker, manager; Ed Storer, coach and assistant manager; Donald Kinsey, assistant coach; Frank Bechtel and Derwood Ridgway, umpires.

Mr. Zonker reports that there will be no charge of admittance this year but will fall back on the old, time honored, idea of passing the hat—(not passing the buck.)

The fact that there will be no charge at the gate does not mean that the teams playing here will be of lower calibre for Walt says we will see plenty of good teams in action this summer.

Mr. Storer is well pleased with the list of players reported to him and is confident of welding together a good team.

Practice nights are scheduled for Tuesdays and Thursdays at 6:00 C. S. T. The first practice is called for tonight (May 19) and a heavy workout Sunday afternoon.

The first game will be scheduled for May 29. In the meantime everyone is invited to attend practices and workouts. Watch for further announcements.

YOUNG PEOPLE TIE UP FOR LIFE

George E. Wade, 18, graduate of St. Joe High School last week, and Helen Storer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Storer, graduate of '31, were married at Angola last Friday.

After procuring their license at Auburn they went to Detroit in the evening to be guests of Albert Wade and family until Sunday evening, when they returned home.

They had planned to get married in Michigan, but the preacher told them they would have to go to Indiana because of the Indiana license. Of course this was their first experience in such matters, but they came back to Angola and were married then completed their journey to Detroit.

They are both mighty fine young people and have the best wishes of their many friends. George will work for Willard Hurni.

Concord Township Home Bureau was held at the home of Mrs. Anna Baker. After the opening song thirty members responded to roll call with Bible quotations. Mrs. Cora Curie gave a very interesting talk on the literature of the Bible. Mrs. Grace Sheffer, Mrs. Borthwick, Mrs. Foltz, Mrs. Wyatt and Mrs. Inez Hadsell gave short readings about different trees mentioned in the Bible. A paper, "Things we should know about the Bible," was led by Mrs. Arline Koch. Mrs. Grace Dilley gave a list of noted women. Mrs. Millie Shull named some of the Bible musical instruments, and Mrs. Daisy Keeler completed the afternoon's program by conducting a contest on "Well known Bible characters" in poetry form.

Mrs. Grace Sheffer, the project leader, gave a good demonstration on cutting princess slips, using a living model for the work.

The Junior Dramatic Co. gave the club nearly forty ($40) dollars this to be used for the benefit of Little Bobby Loucks, who is a patient at the Shrine hospital in Chicago, and the president of the club, Mrs. Gertrude Borthwick was chosen by ladies to sponsor his return home likely some time in June.

The guests were Mrs. Neva Hurni, Mrs. Gloy, Mrs. Jennie Andreas and Mrs. Elmer Keller, who gave two readings which were very much enjoyed by all.

The hostess assisted by the committee served refreshments, consisting of sandwiches, pickles, cake and coffee. The club adjourned to meet in June at Eckhart Park, when they will be hostess to the County Home Bureau.

SPENCERVILLE HIGH SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT

The twenty-sixth annual commencement program of the Spencerville High School was written into its history last week to one of the largest audiences ever attending a graduating service in Spencer township. At an early hour the house seating capacity of the Lutheran Church was taken up and seats from the Methodist Church and the town hall were brought into service to fill all available floor space, with many standing in the aisles and corridors.

The changed features of the program from that of recent years is said to be responsible for the large attendance. It has been customary in recent years to have some high powered speaker come in at the expense of the community and deliver an awe inspiring address while the graduated sit and listened complacently with the rest of the audience, but the committee thought that it would be better to return back to the old, and more sensible program, of building the entertainment and the oratory from the graduating class itself and the rest of the school.

This style of commencement is a direct way of bestowing on the graduating class the honor and confidence of the community and faculty when they delegate to them the opportunity of such an important exposition of their learned ability. In other words, the community is willing to believe that the graduating class is capable of a worthy performance at the close of this twelve years of their educational career.

The fine classical rendition of the program seemed to be a fulfillment of their motto, "No victory without labor," and their fine demonstration of their high school learning was depicted in their masterful execution of the musical numbers and the rest of the numbers on the program. The class seemed to say it with their motto reversed, "No labor without victory." Wit and logic was interwoven in the entertainment and the Spencerville orchestra, under the masterful direction of John McNabb, added to the artful and pleasantness of the evening's program.

One of the noteworthy features of this class, is the fact that Floyd Pfauher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Pfauher, rural, was the seventh member of the family to graduate from the Spencerville High School, three of which have gone to Wittenberg College at Springfield, O. Russell Pfauher, the youngest of the family will be the eighth. He will graduate in 1934.

There were twelve graduates, symbolical of the twelve months of the year and the twelve tribes of Israel. We feel sure that the lives of these twelve disciples of learning will also symbolize the twelve disciples by what they shall accomplish in their future careers. Seven and twelve are synonyms. Good luck to the class of 1932.

Mrs. Lucinda McClure and Mrs. Lillian Zimmerman and two children, Ellen and Melvin took Sunday dinner with Mr. and Mrs. James Moody at Spencerville.

Harley Likes and family moved from the Lizzie Millman property on East Main Street into the Lawson property. Mrs. Millman will move to town as soon as she can arrange affairs.

The fourteenth annual family reunion of the Widney family will be held this year at the B. E. Widney home north of St. Joe on Thursday, June 16th. Mrs. Mary Carpenter of St. Joe is secretary of the organization.

Mrs. Fanny Saylor and son, Fred have disposed of their filling station on Road 20, west of Angola, and are building a new station a half mile west of Ohio state line on Road 20. Walter Stewart expects to move them as soon as ready.

Free sight seeing trips any time over the Kees farm can be had by anyone. Of course Mr. Harry Kees is proud of his farm, and one would not think that cleaning up would make such an improved look on the farm, but it looks good and Harry sure has reason to be proud of it.

The line of march will, then form and march to the cemetery for decorating of graves and final service at the Soldiers monument.

The entire community is strongly urged to attend all of these services. Let's make Decoration Day the day it used to be, a day of reverence and remembrance of those who fought that our country might live.

Remember, all you ex-service men we're counting on all of you to be in that line of march. The local firing squad will make the rounds in the forenoon and also be on hand in the afternoon. We're expecting a large number of children, besides the lodges, clubs, etc., to take part in the parade.

Now, all you people living in the community, and those of you who formerly lived here, come out Decoration Day to the services, and make May 30th this year a real Memorial Day in St. Joe.

The program is timed on Central Daylight Savings Time.

BAND CONCERTS

Solicitors are canvassing the business men this week in regard to their support of band concerts for the summer season.

Every town should have a band and support it. Good music is an inspiration and young people who devote their time and talent to music are not going to get into mischief while they are interested in any vocation so wholesome to their minds as a musical career of varying degrees. Support the home town band and the home town band will boost for you.

The Community Welfare band, under the direction of Donald Kinsey, gave some splendid concerts last year and Willard Hurni has taken the responsibility of soliciting the funds for this year. Perhaps notice can be given next week as to when the concerts will start.

There will be an ice cream social held on the Lutheran Church lawn Saturday eve, May 28th. Home made ice cream, sherbet, cake and coffee will be served. Special music by high school band. 211.

At the County Home Bureau meeting last week in the court house assembly room, the roll call was answered by fifteen clubs. There was a report on club scoring. Remarks on club reports and other subjects of interest to clubs. Miss Martin then gave some demonstrations on cutting slip patterns and led in the discussion of color charts and personal color schemes. During April twenty Home Bureau meetings were held over the county with an attendance of four hundred and ninety-nine. There were sixty-six reached outside the meetings. Twenty-seven people used the color suggestions.

Resistance to the application of the state banking department for a receivership for the Peoples Savings & Loan Association of DeKalb county developed when the time of hearing arrived in the DeKalb circuit court Friday morning. The association contends that it is solvent and that there is no immediate danger in its stockholders losing. The loan association made long time loans on property and many of the best farm folks in DeKalb county are stockholders. Attorney Maurice McClew of Angola has been appointed as special judge to hear the evidence continued until May 28. They hope to defeat the receivership proceedings, and to continue the business.

LOCAL COMMENCEMENT SERVICES HELD.

Last Wednesday evening, May 18, graduation exercises for the St. Joe High School seniors was held at the school auditorium. The stage was decorated in red and white, the senior class colors.

The program included the invocation by Rev. V. O. Harrold, three musical numbers by the Community Mens' Chorus, the address by Rev. S. E. Brewster, of Hicksville, presentation of diplomas by County Superintendent Stallman, and the benediction by Rev. J. N. Scholes.

The following seniors received diplomas,

Gladys Dressel, Mona Traxler, June Ridgway, Margaret Hamilton, Malcolm Woodcox, Weldon May, Charles Coburn, George Wade, Alen Engle, Ellsworth Morr, Dale Walter, Everett Collins, Harley Likes, George Baron, Woodrow Kline, Carleton Wilmot, Ora Patten, Lloyd Bassett.

In addition to his diploma Malcolm Woodcox received the award for highest honors in scholarship.

ALUMNI BANQUET

The closing event of the school year was marked by the Alumni banquet Saturday night, and this year 18 members were added to the association by the 1932 class, the largest class in number of the school history.

The reception was informal and the program was made attractive by the music furnished by Butler young people comprising piano, violin, cello and flute. The very highest class of selections were played lending an air of dignity to the program. Introduction of former classes was in charge of Merritt Sechler; welcome by Cleota Morr; response, Gladys Dressel; a playlet entitled "When Martha and George Returned," by Martha Miser, Helen Dittmars, Lucille Curie and Basil Sheffer. The attendance was not so large this year.

Dad and Daughter in First Meeting

It was a momentous day in the lives of this pretty twenty-one-year-old American girl and her father, a French opera singer, as they met for the first time on the deck of a great ocean liner at New York. Like the story of one of the father's beloved operas, reads the account of how Louise Rousseau and her father had unsuccessfully sought each other for years, once actually living within calling distance of each other in New York. The girl was born in Dallas, Texas, a few weeks after her father and mother had divorced and separated. Louise Rousseau was at the pier as the liner glided up the bay, bringing her father to her. She had waited all her life for him.

"BACKSTAIRS INFLUENCE"

BACKSTAIRS influence—that is to say clandestine, secret, underhand force that accomplishes its sinister purpose so no one may hear, say see or know—this is not a twentieth century discovery though the phrase finds frequent usage in this fin de siècle century.

The very name, as a matter of fact, comes to us from the incident that centuries ago, every palace had its numerous backdoors and back stairs through which private access was had to rooms in which privy conferences were held.

It is this sort of underhand intrigue that flourished because of backdoors and backstairs; and, which, however, undesirable it was in times gone by, still seems to be prevalent today.

British Naval Victory

Told in Old Newspaper

Memphis, Tenn.—An issue of the London Times one hundred and twenty-seven years old, carrying an account of the victory of the British fleet at Cape Trafalgar, was discovered recently by Mrs. Florence Johnson while cleaning out an old bookcase.

The paper evidently had been placed in the case by her grandfather, a native of England. In the battle Lord Nelson, Britain's naval hero, was killed.

Vice Admiral Collingwood, who assumed command after Lord Nelson had been killed, reported the battle to the newspaper.

The issue was dated November 17, 1805.

Building Sway May Make Stenog Sick

Columbus, Ohio.—"Stenographers of the future may become ill in lofty offices, he rushed off to a physician and hear him say they are suffering from 'synchronous swaying of pendulous fixtures.'"

Prof. Clyde T. Morris, Ohio State university engineer, said here that something like sea-sickness may occur in upper stories of tall buildings.

Commonly, he said, it has been believed this was caused by the swaying of the structure in the fresh winds of the lower skies. But, in fact, it is the swaying of the fixtures.

Experiments in the American Insurance Union tower here, the tallest structure west of New York, showed a sway of only one-tenth of an inch in a 30-mile wind at the thirty-seventh floor.

OLD MAN COYOTE AND THE WHIRLWIND

(Reprinted From the Tepee Book by permission of the author.)

One day Old Man Coyote was walking through the woods talking to himself. "There is a woman living in these woods," he said, "who wants a husband and I think I should like to have her for a wife."

"You will have to wrestle with me," a voice replied from among the trees, "and if you throw me I will be your wife."

"I will wrestle with you," Old Man Coyote replied and because the woman knew who he was she let him throw her. But she had not forgotten how he had run away and left her when he was her husband before and she intended to get even with him.

"I move so often, no man will live with me," she told him.

"That won't bother me," Coyote answered.

Mrs. Coyote began to get supper and said nothing but just as her husband began to eat she came in and said they would have to move right away. She pulled the tepee down upon his head and tied the poles together. Then she tied Old Man Coyote on to the tepee poles and told him to hold on tight. When she had everything ready, off they went over the prairie. Old Man Coyote protesting all the way. Finally they came to some woods and Mrs. Coyote took him through the tops of the trees rapidly, paying no attention when the branches got in his eyes and tore his clothes. They came to a river. For a long time she dragged him down the river until he was cold and wet. When he looked as though he had had punishment enough she set him down and began to set up the tepee. Old Man Coyote was mighty tired to get off those tepee poles and thought he would run away from such a terrible wife, so he made believe that he would go off and get some firewood as an excuse. But Mrs. Coyote knew what he was up to and tied him again to the tepee poles and started on.

"Please don't move this way," Old Man Coyote cried. But Mrs. Coyote paid no attention to him. She took him through the woods again, and over the mountains and through the river until he was so cold and hungry he was half dead. Then Mrs. Coyote, who was the whirlwind, set him down and let him run away.

Britain Lists 540 as ## Millionaires in 1931

London.—Five hundred and forty millionaires in this country were assessed for surtax last year, according to the report of the inland revenue commissioners for the year ended March 31, 1931, which has just been issued here. Statistic indicate that the number of millionaires increased by twenty-one, that the yield from income tax rose by £18,000,000, and that 50,000 taxpayers dropped from the lists of Somerset house during the year. Among them they paid £235,335,304.

The total number of taxpayers was 2,200,000 and among them they paid £255,339,304. There were actually 4,050,000 persons with incomes liable to taxation, but 2,750,000 were relieved of payment by the operation of various allowances, such as those for wife, children and dependent relations. The total income brought under review was £3,100,000,000, but through allowances and reductions the actual tax was levied on only £1,300,000,000.

The Kitchen Cabinet

SUGAR, SPICE, ALL THINGS NICE

THE delicious cinnamon or pecan roll which may be made with one base is a most delicious bread to serve on many occasions.

Cinnamon Rolls.—Take one cupful of scalded milk, add two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt, four tablespoonfuls of shortening to the hot milk. Cool until lukewarm and add an yeast cake softened in one-fourth cupful of warm water. Mix with sufficient flour to handle and knead thoroughly, then allow the bread to rise until twice its bulk. Cut down and fold and let rise again. When light roll into a sheet one-half inch in thickness and spread with melted butter, sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon. Roll like a jelly roll and slice into one-inch slices. Place in a baking pan and allow to rise again. Bake in a hot oven twenty minutes. For the pecan roll place a generous portion of butter and brown sugar with a half cupful of pecans in the bottom of the pan. Place the rolls and bake when light. Turn upside down and serve.

Spiced Hot Cross Buns.—Prepare the above mixture, make the rolls into rounds after adding one-half cupful of currants or a mixture of currants and raisins, a teaspoonful of cinnamon and one-half teaspoonful of allspice. Cut a cross on the top of each with a sharp knife just before baking.

Spice Cake.—Sift two and one-half cupfuls of pastry flour with one-half teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of baking powder, one-fourth teaspoonful each of allspice, nutmeg, mace and one-half teaspoonful of cinnamon. Sift three times. Cream one-half cupful of butter, add two cupfuls of sifted brown sugar and cream together until light and fluffy. Add two eggs well beaten and the flour mixture alternately with one cupful of sour milk. Beat well after each addition and bake in a greased tin eight by eight inches. Bake fifty minutes. ## Look to this cause

When your baby fusses, tosses and seems unable to sleep restfully, look for one common cause, doctors say. Constipation. To get rid quickly of the accumulated wastes which cause restlessness and discomfort, give a cleansing dose of Castoria. Castoria, you know, is made specially for children's delicate needs. It is a pure vegetable preparation; contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics. It is so mild and gentle you can give it to a young infant to relieve colic. Yet it is as effective for older children. Castoria's regulative help will bring relaxed comfort and restful sleep to your baby. Keep a bottle on hand. Genuine Castoria always has the name:

John Gresham's Girl

by (Copyright)—WNU Service.

THE STORY

By chance James Lee meets Lucy Gresham, daughter of Sir John Gresham, wealthy ship builder. Lee, unjustly accused of robbing the Gresham firm, was sent to prison. He blames Oliver Ames, Lucy's cousin, and Gresham's manager, and seeks revenge. Lee inherits wealth, and in compliance with the will, changes his name from Warrington. He secures an invitation to the girl's birthday party. Lucy is practically engaged to Ames. She meets Lee, who makes love to her. With Gresham's approval, Lucy and Lee are married. Lee stuns the girl by telling her he does not love her, and hates her "whole breed." She hears the story of his wrongs, and his determination to be avenged. She believes in his innocence of the crime for which he was convicted, and sees a fitness of character in him.

CHAPTER IV—Continued

"My love, what could I have done? Oliver had the matter well in hand. . . . Oliver is a just man, Lucy. . . . 'Just man,' she repeated. 'But the most just of men can be . . . mistaken.'"

"My dear, he was not mistaken. . . . The evidence proved that the wretched man was obviously guilty. . . . He broke off, because Lucy had risen abruptly, and was looking across the room toward the door, a curious, startled look on her face.

Sir John turned and saw that his son-in-law was standing in the doorway.

"I'm interrupting you," Lee said. "You were talking of . . ." He paused questioningly.

"An unfortunate affair that happened some years ago," began Sir John, but Lucy suddenly looked up square into her husband's face.

"About that man I told you of, Jim . . . who . . ."

"Went to prison for robbing a pay clerk?" he put in quickly, answering her look. . . . "Yes, I remember."

"Lucy seems to think that I ought to have seen him when he asked me to see him," went on Sir John.

"Instead of which you . . ." asked Lee smoothly.

Lucy rose suddenly. "Instead of which, daddy and I went on a yachting cruise," she said. "We went out on the open sea . . . while . . . he . . ."

"She caught a breath and stopped. "My love," said Sir John, "you are too tender-hearted. The man deserved all he got . . . Gresham's has no use for highwaymen. Neither has the world at large. . . . What do you say, Lee?"

"Oh, I'm afraid I was scarcely listening, sir," said Lee with a short laugh. "I was thinking."

"Yes. . . ."

"Just wondering whether it had occurred to you to speculate as to what he might do . . . when he comes out." The words fell slowly.

Sir John laughed easily and rose. "I think he's out by this time. Three years was his sentence, if I remember right. And he hasn't turned up so far. Well, as pervert, my children. . . ."

"He made his adieux and left. When he was gone, Lee faced Lucy. "Well, I've warned him," he said challengingly.

"Yes," she said, through unsteady lips. . . . "We were out there, Jim . . . on the sea . . . while you . . ." The words broke from her and died shakily away.

"I don't want your pity," he said roughly.

She raised her blue eyes to his. "I'm not pitying you, Jim. This has been too . . . big for pity. But I believe I understand."

In a way, it was hard to lay the blame on any one person, as far as she could see. Ames had obviously acted in all good faith. Her father very probably could have done nothing—and yet they were responsible for this appalling warping of a living soul. Everything that was fine in him was in deadly peril of destruction from the spirit of revenge that held him in thrall. Perhaps upon her lay the onus of delivering him from the power of the enemy.

How was she to decide what was the first thing to do? She knew nothing of his plans in any detail. Nothing of how he intended to wreak his vengeance upon her father. . . . Had he any definite scheme?

"If I asked him, point-blank," she mused. "I wonder if he would tell me. . . . He is so . . . queerly honest with me . . . that I almost believe he would. . . ."

But she didn't ask him immediately. She was afraid of rushing things; afraid that by one false step she might spoil her chances of success. So instead of saying more, she turned and left him.

CHAPTER V

The Truth About Linforths

Uncertainty and wondering made her restless, and two weeks went rather wretchedly by. One day she had been to see her father, and as they were having tea together, he was called to the telephone. When he came back, it was clear that he was a good deal worried.

"It was Oliver," he told her as he sat down again, "getting through to me on a trunk call. . . . Most disturbing news, most disturbing! It's that Norwegian deal. It hasn't gone through, after all. . . ."

"Oh, daddy, I am sorry. But is it terribly important?"

"It means losing some of the best timber we've ever had the chance of. Oliver imagined that a definite arrangement had been reached before he left, although the contract hadn't actually been signed."

"What a pity he left before it was signed," put in Lucy.

"He was wanted over here, and had to come back. And now Linforths . . . With the name Sir John thumped a fist on the little tea table with a force to make the tea things rattle. . . . 'Linforths have gone over our heads and collared the deal.'"

"Well, they are our traditional enemies, dad. Always have been. I suppose Linforths made up their mind to beat us at this any cost, and went all out over it."

"They must have got hold of new capital. Oliver's a good deal troubled. He says it won't end here."

"I suppose he is," said Lucy. "Oliver takes his responsibilities so tremendously seriously, doesn't he?" Sir John agreed with a nod, and they continued to talk the matter over for the remainder of Lucy's visit.

At dinner that evening, a good deal to her surprise, Lee asked her where she had been during the afternoon. He did not usually ask questions as to her movements. She told him that she had been with her father, and noticed that he gave her a quick little look, but he didn't say anything further. But later, when she was in her room, preparing to go to bed, she was startled to hear him knock on the door that divided her room from his.

"Come in."

He opened the door, slowly, and slowly, came a pace or two into the room. Then stopped and stood looking across at her. Her face showed girlish and flushed between long swaths of gold.

"What's the matter? Do you think I'm going to eat you up?" he asked abruptly.

"Don't be ridiculous . . ." she said, with an attempt at lightness. "Don't look afraid of me then," he countered.

"I'm not afraid. Only you startled me. What do you want, Jim?"

"How was your father when you saw him today?" he asked.

She was surprised at the question; utterly unable to see its drift. "He was very well," she answered. "But a lot worried. Linforths have beaten us over a big deal." She looked at him to see how he'd take it.

"It gives you pleasure to hear that, I suppose?" she added sharply. But he didn't answer. Instead, he looked round the room, as if he were noting everything in it.

"Your room," he said, only half aloud. . . . "And I've scarcely seen it. . . . Since it has been yours."

His eyes came round to her face then, but hers were lowered. She didn't know how to meet this mood in him; didn't know what he meant. His manner was so changed. His suggestion that she was frightened by him was absurd. But her heart was beating hotly, all the same.

"I've never seen you with your hair down before," he said, in an odd voice. She flashed a quick look up at him, and saw that his hand was half outstretched toward the long ripple of gold that lay over her shoulder. She was amazed. And, quite suddenly, angry, all on edge, she stepped back, shrinking away from the big, shapely hand.

"Don't touch me, Jim!" she cried sharply, in a low voice, just as she had cried the same words the morning after her wedding day. His hand closed to a flat upon which knuckles stood out white. She saw his eyes go sullen and his lips set to a line. Then he drew a breath; dropped his hand to his side, turned and strode into his room without a further word and shut the door sharply behind him.

Lucy sank down rather shakily into her chair. If only his nearness didn't stir her soul. If he knew how much more afraid she was sometimes of herself, than ever of him.

Things went quickly after this, for the very next morning, as she was crossing the hall, she heard voices from the study; St. Abb's and Jim's mingled for a moment, then St. Abb's alone.

"After this, you can hardly expect me to stay . . . I'm going, sir, going at once. . . ."

A pause, then her husband's deep voice. "That's exactly as you like, of course. . . . Go when you will, Perry."

Away, suddenly, that she was eavesdropping, Lucy went quickly to her sitting room. St. Abb was going. Leaving Jim. Why? Because he had just discovered that awful business of three years ago? From what she had heard, that seemed likely. . . . In the middle of these thoughts she heard a step across the hall, and a moment later saw St. Abb pass the door of her room on the way, apparently, to his own. . . . On an impulse she called to him and he stopped.

"Come here a moment, will you?" she said.

He came in reluctantly, and trying, rather boyishly, to hide the fact that he was reluctant.

"You wanted to see me?" he said, with rather elaborate ease. She looked at him a moment. His young, attractive face was white, and he looked upset; badly shaken.

"Perry," she said quickly, as if she had something to say that she wanted to get over. "I was passing the study just now. . . . The door was open. I heard you and Jim talking. . . . And I heard what you said. . . . You told him you were going to leave him."

"Yes." The short word, so shortly said, sounded odd from Perry St. Abb. "You really meant it, I suppose?"

"Absolutely."

"Then are you going?" she went on. "Now. I was on my way to my room to pack when you called me," he answered.

"Will you tell me why you are going?" There was a touch of abruptness in that. His answer was more abrupt still.

"No." But after a second he added, "I beg your pardon, Lucy. I'm . . . just a bit. . . ."

"I can see you are," she said gently. "You have thought a great deal of Jim, haven't you?"

"There was no one I thought more of," he said, boyishly impulsive. "Then what has happened to make you change?"

"I have changed, anyway. . . . And I'm going, in consequence," he equivocated. "That doesn't answer me," she insisted.

"I can't answer you any more clearly. Please don't ask me to." "I turned back, toward the door, as if he were going to leave her. But she stopped him.

"Don't go. This is . . . most tremendously important to me. . . ."

"Most Disturbing News, Most Disturbing!"

Perhaps you scarcely guess just how tremendously important it is. "You can't know anything of this," he said. "It isn't possible. . . . If you want to know, please, Lucy, ask him; not me."

"It's something you have discovered about him, isn't it?" she said, the words coming more as an assertion than a question.

He nodded. "Something that seems utterly . . . discreditable," she went on.

He nodded again. "Well, perhaps you'll be surprised to hear that not only do I know about it, but that very probably I know more than you do. . . ."

"And yet I haven't . . . gone." "You . . . you really know and can take it so quietly!" he half stammered.

"It isn't always safe to judge a man by what you hear he . . . has been . . . or has done . . ." she answered slowly.

"But this is what he is . . . what he is doing!" cried the young man. She looked at him sharply, opened her mouth to speak; closed it again with nothing said, and stood quite still and silent. After a moment she asked, in a changed voice:

"Then you aren't going because of something you have heard of him; something that happened . . . some years ago?"

"No. I haven't heard anything . . . It's nothing to do with anything that is past. . . . And you know I wouldn't judge him on hearsay of any sort. . . ."

He broke off, and for a moment she left the silence unbroken. Then: "Very well. Thanks for letting me speak to you about this. You must, of course, do exactly as you think. I'll not ask you anything more. Perhaps I'll take your advice and—ask him."

She spoke gradually, her voice in perfect control, but a new note in it made St. Abb realize then, a thing he hadn't realized before: that quite apart from the sudden knowledge that had come to him of Lee, something was seriously wrong with this marriage about which he had been so glad.

He turned away; turned back . . . stammered out with boyish earnestness:

"I say, I'm dreadfully sorry . . ." and left her hurriedly.

She heard him go along the corridor to his room. Then she went straight to the study. She found Lee standing by the window, his back toward her, head bent and hands thrust deep into his coat pockets. The sound of the closing of the door made him turn quickly, and as his eyes met hers, it seemed as if he braced his big shoulders, slightly. She came a few paces into the room and stopped.

"Jim, why is Perry leaving you?" "Perhaps it is because he has a better job in view," he suggested.

"You know it isn't." "So, evidently, do you."

She paused a moment, her eyes still steadily meeting his.

"You have done something to utterly lose his respect. What is it, Jim?" she asked again.

"Why should you think I'll tell you?" "I don't know. But, somehow, I think you will, if . . ." She broke off. "If you nag at me long enough," he asked, with a disagreeable laugh.

She laughed, too, rather cheerlessly. "Well, yes, if you like," she said. "I wasn't really thinking that, though."

She was silent a moment, so was he. Then she said: "Perry has found out something about you. . . . Something of the present; not the past. He said so. . . ."

"Then he did tell you something?" "Only that."

"What right have you to ask further?" "Haven't I the right, Jim?" she asked quietly. "I certainly think that you owe me something."

"Am I to pay for that one thing all my life?" he cried. "I shall probably pay for it, all mine," she replied.

He turned away; stood for a while, staring moodily out through the window, then turned back and flung himself into the revolving chair before his desk.

"What is it you want to know?" he asked bluntly.

"Just what I have already asked you," she said. "May I sit down, too?"

He rose quickly, coloring, and pushed up a chair for her. She thanked him and sat down.

"Just exactly why," she went on, as if the little interruption hadn't happened. "A man who has always thought a tremendous lot of you, should suddenly change his opinion to the extent of feeling impelled to leave you. . . ."

"All right; you shall know. You know Linforths?"

She nodded. "Then straightened suddenly in her chair as if she knew what was coming before he said it."

"I am Linforths." The words seemed to ring through the silence that followed. Then she drew a breath, steadied her voice determinedly and asked:

"You mean you've bought them out? Taken Linforths over?"

He nodded. "And therefore I become the traditional enemy of Gresham's," he challenged.

Easier to Write Poem Than Make Good Joke

To every fifteen persons who can write verses there is only one who can write a joke, a wisecrack or a line of satire. At least, that's our experience. Ought not "wisecracking" be cultivated in the halls of learning as well as poetry? It is a form of literature quite as respectable, and so rare that all the satirists are remembered—while all the poets are not—not by a million or so.

We believe that the fund of humor and witicism in the world would be enormously amplified if they were pursued as an art. It is not even an "exercise" where learning is taught. One can write poetry—much as it is—with scarcely a thought; but to say something smart demands an intellectual activity as strenuous as the physical activity that gets results in baseball, football and the other athletic sports.

Next time that you sit down with your overflowing sentiment—and presumably inspiration—to write a poem, seek to turn it—if only as a pastime—into an epigram or a bit of persiflage—and see what you get.—F. H. Collier in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

They've Never Tasted a Tonic!

THESE are not patent medicine children. Their appetite needs no coaxing. Their tongues are never coated, cheeks never pale. And their bowels move just like clockwork, because they have never been given a habit-forming laxative.

You can have children like this—and be as healthy yourself—if you follow the advice of a famous family physician. Stimulate the vital organs. The strongest of them need help at times. If they don't get it, they grow sluggish. Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin is a mild, safe stimulant.

When a youngster doesn't do well at school, it may be the liver that's lazy. Often the bowels hold enough poisonous waste to dull the senses! A spoonful of delicious syrup pepsin once or twice a week will avoid all this. It contains fresh laxative herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin, and does a world of good to any system—young or old. You can always get this fine prescriptive preparation at any drug store. Just ask them for Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin.

Get some syrup pepsin today, and protect your family from those bilious days, frequent sick spells and colds. Keep a bottle in the medicine chest instead of cathartics that so often bring on chronic constipation. Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin can always be employed to give clogged bowels a thorough cleansing, with none of that painful griping, or burning feeling afterward. It isn't expensive.

Why Worry?

When you lose your appetite—not only for food . . . but for work and play—don't merely go on worrying. Do something about it!

One of the most famous tonics for weakness, "nerves," and "run down condition," is Fellows' Syrup. It stimulates appetite. Like the entire body to higher levels of vigor and energy. The first few doses will prove that "Fellows" is the medicine for "building up." That is why so many doctors prescribe it. Ask your druggist for genuine.

The largest attendance ever held at the High School Alumni banquet was enjoyed Saturday night at the high school building. There were over a hundred members, seniors and friends. The new officers are Virgil Kimes, president and Miss Mary Wade, secretary-treasurer.

High school closed on Friday with a pot luck dinner at Erick's grove. The seniors, for this year's class are Frederick Laub, Glenn Brace, Floyd Pfauwer, Florence Steward, Clarissa Rediger, Eunice Shilling, Jesse Hart, Harry Farver, Harold Goldsmith, James Butler, Hubert McNamara and Lynn Fisher.

Local Briefs

For Sale: Overland Sedan. If interested see Mrs. Mary Betz. 211f.

Mr. Marion Baughman is quite poorly and the doctor was called Saturday.

The Claypool News, edited by Stanley B. Dustman, made its initial appearance at the editorial desk of The News, last week. Mr. Dustman formerly lived at Warsaw and edited the Masonic Tidings. As a personal friend of The News force, we wish the editor success in his new field.

The Wild Oats Boy, Community Gym, May 27, by Mt. Pleasant S.S. Admission 10-20c. Public invited.

Mrs. Marietta Schram, of Kalamazoo, Mich., an aunt of O. E. Ginther, is here spending a couple weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. George Pappas and Mr. and Mrs. Ben Orr, of Fort Wayne were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Kees.

Mrs. Viola Roos, of Findlay, O., and Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Buckingham were Tuesday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Foltz.

Dr. and Mrs. C. R. Price were at Piercetown, Sunday the guests of Mr. Guy Dill and family. Carl Dill, the son, has been ill for some time, but is better.

Mrs. Nellie Garton, Coldwater, Mich., is reported as recovering nicely from peritonitis caused by bursting appendix. She will be taken to her home this week.

At the Jack Sechler farm at Orangeville, a wild duck has hatched 9 pheasants and is doing a good job mothering them. This is rather a strange happening.

Clara Amarette, 12 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rolla Wiers, submitted to an appendix operation Saturday at the Bonnell Souder hospital in Auburn, and she is getting along fine.

Victor Dermott was injured last Thursday while plowing, when he was jerked over the plow handles. Today he is some better and was able to sit up for the first. He suffered hemorrhage of the lungs last week.

The S. & L. Gravel Company of Marion have moved in their dipper to the Kees pit east of town, ready to dip about 5,000 yards of gravel. This is the third time they have set for dipping in the Kees pit. Practically all of the gravel goes for county roads.

The Allen county jail is quite a hilarious place, according to Dr. E. O. Hall, federal marshal of the Northern Indiana District, after an investigation of reports, last Friday and Saturday. Prisoners do their own cooking, sleep until noon if they choose, and have their booze to drink. A new order has gone into effect now.

The ladies of the Lutheran Church met at the home of Mrs. Vera Dressel last Thursday and had a pot luck dinner followed by a little program. As operator on the B. & O., Mr. Dressel has been changed to Deshler and they thought they would have to move, but there seems to be a likelihood of another change, so they decided to remain here until a more permanent job is secured.

Fred D. Blaker, 67, father of Mrs. Claud Laub, of Coburntown, died Sunday afternoon at his home east of Butler. Mr. Blaker's death was due to a tubercular condition of one lung. Several years ago he swallowed a bone which he later coughed up and as a result his lung became affected. He was buried Tuesday afternoon services being held from Big Run Church and burial in Butler cemetery.

A beautiful baptismal service was observed Sunday afternoon at the St. Joe River, north of the Dills Bridge. Five young people, members of the Christian Sunday School, who had made their confession at the special Pentecostal service were baptized by Elder J. O. Rose. The service was attended by a goodly number of relatives and friends. A service like this one, emblematic of the one in the Jordan River when our Savior was baptized will long be remembered by all.

Dr. Poffenberger, Butler dentist, was stricken with a stroke of paralysis Thursday and has been unconscious for several days. He was going up the stairs to his office, when stricken and was found on the steps by Dr. Clayton Hathaway. His condition is still very critical. Dr. Poffenberger was a very prominent figure about Butler and was extremely interested in the road projects of this section of the state and had some influence with the highway department of the state. The doctor has many friends here who are sorry that such a thing should happen. For some time he has been disting on account of suffering high blood pressure, which is no doubt the cause of his illness.

Walter Keesler and Lester Coburn left last Saturday for Bellwood, Alabama, being called there on account of the death of the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Keesler. Mrs. Keesler and two daughters will return with the boys in a couple of weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hart entertained at Sunday dinner at the Clyde Hart home, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Hart and son, of Hicksville, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Hart and son, of Goshen and Mr. and Mrs. Lehr Wilder. The occasion was in honor of the birthdays of Lavon, Richard and Lawrence Hart.

About one of the best jobs of cleaning up, is that at the rear of the Central Grocery. The cement foundation of the old ice house was moved by Wm. Keeler and placed in washouts along the highway and the lot was completely cleared of rubbish by Marshall Andreas and will be farmed by him this season.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace W. Huntsman, of Wolf Lake were in town Saturday afternoon and while Mrs. Huntsman received dental treatment of Dr. C. R. Price, Mr. Huntsman called at The News office. We did work for Mr. Huntsman when at Fort Wayne in the heating contracting business and we had not seen him for some time. After selling out his business they moved to Rome City, where they had a summer cottage, later this home was sold and they are now located at Wolf Lake and in a few days will open a modern and up-to-the-minute general store, of three floors. Their success is sure as Mr. Huntsman is a shrewd, honest and progressive business man and he says that mail order houses will have to hump to beat his prices on everything carried in this large stock.

Mr. and Mrs. Zane Sailer and children, of Fort Wayne, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Sailer.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Cox were Sunday guests of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Simon Mutchler near Brighton.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hull and Mrs. Vina Quance and son, Wayne motored to South Bend Sunday and visited the J. F. Walker family.

Mr. and Mrs. Glen Hart and son of Goshen, Ind., were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hart. Their grandmothers, Mrs. Alice Hart and Mrs. Dora Coburn accompanied them home on Sunday afternoon to spend the week in their home.

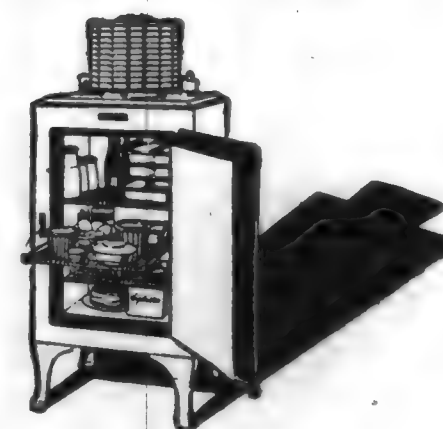

Miss Erthenia Graham and Fred Quance, of Auburn accompanied F. B. Leighty and wife to the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Hull Sunday where they spent the day.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark Scholes, of Madison, Ind., were home over Saturday and Sunday as guests of his mother and sisters. They also came to attend the Alumni banquet on Saturday evening.

The Zay Sailer home presents a very neat appearance now, that he has built an addition, put in basement under entire house, constructed new cement walks about the back and filled in the yard. Zay did considerable of the work himself as he only worked part time. They now have a very lovely and comfortable home.

MEMORIAL DAY OBSERVANCE HELD HERE

Last Monday, May 30, was the day observed in forty-two of the forty-eight states, and in all of the territories of the United States, as Memorial Day. It is the day upon which the nation pays tribute to its honored dead, who served their country at the peril of their own lives. Originally established in the North as a day for decorating the graves of soldiers who had lost their lives in the war between the states, Memorial Day has practically lost its sectional significance, for North and South alike contributed the heroes of the Spanish War and of the great World War, whose memories are preserved with special ceremonial on this day. In the South, in the states of the old Confederacy, where another date is still set apart in commemoration of the men who wore the gray, the 30th of May is now largely observed as the national day of commemoration for all of the brave.

It is meet and fitting that at least once a year the nation should be reminded that our country has had, from its inception, to fight for the liberties, the rights and privileges which we, more than any other people in the world, enjoy so greatly. The seeds of that liberty have been sown in the blood of heroes. We make a great fuss about hard times. We complain with bitterness about our personal business and financial worries. But all the troubles that we in time of peace are compelled to bear are insignificant compared with the risk of life itself, which every man who has served under our flag has accepted cheerfully, even jubilantly. There is no tribute too great to pay to those who proved their willingness to make that sacrifice if necessary. To whom do we raise monuments but to these?

Under the leadership of the American Legion boys, St. Joe rallied an interesting crowd of folks on Monday afternoon, to pay honor to our departed Veterans and as Captain Stump said, to those of our families who have passed on, we decorate their graves also, and rightly so.

The program at the gymnasium was pleasing. The music being furnished by the school band and a male quartette, also a number of readings were given.

The reading of the roster by Elgin Curie revealed the following soldiers buried in Riverside Cemetery:

Civil War: James Abel, Walter Abel, Alexander Baker, Mahlon Baker, Martin Bodey, Florance Buchanan, John Y. Davis, James Draggoo, Charles Freeburn, Benjamin Hamilton, Henry Hull, Joseph Koch, Jacob Leighty, William Pervines, James May, Harry H. Meek, Isaac Meese, Jeremiah Ulm, George Wade, Edwin White, Oliver Widney, Charles W. Widney.

Spanish War: Frank Bishop, James White.

World War: Lester Curie, Brittan Freeburn, Burl Rude, Ray Sailer.

Alton Cemetery, War of 1812: Daniel Abel, Ebenezer Coburn.

Civil War: Henry Abel, David Andress, Rev. J. F. Coburn, Henry Milliman, J. M. Milliman, J. R. Milliman, Warren D. Milliman, Curtis Perry, George Trostle.

World War: Owen Headley.

The line of march was headed by a mounted marshal, Dr. C. R. Baumgartner, followed by the colors, band, service men, wreath girls Boy Scouts, lodges, children and citizens.

The cemetery was beautifully decorated and showing a clean and neat appearance. Many of our former citizens came home for this day to decorate graves and to mingle with friends and acquaintances of former years.

A TRICK OF THE TRADE

"How nice it must be to work beside so many cakes!" exclaimed the benevolent old gentleman to the little boy in the baker's shop. "Don't you ever feel you would like to eat some of them?" "Oh, no, sir," was the reply. "That would be stealing—but I just gives 'em a lick now and then."

TOWNSHIP CONVENTION HELD SUNDAY EVENING

A pageant put on by the young people of the township, depicting the high way and the low way of life, was the main feature on the convention program Sunday evening, and the Methodist Church was well filled. The pageant was interspersed with appropriate songs and it afforded a splendid challenge to making the proper choices through life.

Ward Jackman, county president, made a short talk.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President, F. B. Leighty.

Vice Pres., Mrs. Gertrude Borthwick.

Sec.-Treas., Harvey Hull.

Child. Supt., Beatrice Woodcox.

Young People, Joe Woodcox.

Adult, F. E. Johnson.

Educational, Mrs. Chas. Koch.

Administration, Cleota Morr.

WARD JACKMAN PAYS $2,848 TO COUNTY

Ward Jackman, former treasurer of DeKalb county, has paid into the county treasury $2,848.97, shortage for the years 1929 and 1930, it was announced at the county auditor's office Friday.

Cash discrepancies were found in an examination of the county books by C. F. Lautzenheiser and O. A. Hutchens, field examiners of the state board of accounts, and a report of their findings was made to Lawrence F. Orr, head of the board. The report showed a discrepancy of $2,071.97 for 1929 and $777 for 1930.

When Mr. Jackman was informed of the irregularities, he expressed surprise, stating that he "expected there might be a small error but nothing important." The former treasurer also had a private firm of public accountants check his books before settling the matter.

Both examiners stated that they had found no trace of any criminal intent of any falsification or any reprehensible irregularities in the county books.

The American Legion and Auxiliary, assisted by the Ladies Band, High School, Fraternities and Samson K. of P. Band, were among the persons, on parade at Butler, Captain Stump, assisted by bands and auxiliaries had charge at the mound. Leon Kees was chairman of the Decoration Day services.

Mr. and Mrs. Grover Ward and son, of Wauseon, O., called at The News office Tuesday afternoon, enroute to Albion on business. They also stopped to see their grandson, at the Oral Hughes home. Grover is looking fine and reports splendid success as pastor of the U. B. Circuit where he has been for the past three years.

The fountain is now in working condition and the public appreciates it very much, although the children are extremely hard on it. There ought to be more of an interest in keeping the public property in the best of condition, and while the town board expends considerable money in such up-keep, they feel that much of it could be eliminated if the public would take more precaution.

CONCERTS TO BEGIN SATURDAY NIGHT

Weather permitting, the band concerts will be started next Saturday night, to begin at 8:30 o'clock, (E. D. S. T.) and the entire community is asked to come and enjoy the music under the leadership of Donald Kinsey.

The contributions made by the merchants for the support of the concerts are being collected each week by Willard Hurni, who has charge for the season, and any other moneys or donations will be gladly received by him at any time, and are needed.

Join the crowd and hear the concert.

For the Children's Sake

By FANNIE HURST

(By McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
(WNU Service)

ANN MEREDITH'S marriage was one of those runaway affairs.

She met Donald Murrie on a Sunday and married him that day week.

Her friends and some of his, said Ann was too good for him. Meaning that up to the time of her marriage Donald had been what might be called a prodigious sewer of wild oats.

Ann knew this, after a fashion, and her sweet eyes were alight with the determination to reform Donald. She married him for love. She could reform him with that love.

In whatever fashion Ann was to be the loser by this marriage, she bettered herself economically. Donald was a born money-maker. As his friends said of him, about everything he touched turned to gold. Donald even a little the worse for drink could turn a better bargain than most men in the power of their full faculties.

Ann up to the time of her marriage had been a sort of forewoman in a fairly large up-town department store of Urban City. One of those great shops of convenience that occasionally dot the residential districts of large towns. The kind of shops that cater to the housewife who does not have time for the long trip to the downtown districts.

After her marriage, Ann lived in a lovely stone-facaded, ten-room home in a residential district where heavy traffic was forbidden.

But almost from the first, the reformation did not pan out as Ann had dreamed it would. Donald was as set in his ways as he was wild in his ways. From the very first he began to come home roaring drunk two and three times a week. The lovely home that Ann had taken such pride in creating became a storm center of the most painful and difficult scenes from the very first. It was almost with horror that Ann regarded the coming of their first child. But for a while, about a year after its arrival, a change came about in Donald. He seemed humble, chastened, deeply contrite and in love with the mother of his lovely little daughter, and for a brief twelve-month the pretty home became something of the thing Ann had dreamed it might be.

The coming of her second child was a period of happiness and thanksgiving for Ann. Life assumed a tranquility and a beauty. Donald, who could be very, very nice when he was nice, was not only the provider magnificent, but for three months after the coming of the little boy remained a devoted husband and father.

Then one night Donald came home drunk.

With her heart in her mouth Ann greeted this suddenly strange horror of a companion of hers and made up her mind to fight a valiant fight with him and nip in the bud the possibility of a return to his habits of debauchery. There were tears and reconciliation after that dreadful night. But something had snapped in Donald. Not only did the drinking continue, but Donald became untrue and faithless to Ann in the most flagrant and offensive sense of the word.

Poor Ann, sometimes she was obliged to hold her head up and pretend not to be seared with insult when these companions of Donald's passed her with him on the very streets of the city in which they lived.

The next five years of her life became a nightmare.

It was Ann's horror, it was Ann's humiliation to see her lovely children constantly subjected to the spectacle of a manly father and of home scenes of high, angry and bitter words that should never have reached their tender little ears.

In vain Ann sought to avoid these scenes, preferring often to suffer in silence than to subject her sensitive little girl and boy to the gross spectacle of a family row. Because that was all they could ever amount to, with Donald half crazed with drink and bear eyes from too much dissipation and too little sleep.

"Why doesn't she leave him?" said some of Ann's friends. On the other hand, those of her more conservative relations, owing to religious scruples and fear of public opinion, advised her to stick it out for the children's sake.

"For the children's sake" was a phrase that lay constantly on poor Ann's bitter lips. If not for her children, she would never have endured it. If not for the indignity of visiting upon these innocent little products of her unfortunate alliance the stigma of the public separation of their parents, Ann would have gone back to her old position long ago.

She did not crave divorce. She, too, had certain religious scruples, and besides, it seemed to her that she could never again have sufficient faith in the married state to try it with another. No, Ann was not for divorce. All she secretly craved was respite from the indignities Donald continued to heap upon her and, above all, upon their children.

And yet in Ann's heart the fear for them of the stigma of separated parents was even greater.

For six years the condition waged. Little Adele, a blue-eyed doll of a child whom Donald adored when sober, had literally been reared in a home of startling domestic tragedy. Bobbie, the boy, could tell by the sound of father's feet on the stairs when he was returning home drunk, and would run screaming and sobbing to his mother's side.

Gathering these babies to her, sometimes it seemed to Ann that her hands were dark with sin for having brought them into the world. What mattered it that their home was lavish? That their father, when sober, adored and doted them?

The atmosphere of that home was drenched in horror. When their father came into it, he smirched his children by his very presence.

One evening, such a shocking scene took place in that home—when Donald returned to it in the company of one of the women of dreadful finery he was known to associate with—and entered the very room in which his children and wife were having their dinner—that without taking time to contemplate the results, Ann packed up her children, bag and baggage, and with them left the house.

She went back to a boarding house she had lived in during the years of her work in the up-town department store.

The next day Ann sent for her nurse from the house she had left, and engaged her to take care of the children in the rooming house while she sought out a position.

The old store was glad to take her back. At an increased salary, a sufficient increase to enable Ann to keep the nurse maid and leave her children in the care of this reputable woman while she went daily to her work.

It was not the ideal environment. But the two small boarding-house rooms responded to chins and white paint, and when Ann returned to them evenings, she did so secure in the knowledge that her children's little ears would know only her loving greetings and that their little hearts could expand in an atmosphere of peace and love.

No, it is by no means the ideal solution. Ann's struggle is a bitter one. She will not accept help from Donald even for the children. But the two little rooms represent something that the big house never boasted. Tranquility. The secure knowledge that the delicate young minds of her Bobbie and Adele will know only the sunlight of harmony and the kind of gentle environment that it is Ann's life hope to provide them with.

Now, as Ann looks back upon it all, upon the turbulence of the years, the agonized moments of indecision, the fear of making the break from the so-called security her husband's board-and-keep gave her in the community, she realizes that the cruel thing to her children would have been to remain with them there. Vassals to a father who could provide for them only with the material things of life. Prisoners in a home where their little spirits were hourly subjected to the withering environment of disharmony and ugliness.

Ann's children no longer hear words of kinder and anger. Ann's children no longer run terrified at the sound of a step upon the stair. Beauty thrives in those boarding-house rooms. The beauty of peace and contentment.

It is said of Donald Murrie that he has since come to his senses and that a strangely sobered and regretful man is making every possible advance to his wife in the hope of regaining her confidence and resuming life with her on a sound and fresh basis.

Whatever Ann's ultimate decision, she starts for her work each morning with a high head and a high heart.

In her opinion she has kept her self-respect.

In her opinion she has done the right thing by her children.

Survived Despite Lack of Hygienic Knowledge

Considering how little primitive man knew about hygiene, he managed to keep living, didn't he? It is this monumental fact that fortifies our belief in an overruling and omnipresent Providence. Something must have preserved man in the midst of his ignorance and comparative helplessness.

He died of his diseases, but somehow enough adults survived to carry on the race and increase it.

One has only to read Doctor Clemenning's eye-opening and mouth-opening (for the doctor is a humorist) article in the Forum to learn that ancient man, from the beginning, was full of physical faults. His disordered bones show it; and many of the Egyptian mummies bear the marks of rheumatism. The ill of bad teeth resulted in the same maladies that do now—and Doctor Clemenning observes that at least one exalted Egyptian suffered from blackheads.

Whether he employed sorcery or a face cream cannot now be determined, but either was futile.

Early man did not live long, but he "lived dangerously," as Nietzsche invites us to do. Whatever ailments he contracted, quickly killed him. Still the race "muddled through."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Tree's Commercial Value

The Spanish cedar is one of the most highly esteemed lumber trees of the West Indies. Its most important commercial use is for the manufacture of cigar boxes. Planted as a protection on the coffee trails it grows rapidly but not so large as to completely shade out the coffee plants.

Many of the large coffee-shading trees of various species were blown down by hurricanes of recent years. Old cedar trees 4 to 6 feet in diameter and 50 to 100 feet high were common in Porto Rico before the virgin forests of the island were cut.

The Balearics

Street Scene in Palma, Majorca Island.

(Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)—WNU Service.

FTER more than four centuries of government by European nations, the Balearic islands, now Spanish-owned, are seeking autonomy under the provisions of the new Spanish constitution.

It is doubtful if there is in the world's geographic photograph album a family group whose members show as little family resemblance as do those of the Balearics. Majorca, the big sister, so well known to the world, sits in the center, full-grown and radiantly beautiful. Minorca, slight and delicate, yet with a grace that suggests a certain knowledge of the world, sits at her side.

While Majorca is manifestly a daughter of Spain, Minorca's features and person partake of the north—a strange mixture of English and possibly a little Dutch with the Spanish. On the big sister's other hand, Ibiza, a charming peasant in bright apron, skirt and shawl, hung with barbaric jewelry, plagues the interest of the geologist, for in her a different strain, probably Arabic, seems to predominate. She gazes out of the picture with level, quiet eyes that are a bit mysterious and disconcerting. Her face is unsmiling, even slightly smug, but still peculiarly attractive. At her feet is Formentera island, one of the two babies, almost Ibiza's counterpart in face and dress.

It seems unkind to draw attention to Cabrera, the other baby, crouched at Majorca's feet, for she is a spare, pathetic little figure, maltreated since birth. In her plain face are to be read the signs of misery.

Such are the sister islands, and their description fits their people. The islands are the pleasantest of folk to visit—simple-hearted, even-tempered, sober-minded, honest, and kindly.

The welcome accorded the traveler in the Balearics differs according to island. Majorca greets the stranger with easy familiarity, for she has known many tourists in the last few years; Minorca with quiet grace; and Ibiza shyly; but the warmth of welcome is never in doubt. Ask a passer-by to indicate the direction to a store or hotel; you will be escorted to the door and bowed in, and generally you must not offer anything more material than thanks in return.

The ideal Balearic climate contributes enormously to the traveler's comfort, and, in contrast to what one often experiences on the continent, it is a gratifying surprise to find the fandas, or fairs, invariably clean and their meats wholesome.

Mahon Has a Fine Harbor.

One of the outstanding features of the Balearic group is the abundance and excellence of its harbors. Mahon, the principal city of Minorca, is an example. One's ship picks its way down a water lane, through pink and gray shores capped with rolling green, into what the Spanish government plans to make one of the finest harbors in the Mediterranean.

Ever since Mago, the brother of Hannibal, wintered in this harbor (which still bears his name, Portus Magonis, now corrupted to Mahon), it has been famed as a refuge for ships, and its usefulness will be greatly increased when the island of the Rats, a small knob of rock in the center of the basin, is removed.

The islanders tell proudly how in 1798 Lord Nelson, during the war with France, came into Mahon with his squadron, seized the mansion that overlooked the port where his ships rode, and installed the lovely Lady Hamilton. But the town's historians smile rather sadly and admit that, while history is replete with incidents of Nelson's visit, it does not bear out the story of Lady Hamilton.

And then Mahon! That is the way it comes. Suddenly, as the vessel rounds a point, it bursts into view, a quick splash of pink and white on the hillside, tier after tier of quaint streets, splendid in the sunshine.

Mahon sparkles, as does the whole island. It is a mass of spotless white and down-hill streets of shining doll's houses. From the steamer's deck the town, terrace upon terrace of white houses, with the spires of the inevitable churches dominating the mass, appears pure Spanish; but that is just Mahon's little joke on the visitor, for many of the houses show English features peering from under their Spanish sombrero.

This mixture of the English and Spanish gives Mahon a character of its own, which is shared by its people. It is the women who refuse to conform. In continental Spain and in the other islands they take their places in the fields with the men and the beasts of burden. Not so with upstanding Miss Minorca! She believes that "woman's place is in the home" or, possibly, as a concession to the march of the times, in the factory, but not in the field, and there she refuses to go.

Minorca Spurns Alpagatas. Quite as remarkable, the alpagatas, the rope-soled canvas sandals of Spain and the rest of the Balearics, is practically extinct here. Whether it is that Minorca, producing a large portion of the fine shoes sold in Spain, scindes this humble footwear from a feeling of local pride, or whatever the reason, the fact remains that Minorca wears shoes.

The Balearics are rich in relics, from the days of the prehistoric inhabitants of the Mediterranean countries on down to modern times. Castles, churches, palaces, forts, and watchtowers are seen so frequently that they become almost matters of course. In Minorca there are still standing more than 200 of the talayots, talus and naus—stone structures generally supposed to have been used in connection with prehistoric religious ceremonies and the burial of the dead—and the cliffs and mountains are literally honeycombed with caves.

Within twenty minutes' walk of Mahon there is a fairly well-preserved talayot, a truncated cone of huge stones, probably 40 feet in diameter and 25 feet in height, with a large taula near by. Surrounding the talayot, and marking another age in Minorcan history, are the walls of a fort built probably of the stones of the talayot.

The surrounding fields are strewn with fragments of pottery from prehistoric times on down through the Phoenician, Grecian, Roman and Arabic occupations, and the high stone walls over which one scrambles to reach the charmed hilltop are capped with other fragments laboriously picked from the fields by the island farmers.

The deepest thrill for the visitor to Minorca is to be found in its prehistoric caves. A talayot, taula, or naus is an awe-inspiring sight when one realizes what it stands for, but it has not the instantaneous effect on the imagination made by one of those cave homes of no one knows how many years ago.

The Cove Caves.

The Calas Covas, or Cove Caves, comprise a group in one of the many coves that indent the Minorcan shore, and certainly a better location from a dramatic standpoint could not have been selected by the cave-men. The cove is a wild, winding gash in the shore, descending sharply from the interior tableland to the sea.

The approach to the caves is along a narrow path hedged by a matted scrub growth and by fragments of the cove walls, which during the ages have become dislodged and have crashed to the valley. At the water level these walls are high, jagged, and precipitous; the sea beats itself against them, and wild deeds are plainly indicated. Add, then, to all this the effect of some forty black apertures extending from the water line to the tops of the cliffs—all made by man when the human forehead was lower and human life more precarious than it is now.

It is a meager imagination, indeed, that does not immediately people the cove with small, active men, wide between the cheekbones and as agile as monkeys. We can conjure up the picture and see them leap among the crags and pick their way down the cliffs and bickering and certainly ready to make it most unpleasant for foreign invaders such as ourselves.

Palma, the principal city of Majorca, is snugly situated at the central point of a magnificent horseshoe bay. Like all other waters of these remarkable islands, the Bay of Palma could supply half the colors of an artist's palette. The left-hand prong of the horseshoe shore, as one steams toward the city, was the scene of the first all cheerfully, for the rest, to the good pleasure of heaven.—Sir Roger L'Estrange.

There is no surer remedy for desponding weakness than, when we have done our own parts, to command cheerfully, for the rest, to the good pleasure of heaven.—Sir Roger L'Estrange.

God's Demands

God demands of us that though we lose health and wealth we do not lose faith in him, and though we have abundantly of both that we do not lose sight of him.

Lesson for June 5

JOSEPH THE WORKER

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 41:46-57. GOLDEN TEXT—Sest thou a man diligent in his business? he shall stand before kings; he shall not stand before mean men.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Making Dreams Come True. JUNIOR TOPIC—Joseph the Worker. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Rewards of Faithfulness. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Religious Value of Work.

Joseph was not a self-made man, but a God-made man. His masters always attributed the quality of his character and the success of his work to the fact that the Lord was with him.

1. Joseph Serving Potiphar (30:1-20).

1. Sold to the Ishmaelites (37:28). Joseph was sent by his father to his brethren on an errand of mercy. At the sight of Joseph the murderous envy of his brethren was stirred up. They first proposed to kill him in order to prevent his dreams from coming true. Finally the prudent suggestion of Judah to sell him prevailed, and he was carried to Egypt and sold as a slave to Potiphar.

2. His prosperity while a slave in Potiphar's house (39:2-4). This prosperity consisted of:

a. Being accorded the privilege of Potiphar's house. By "house" is meant his private residence instead of fields or public buildings.

b. He became Potiphar's personal attendant (v. 4).

c. He was made overseer of Potiphar's house (v. 4).

d. He brought prosperity to Potiphar (v. 5). The Lord blessed Potiphar for Joseph's sake.

e. He possessed an attractive personality (v. 6). His fine physique and commanding personality were gifts from God.

3. His temptation (vv. 7-20). Potiphar's wife became infatuated with this handsome slave. He resisted her unwilling to sin against his master and the Lord.

4. Joseph Serving in Prison (39:21-40:23).

1. Overseeing the prisoners (39:21-40:4). Being defeated in her wicked purpose, Potiphar's wife accused Joseph falsely. Potiphar must not have really believed his wife's story, or he would have put Joseph to death. He imprisoned him, the least that was possible under the circumstances.

a. The Lord gave him favor in the sight of the keeper of the prison (v. 21). This keeper was none other than Potiphar himself (40:3, cf. 30:1).

b. He was given charge of the prisoners (v. 22). Potiphar knew Joseph's ability and faithfulness, therefore gave him employment of the most important kind.

c. The Lord made him to be prosperous (v. 23). Joseph's success was due to the hand of God upon him.

2. Interpreting the dreams of the butler and the baker (40:5-23). These were two very important officers in Pharaoh's court, their business being to provide the drink and food of the ruler and his household. These officers had disturbing dreams. He interpreted their dreams. His interpretation was favorable to the butler, who gave his pledge to Joseph that he would intercede with Pharaoh for him when he was set free.

3. Joseph Serving Pharaoh (41:1-57).

1. Interpreting his dream (vv. 1-32). For two full years Joseph remained in prison, forgotten by the butler. Pharaoh's dream brought to Joseph a great opportunity. The failure of the wise men of Egypt to interpret the dream caused the chief butler to remember what Joseph had done for him. Joseph was brought out of prison and made known to Pharaoh.

2. He was given charge of the prisoners (v. 22). Potiphar knew Joseph's ability and faithfulness, therefore gave him employment of the most important kind.

3. The Lord made him to be prosperous (v. 23). Joseph's success was due to the hand of God upon him.

4. Interpreting the dreams of the butler and the baker (40:5-23). These were two very important officers in Pharaoh's court, their business being to provide the drink and food of the ruler and his household. These officers had disturbing dreams. He interpreted their dreams. His interpretation was favorable to the butler, who gave his pledge to Joseph that he would intercede with Pharaoh for him when he was set free.

5. Preparing for famine (vv. 37-52). During the seven years the earth brought forth plentifully. Clothed with royal authority, Joseph went over all the country and gathered and stored the food in all the cities.

6. Selling food to the needy (vv. 53-57).

a. At last the years of fruitfulness ended and then began famine in all the lands (v. 53).

b. Bread was to be found in Egypt only (v. 54). This was the result of Joseph's foresight and preparation.

c. Distribution in the hands of Joseph (vv. 55-57). He opened the storehouses and sold food unto the Egyptians and foreigners.

7. There is no surer remedy for desponding weakness than, when we have done our own parts, to command cheerfully, for the rest, to the good pleasure of heaven.—Sir Roger L'Estrange.

DAIRY FACTS

COWS NEED FREE ACCESS TO WATER

Should at All Times Have All They Will Drink.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)—WNU Service.

Dairymen who want the most milk and butterfat from their cows should arrange to let them drink as much water as they want when they want it, says T. E. Woodward, of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Mr. Woodward, who is senior dairy husbandman in the bureau of dairy industry, has completed experiments to determine the relation of methods of watering dairy cows to their water consumption and production. The tests were run both in warm and cold weather and included both high-producing and low-producing cows. The results of watering twice a day and once a day were compared with results obtained when the cows had free access to water.

In these tests, according to Mr. Woodward, the cows drank more water when watered only twice a day than when they had water at will or when watered only once a day, but their production was highest when they had water at will. The production of the cows in this experiment averaged 2.8 per cent more milk and 2.1 per cent more butterfat when given free access to water than when watered only twice a day; and when watered twice a day they produced 1 per cent more milk and 1.4 per cent more butterfat than when watered only once a day.

Mr. Woodward also reports that the increase in milk production as a result of more frequent watering was more marked in the case of the good producers than in the case of the low producers.

Interior Bull Never Worth Keeping in Herd

Many inferior bulls are finding themselves installed as herd sires these days, probably much to their surprise, because they are the kind that usually go to the stock yards at a fairly early age. In fact, a considerable number of these have been to the stock yards, only to be rescued by some kind-hearted truck driver and taken back out in the country as a herd sire. Of course, the fact that the truck driver is able to make a few dollars by saving him for a while may also be a contributing cause.

It's a good deal for the live stock trucker, but it's a tough deal for the dairyman. The bull in service now will determine largely the ability of the herd four and five years from now. It will mean the placing in the dairy barn of milk-manufacturing machines that lack the capacity to turn out large quantities of product or profit.

Spray for Flies

According to J. J. Davis, entomologist at Purdue university, a good home-made spray for keeping flies off cows can be prepared by mixing one pint of oil of tar with one gallon of used crank case oil.

Another recommended spray may be made by mixing one gallon of fish oil, two ounces of oil of tar, two ounces of oil of pennyroyal and one-half pint of kerosene.

The most satisfactory way to apply these is with a small compressed air sprayer that can be obtained at most stores handling spray materials.

There are several other reliable commercial fly sprays on the market.

Grain Sheaf Hay

Oat sheaves are very nearly equivalent in feeding value to a combination of equal parts by weight of threshed oats and oat straw. Oat sheaves alone are hardly a satisfactory dairy cow ration. The wheat sheaves will prove to be a little more nutritious than the oats. Horses can be carried quite satisfactorily on either oat sheaves or wheat sheaves provided they are not at hard work.

Some extra grain for cows is needed while they are milking. A mixture of equal parts of barley, oats, wheat, wheat bran and oilmeal will prove very satisfactory.

Intestinal Trouble

Scours or diarrhea is merely the visible symptom of an intestinal irritation, either caused by food or parasites. Cows may contract a disease known as John's disease, or the trouble may be caused by faulty food. If you have much trouble, we suggest you see your veterinarian or write your state veterinarian. In the meantime, feed the cows one teaspoonful slaked lime, one tablespoonful whole flaxseed and a tablespoonful charcoal in ground oats once daily. A little sugar added will help also. Examine the hay for mold, or the pasture for fern, etc.—Idaho Farmer.

Feeding Minerals to Cows

Tests at the United States dairy experiment station, at Beltsville, Md., indicate that if cows are allowed free access to a palatable bone meal, they will tend to adjust their consumption to meet their needs. Good producing cows fed a ration estimated to be deficient in phosphorus, ate generous quantities of bone meal at the experiment farm, while poor producers having a smaller demand for minerals ate very little.—Wallace's Farmer.

NOTED CASTLE NOW RESTAURANT

Mansion Once a Favorite With Prussian Kings.

Potsdam.—One of Prussia's finest mansions, Castle Marquardt, near Potsdam, is the last victim of the economic crisis. In its heyday it was the favorite sojourn of Prussian kings, haunted by a ghost which historians now believe to have been a faded one. Castle Marquardt will be turned into a restaurant and week-end hotel because its present owner, a German industrialist, cannot afford its upkeep.

Castle Marquardt's history goes back to the fifteenth century, when it was owned by the Baron Zabel von Schorin. In the following centuries it frequently changed hands.

In 1795 Castle Marquardt came into the possession of its most famous owner, Gen. von Bismarck, who declared it his favorite of King Frederick William II of Prussia. It was then that the ghost which was to play a prominent role in Prussian history.

The ghostly apparition was first seen, or rather heard, in a small stone building, the so-called Blue grotto, adjoining Castle Marquardt. Hidden away among thick shrubbery in the beautiful eighteenth century park, the interior was laid out with aure stones. The grotto received its only light from a costly crystal chandelier, which, together with the blue of the aure stones, produced mystic and beautiful color effects.

It was into this setting that Gen. von Bismarck used to lead the romantically inclined Prussian king to attend ghostly midnight sessions. As soon as the king entered the grotto mysterious off-stage music could be heard apparently coming from nowhere. When the ghostly tunes had subsided, the king would invariably address the ghost, asking him how best to rule the country. As if by magic, an invisible voice would answer in muffled whispers. More often than not the king would follow the apparently heaven sent counsel.

It was not long after the general's death that Castle Marquardt's pet ghost was unmasked. It was found that the Blue grotto, scene of the ghostly sessions, had double walls behind which a man of flesh and blood could comfortably hide, play a harp and answer any questions put to him. Thus, with the aid of a co-plottor, the crafty general for a while ruled the destinies of Prussia.

After changing hands several times, Castle Marquardt was finally bought by Dr. Peter Louis Ravens, descendant of an old French Protestant family which fled to Germany in the days of the wars of religion and received the special protection of the Prussian king. The present day Ravens is a leading industrialist. Hard times are forcing him now to let the historic mansion to a British wine merchant, who is turning it into a restaurant for Berlin's week-enders.

Another German palace, that of Count Hermann Griebener in Berlin, has closed its gates and the luxurious building in rococo style will be sold at auction. In pre-war days Count Griebener, with a yearly income of $250,000, was one of the richest men in Germany. War inflation, and the crisis ate away the Griebener fortune.

Bringing City Methods to Forests

Modern firefighting apparatus is introduced in remote mountain districts of British Columbia to combat the blazes that have proved so disastrous in the past. A number of these light trucks have been put into service by the Canadian government's parks department. The motor engine is used to operate the automatic pumps which can throw a powerful stream upon the blazing bush.

Hero of Plane Crash Is Given 4 Months in Jail

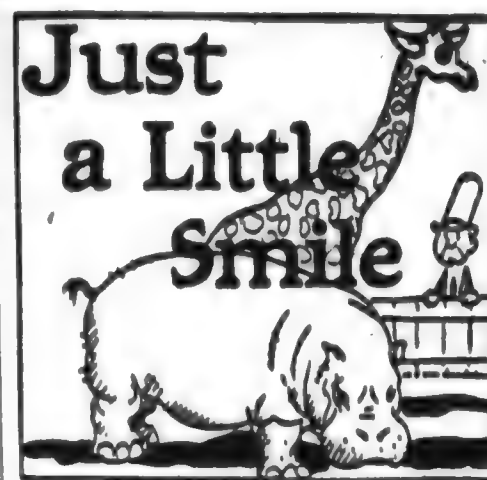

London.—During a flight over Iraq, in 1925, a Royal Air Force airplane crashed in flames from 4,000 feet. The pilot was badly burned and the observer, Ridley Oake Stanton, twenty-five, carried him through the desert for two days. The pilot died at a dressing station. Stanton was in a hospital for six months.

Early this year the same Stanton climbed over the roofs of several houses near marble arch and jumped ten feet from one roof to another, with a 50-foot drop between, to steal ten shillings' worth of jewelry.

He was bound over to be of good behavior, but normal life becomes dull to a man who must have thrills. Recently he climbed up an elevator shaft at St. John's wood, crawled along a narrow ledge to a bedroom window and stole a fur coat worth $1,250. He was sentenced to four months.

Burglars Steal Used False Teeth From Store

Memphis, Tenn.—Police are wondering what the burglar gained by taking two upper sets of second hand false teeth from the store operated by J. Cabay, furniture dealer. Nothing else was missed.

OBSERVANT

Uncle was testing his small nephew's knowledge.

"Jack," he asked, "what does A B C spell?"

"Nothing," was the reply.

"What does L M N spell?" was uncle's next question.

"Nothing," was Jack's answer.

Jack's smaller sister, who had been an interested listener, then spoke.

"It seems to me that there are lots of ways of spelling nothing," she said.

NOT CONFINED TO INDIA

"There are men in India who hold their hands over their heads all the time."

"That's nothing—men do that in Chicago all the time, too."

A Long Wait

The foreman gardener was inspecting the work of his newly engaged assistant.

"Did you water the century plants?" he asked.

"Yes," said the assistant, "I did that."

"Very good," said the foreman. "In future it will be your job to look after them. And don't forget this, if those plants don't bloom in 1927 it will be your fault."

As Usual

One of the spectators at a football match had his pocket picked. As the thief was bolting he collared him and escorted him to a policeman.

"You say this man stole your watch," said the policeman. "What distinguishing feature was there about the watch?"

"It contained my sweetheart's photograph," replied the man.

"Ah, I see! A woman in the case."

SUGGEST SILVER

Miss Asketh—Why do you poets always speak of the moon as silver?

Mr. Scribble—It's because of the quarters and halves, I suppose.

Taking No Chances

Mr. Swiggs—Er, that is, cancer I will you—

"Why, yes, my boy; you can have her."

"How's that? Have whom?"

"My daughter, of course. You want to marry her, don't you?"

"No, sir; I just wanted you to endorse my note for $1,000."

"Certainly not. Why, I hardly know you."

So She Kept Still

Vera—Did he threaten you when he kissed you?

Winifred—Yes; he said if I screamed, he wouldn't kiss me again.—London Answers.

Praise?

Mudd—Dauber does very realistic work, doesn't he?

Muck—Yes; those apples he painted two months ago are now said by critics to be rotten.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Pa Describes Him

"Pa," said Johnny, "what is a practical joker?"

"He's a sap, son," replied his dad, "who has a bum sense of humor and no sense at all."

Ouch! Pass the Lard

Bill—Did your wife leave you on the carpet for getting in so late last night?

Jack—Well, it may have been the crapper she had me on, but it seemed more like a red-hot stove to me!—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Protection

Bish—How does your next door neighbor manage to have such a nice garden?

Tish—He buys my chickens from me as fast as I get them.—Answers.

When Husbands Slip

THIS woman's husband was run down, irritable, unhappy. She didn't know what was the matter with him. It worried her. She was afraid he would lose his job.

Her mother-in-law suggested she buy Fellows' Syrup and see that her husband took it regularly every day.

She saw it build up his vitality, ease the nerve strain, pep up vigor and appetite. She recommended it now to all her friends.

Outlines Six Steps for Land Use Plan

"Much lower prices for what he sells, higher prices for what he buys, and higher taxes—these are the upper and nether millstones which are slowly grinding the life out of rural America," said Prof. M. L. Wilson of Montana State College in a radio address, over an NBC network in the program of the National Advisory Council on Radio in Education. "Fortunately, there is a way out," Wilson stated, "but the way demands a reversal of the basic land policy of the nation."

The speaker presented six steps in a program for land utilization.

First in the list of six fundamentals suggested by Professor Wilson is the repeal of the Homestead Act and the enactment of a new national land policy bill which, he pointed out, is essential because there is no more land in the public domain suitable for farming and home building.

"Secondly, each state should classify its lands, develop a state-wide land use plan and institute a program of action," Professor Wilson advised. The third step is that poor land, as determined by land utilization studies, should be taken out of production.

Additional steps in the plan presented by Professor Wilson include the modification of land taxes and reorganization of local government; the withdrawal of poor lands from production to solve the surplus problem. Suggesting how this might be carried out, he explained the "Domestic Allotment Plan" which calls for the issuance of certain allotments to farmers to grow the kinds of crops they have been growing, the farmer to receive tariff protection on the allotted acres. Finally, Wilson recommended part time farming and the decentralization of industry.

To prevent men who are farming unsuitable land from joining the ranks of the unemployed, Professor Wilson stated that industry must adopt a new policy coupling industry with small farm agriculture. Small farms, located near industrial plants, he said, would not produce the great food staples of which there is a surplus.

Ingenious Camouflage

A French lieutenant who served through the World War recently demonstrated in Paris the advantages of his new camouflage invention where-by, in a short time, a pedestrian or soldier can be transformed into a shock of grain, heap of leaves, a bunch of newspapers, tree stump or what not while walking. His name is Georges Felix, and his invention consists of a kind of a net that weighs less than a pound, and when not used for camouflage purposes can be employed in numerous other ways.

Good for Nothing

"When I am big, mamma, I'm going to marry a doctor or a minister."

"Why, dear?"

"Cause if I marry a doctor I can get well for nothing, and if I marry a minister I can be good for nothing."

Miracle Plays in Streets

Clergymen of England are proposing that, to bring religion to the man in the street who does not bother to go to church, there be revived the old idea of the religious or miracle plays, and produce them on city streets. They suggest that the plays could be staged on trucks placed at the end of blind streets. The sponsors of the idea are certain that the productions would attract crowds, but their possible reaction is a question being discussed. Colonel Hamilton of the Salvation Army told the Religious Drama Society that stum audiences would have to be educated, as he was not certain as to what they would do. The success of open-air Shakespearean performances has encouraged the miracle-play backers and the idea may be tried this summer.

Radio Experts Not Needed

Anyone would be able to send dot and dash code messages by radio or telegraph by using an invention reported perfected by Jacques Desreux, French inventor. Obviating the need of a trained operator, a series of knobs turned as on a radio receiving set would be turned to spell out the messages. The letters are indicated at points on the knob and the dot-dash transmission is automatic.

South Africa Offers a New Kind of Cow

Johannesburg, South Africa.—The farmers of South Africa are interested in a new hybrid on the ranch of Captain Helme, a settler of Westminster in Orange Free State.

A cross between an eland, one of Africa's giant antelopes, and an ordinary domestic Friesian cow has yielded the first authentic "Frieland."

This new hybrid promises to be an animal suitable for the more tropical regions of the continent.

Frat Initiates Member Voted in 56 Years Ago

Berkeley, Calif.—Fifty-six years after he was voted into membership, Dr. Edmund O'Neill, emeritus professor of chemistry at the University of California, was initiated into the Phi Delta Theta college fraternity.

Nearly three score years ago, when the professor was a sophomore at the university, he was pledged to the fraternity and accepted for membership. But, before the ceremony was performed, the Phi Delta Theta house was burned and all records destroyed.

It was five years later that the chapter again became active, and during that time, Professor O'Neill had been graduated from school.

His initiation was urged by alumni recently, so the professor, who was graduated in 1879, again became a "fresh" in the fraternity.

California Makes New Mark as Healthy State

Sacramento.—With a death rate of 11.3 per thousand population, California established the best health record in the history of the nation.

There were 67,518 deaths last year as compared to 68,178, an increase of only 1,335 despite an estimated gain in population of 200,000, records of the state department of public health show.

The state's death rate has decreased steadily since 1900 when the rate was 14.4 per thousand.

Royal Parrot Deletes Sea Quips From Talk

London.—King George's pet parrot is no longer a debutante. She is forty, and was bought in Fort Said when the king was in the navy.

Originally, Charlotte knew some of the least publishable nautical phrases and talked a little French, but lately she has confined herself to asking visitors to the palace: "What about it?"

No More Tea Parties?

Boston.—Boston Harbor no longer may be used as a "washbasin." A law, effective this month, prohibits throwing of refuse into the harbor, under penalty of fines of $20 to $100.

Test New Anemia Treatment

Experiments Being Watched by Medical Men.

Cincinnati.—New light has been thrown upon the cause and treatment of pernicious anemia by members of the staff of the college of medicine, University of Cincinnati, through investigations whose preliminary results were announced at the university.

Studies along this line have been carried out by Dr. Roger S. Morris, professor of internal medicine, and his associates. They emphasize that it is still in an experimental stage.

As a result of these observations a new treatment for pernicious anemia may be developed, the announcement stated. Medical authorities throughout the country are said to be watching the work with interest.

Findings will be reported by Doctor Morris in a paper to be presented before the Association of American Physicians, meeting at Atlantic City.

Early stages of the work have been outlined in the Cincinnati Journal of Medicine and the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Explained in nontechnical terms the medical college experiments have shown that when a concentrated solution of normal human gastric juice is given by intramuscular injection to anemic patients almost immediate improvement sets in.

Results are manifested by an increase in the number of red blood cells and hemoglobin, the coloring matter of the blood. There is also an increase in strength, gain in weight, and marked improvement in the general condition of the patient.

What effect it may produce on the spinal cord changes, frequently present in this disease, has not yet been determined. The investigation is expected to continue at least two years.

The observations indicate a substance present in the gastric juice of normal individuals which tends to keep the red blood cells and hemoglobin at a normal level through stimulation of the bone marrow.

Apparently this substance is absent in cases of pernicious anemia. The lack of it probably accounts for the development of the anemia, the investigators believe.

The university scientists have named this substance "addilin," after Thomas Addison, who described pernicious anemia, in the first half of the nineteenth century.

Horrors! Expert Says Helen's Feet Were Big

London.—Helen of Troy's face may have launched a thousand ships, but she probably had large feet, according to Dr. H. J. Van Praagh.

"It is difficult to imagine why small feet have always been considered a sign of beauty," he told the Incorporated Society of Chiropodists.

"Tribly had large feet and was proud of them. I believe also that Helen of Troy had large feet.

"Modern court shoes," he added, "are worth thousands of pounds a year to chiropodists."

Air Travel Advocate Never Rode in Plane

Cleveland, Ohio.—Congressman Robert Crosser of Cleveland, one of the nation's foremost advocates of air travel and author of the pending merchant air ship bill in the house of representatives, never has been up in an airplane. However, he has ridden in blimps and he considers this lighter-than-air way of cruising one of the safest, regarding it as the future way of getting to Europe, or Asia, in a great, big hurry.

Forest Rangers in West Will Carry Radio Sets

Pasadena, Calif.—Forest rangers working out of headquarters here will be equipped, this year with portable receiving and transmitting radio sets strapped to their backs, Chief Dispatcher V. P. Vetter has revealed.

Each receiving set will weigh only ten pounds, and will enable the fire fighters to keep in touch with headquarters. They were proved valuable in field work last year.

Will Give Mourner's Feast

Swansea, Wales.—Morgan Curtis provided in his will for a hotel banquet to mourners who attended his funeral.

PROTECT THE LITTER

(By Prof. W. B. Krueck)
Many poultrymen have a great deal of difficulty in keeping litter dry around the drinking fountains in their poultry houses. The water which drips from the birds' wattles or beaks, after they have taken a drink, has a tendency to drop into the litter and consequently is soon distributed thru the entire poultry house and complicates the problem of keeping dry litter.

A great deal of this trouble can be avoided without much additional expense. If an ordinary barrel is sawed into, and a platform built in the bottom of the barrel upon which the drinking fountains can be placed, the birds will use the edge of the barrel upon which to crawl when taking their drink, and the water from the beak and the wattles will drip into the bottom of the barrel. This will catch the waste water and will keep it out of the litter. About once a week the fountain can be removed from the barrel, and the barrel can be taken outside and emptied. Thus the litter is protected and the question of eliminating moisture to some extent is solved.

Such an arrangement would also be quite desirable where water fountains are placed out in the open yard. If the soil becomes damp around the drinking fountain, it acts as an ideal place for the spread and development of disease whereas a dry soil is usually much more sanitary. Feeders who are using this arrangement like it very much and find it very economical.

In view of the fact that an egg is over 65% water, water is a very important factor in egg production. Many feeders do not supply enough water fountains since they feel that there is some expense involved, but with a fountain of this kind an ordinary water pail can be used to very good advantage and the cost of the watering equipment is very low. More water fountains, convenience to mash hoppers mean healthier birds and better eggs.

JOHN GRESHAM'S GIRL

By CONCORDIA MERREL

THE STORY

By chance James Lee meets Lucy Gresham, daughter of Sir John Gresham, wealthy ship builder, Lee, unjustly accused of robbing the Gresham firm, was sent to prison. He blames Oliver Ames, Lucy's cousin, and Gresham's manager, and seeks revenge. Lee inherits wealth, and in compliance with the will, changes his name from Warrington. He secures an invitation to the girl's birthday party. Lucy is practically engaged to Ames. She meets Lee, who makes love to her. With Gresham's approval, Lucy and Lee are married. Lee stuns the girl by telling her he does not love her, and hates her "whole breed." She hears the story of his wrongs, and his determination to be avenged. She believes in his innocence of the crime for which he was convicted, and sees a fitness of character in him. "Linforth," rival of Gresham's, shows a determination to crush its competitor. Lee tells Lucy he is "Linforth."

CHAPTER V—Continued

"So it is under your orders that Linforth wrecked our Norwegian timber deal!"

"Under my orders, and with my money," he assured her. "And it will be under my orders and with my money that Linforth will wreck every deal that Gresham's attempt to make. It will be under my orders and with my money that Linforth will bring Gresham's to ruin. Linforth is, now, a hundred-fold the enemy of Gresham's."

"She understood now. She had wondered whether she should ask point-blank what his scheme of revenge was, he would tell her. Well, he had told her. And it certainly was ugly hearing. But she would not let herself betray how deeply she was troubled; she made herself speak steadily and coolly as she asked:

"And Perry has just found that out?"

"Yes."

"And thinks . . ." she broke off.

"That I'm playing a dirty game," he finished for her, with no mincing of words.

"That is why you were interested in how I found father yesterday," Lucy said, thinking back.

"I knew that Ames would just have got the news that the deal had fallen through," he replied.

"Linforth," she said, after a moment, "has always been out to smash Gresham's."

Their eyes met, very straight and challenging.

"And Linforth," he said slowly, letting each word fall clear and cold, "will now have the means to make the smashing thorough and effective."

She drew a breath. So this was his plan. Well, anyway, she knew. And better a thousand times, to know it all, than to be groping in the dark.

"Yes," she said, quietly, "I think whatever you set out to do, you would do . . . very thoroughly. I am quite prepared for that, Jim."

There was a considerable silence, then Lee said abruptly:

"Now that you have found out the dirty game I am playing, you'll do as Perry is doing, I suppose."

"Leave you?" she asked. "No, Jim, I shall not do that."

"Then what will you do? Tell your father who I am, and what I am, and just how I am out to smash him?"

She didn't answer immediately. The position, for her, was extremely difficult. She was between her loyalty to her father and her love for this man she had married. Could she stand by and let Jim ruin her father and say nothing? On the other hand, how was she to show him up to her father and probably to the whole world, as the hideous revengeful monster injustice had made of him, and which she knew, with every fiber of her, was utterly untrue to his inmost nature? It was a really appalling position.

"No," she said slowly, "I don't think I shall say anything about it to father."

"Are you going to stand by and let me smash him, then?" he challenged.

"And I don't think I shall do that, either," she replied in the same slow way.

He looked at her, frowning; suddenly puzzled. There was something beneath her quiet manner that he didn't understand.

"Then what are you going to do?" he broke out, with irritation.

"I don't know, Jim. I only know that I am not going to give you away to daddy, because, I . . . well, because I couldn't. And I don't see how I am to stand by and let you smash him, either."

"It's a bit—of a predicament, then, isn't it?" he said roughly.

She glanced up at him quickly.

"Yes. But life's been rather a . . . what you said . . . ever since . . . I came into it?"

"Yes."

"Then are you going to pit yourself against me?" he demanded, out of a pause. "Set yourself in opposition to me?"

"And I don't think I shall do that," she said again. "I don't think I ever could do that, Jim. I couldn't ever be in opposition to you, Jim; I don't feel that way."

"You did last night," he muttered, as if the words came against his will.

"You shrank from me again just as you did when we were in the country, as if my merest touch were . . . humiliating."

She looked at him steadily for a moment, then quite simply answered him:

"You do not love me, Jim."

He spoke as if the words came against his will.

"Do you still . . . love me?"

Her color deepened. It wasn't a fair question, but she answered it without resentment.

"Since you ask me . . . yes, I do," she said steadily. "I don't think love dies very easily. It has a power of its own which is apt to be mercilessly stronger than . . . well, one's reason, for instance."

She was startled by the effect that had upon him. He shut his hands to fasten on his mouth worked oddly.

"I don't believe that," he cried with a touch of passionate rebellion in his words. "One's reason could always kill one's . . . love . . . It must be so! One couldn't be caught and held; bound hand and foot, by more emotion. Against one's reason, against one's will . . . against everything one had hoped and worked for!" He caught a breath and stopped abruptly, wheeling round, away from her, and plunging his fists deep into his pockets.

She looked at him, amazed at the feeling he had shown, and stood, uncertain whether to stay or to go. Since he did not move she decided to go, and went toward the door. Halfway, though, she stopped and turned back.

"Jim," she said slowly, "suppose you should ever love anyone . . ."

"I was," he said without turning.

"And you're going to find your schemes for revenge are hitting back at you?"

"How?"

"Well, they made you marry me . . ."

He looked at her, frowning, suddenly puzzled.

and you do not love me. . . . Is it going to be worth it?"

"I shall never love."

"You cannot be sure of that," she argued.

"I am sure of it. I have proved it!" he cried, facing her suddenly.

She looked at him, startled.

"Proved it?" she asked. "Then you have . . . loved?"

His face went curiously set.

"And conquered," he said, as if he defied her to contradict this.

"I . . . I didn't know," she said, stammering a little. "I'm awfully sorry . . . Jim."

She added that impulsively. There was something so tragic to her in this splendid man, being so burnt up with the desire for revenge; it was such an appalling waste of fine possibilities; such a frittering of strength. . . .

"You needn't be sorry," he flashed back quickly. "I'm safe; because here I am more deeply in my heart than love could ever be . . ."

"Safe? For such a reason! How was she ever to win him back to a real safety! Hope came through what he had told her: that he had loved."

Milton High in Ranks of Lovers of Liberty

Milton combined in his temperament the artist and the reformer. His love of beauty was excited only by his love of duty. William Lyon Phelps writes, in the New York Evening Post.

The watchword of his life was liberty. Milton was so staunch a fighter for political liberty that in many parts of Europe he was regarded as an anarchist. His "Lionel Lincoln" was publicly burned at Paris and at Toulouse. When King Louis XIV required his ambassador at London to report on all the distinguished writers in England, the report contained "one named Milton, who has made himself more infamous by his dangerous writings than the murderers and assassins of the king."

Milton always stood for civil, domestic and religious liberty; and, like many sincere lovers of liberty, he had a magnificent talent for the inopportune. Nearly all the poets wrote odes in praise of Cromwell during his reign; but when King Charles II returned, these poets hastened under cover and saluted in verse the new regime. But in the very year of the king's return, 1660, Milton published a pamphlet called "A Ready and Easy Way to Establish a Free Commonwealth."

Long Acquaintance

Bobby Joe was playing in the front yard one day when the next-door neighbor stopped to talk to her.

Knowing that she was visiting relatives who were new to the neighborhood, he asked whether the young lady on the porch was her aunt.

"Oh, no," replied Bobby Joe, "that's my grandmother."

"But she can't be old enough to be your grandmother! Are you sure about that?"

With a nod Bobby Joe resumed her play, setting the question with, "Oh, yes, she's my grandmother. I know, 'cause I've known her for a long, long time."

"Don Quixote" Longest

One of the earliest popular novels, "Don Quixote," is the longest. It contains 481,000 words.

There was hope for any man who could love.

She left him then, because there seemed nothing further to say.

Later on, St. Abb came to her to say good-by. She gave him her hand, said she was sorry that he was going, and seemed as if she meant to let it go at that. But after a moment's hesitation she said:

"I've seen him, and I can understand your indignation against him. I was going to ask you to stay, at first, but I won't, because I don't believe the situation would be bearable if you did."

"Thank you," he said quietly. "I'm glad you aren't going to ask that of me. I couldn't. Lucy, it's amazing that he can do it! From sheer business greed . . ."

"That's where you are mistaken," she told him gently. "Business greed has nothing whatever to do with this. Jim isn't greedy. He is a splendid man. . . . Only . . ."

Her voice broke slightly. "I told you that probably I knew more about this than you do. I do. Only I couldn't make you understand without going into a lot that I'm not ready to go into yet. But, Perry, don't condemn him too sweepingly. Think of him as gently as you can. . . ."

CONCORD

People are beginning to pick strawberries.

Mrs. Dell Draggoo was in Auburn Monday afternoon shopping. Concord and Auburn had quite a ball game Sunday afternoon. 9 to 10 in favor of Auburn.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Johnson spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Johnson.

Some of the ladies around here attended the Farm Bureau picnic at Eckhart Park at Auburn, Tuesday.

Mrs. Lottie Bassett and family spent Sunday with her son, Virgil and family, celebrating his birthday. Virgil has been sick with la grippe but is better at this writing.

Mrs. Josie Van Fleit, of Garrett called on Mrs. Diadem Bone Monday evening. Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. Will Scott, of Hicksville called in the same home. They report Wayne Scott quite poorly.

Ford Jackson and family, Mrs. Chas. Jackson and daughter were Sunday guests in the Holl Jackson home. While getting dinner, Mrs. Jackson and Iris went to the cellar to get some food, a snake, three feet long, black and white spots, coiled itself on the steps to greet them when ascending the stairs. A yell from Iris brought her father and he shot the snake. Some thrill to be sure.

THE HELL BOUND TRAIN

Tom Gray lay down on a bar room floor, Having drank so much he could drink no more, And fell asleep with a troubled brain To dream that he rode on the hell bound train.

The engine with blood was red and damp, And dimly lit with a brimstone lamp.

An imp, for fuel was shoveling bones, And the furnace roared with a thousand groans; The boiler was filled with lager beer,

And the devil himself was the engineer; The passengers made such a motley crew, Church member, atheist, Gentle and Jew,

Rich men in broadcloth, beggars in rags, Handsome young ladies and withered hags,

Yellow and black men, red and white, Chained together a horrible sight; Faster and faster the engine flew, Wilder and wilder the country grew, Louder and louder the thunder crashed, Brighter and brighter the lightning flashed; Hotter and hotter the air became; Till the clothes were burned from each quivering frame.

And in the distance they heard a yell, "Ha, ha," cracked the devil, "We're nearing hell!"

And oh how the passengers shrieked with pain, And begged the devil to stop the train, But he capered about and danced with glee,

And laughed and joked at their agony. "My faithful friends, you've done my work And the devil can never a pay-day shirk,

You've bullied the weak, and robbed the poor, And the hungry brother have turned from your door,

You've gathered up gold where the canker rusts And given full vent to your hellish lusts,

You've drank and rioted and murdered and lied And mocked at God in your hellish pride

You've paid your full fare, so I'll carry you through For it is only right that you get your due, For every laborer is worth his hire. So I'll land you safe in my lake of fire. Where my fieryimps will torment you forever, And all in vain you will sigh for a Savior."

Then Tow woke with an awful cry His clothes soaked wet, and his hair standing high.

And he prayed as he had never prayed before To be saved from hell and the devil's power;

And his crying and praying was not in vain, For he never more rode on a hell bound train.

THE ASHES FROM WOOD ARE VALUABLE

Wood ashes are worth money and the thrifty gardener may well use the deposit from the fireplace or wood stove to supplement the fertilizer requirements of the home garden.

Wood ashes are of value as a fertilizer because of the potash and lime they contain. For every 10 pounds of unleached wood ashes you spread over the garden, five pounds of potash will be added. Your root crops particularly will be benefited. At the same time the lime in the ashes will sweeten your soil and improve its texture. Save all your wood ashes until spring, then just after harrowing, sift, spread them over the garden, 5 to 10 pounds to the square rod and work them in with harrow and rake.

Coal ashes have no fertilizing value, but in case of heavy clay soils, if sifted lightly over the surface and worked in, they will lighten the soil so that air and water may more easily penetrate. Because of the improvement in texture of the clay it will be better for root crops and easier to cultivate.

HORSE SENSE

Manure piled outside of the stable windows gives no farm relief. Get it out on the land.

Clover failures mean money wasted. Acid soil is one cause of failure. Liming acid soils saves many clover crops.

Cultivation is not a satisfactory remedy for a pasture that is called "sod bound." In such pastures the sod has become too thin because through years of pasturing or overgrazing the fertility is depleted. The use of a high grade fertilizer will strengthen and thicken the sod and increase the pasture carrying capacity.

Frequent gathering of eggs helps prevent spoilage. Bordeaux mixture is the best spray for fungus diseases on vegetables.

Don't set too many articles in the next orchard. A full package of fruit is more easily sold than a slack pack.

Alfalfa responds to top-dressing. Apply a phosphate-potash mixture after the first cutting.

Losses can be reduced and growth increased in small tree plantations of the windbreak type by cultivating the small trees during the growing period. Care should be taken, however, not to cultivate too close to the roots.

Nothing will take the place of a strong back in the strawberry patch.

Let the other fellow pray—you spray. How much does it cost you to produce a bushel? It's a good thing to know.

The oiling of the streets, this year, in St. Joe has brought forth many compliments from its citizens. A heavier grade of oil was used, and applying hot, under pressure is bound to give better results. The town board appreciates the attitude of its citizens in this matter, and while our supply of 6,500 gallons was exhausted before our streets were fully taken care of, the board will endeavor to take care of this as soon as possible, so that all may enjoy having their dust fully taken care of.

SISTER OF ST. JOE LADY
DIES AT AUBURN

The death of Mrs. William Ludwig occurred at the residence in Auburn, Friday morning at 2:10 o'clock as a result of a growth on the liver. Ailing for a year, she had been bedfast for the last six weeks.

Mrs. Ludwig was a native of Jackson township, where she was born sixty-eight years ago. She was Rachel Alice Maurer and she was married September 12, 1893, to Mr. Ludwig. They have resided in Auburn at their present address ever since their marriage.

Surviving besides the husband are a stepson, William Raymond Ludwig of Chicago, a brother, Simeon H. Maurer of Auburn, and a sister, Mrs. Ann Dilley of St. Joe.

The funeral was held Sunday afternoon at the Church of the Nazarene, the Rev. Grant Barton officiating.

DEKALB REPUBLICANS STOOD THEIR GROUND

The thirteen delegates from DeKalb county to the republican state convention voted against the plank in the state party platform calling for the resubmission of the eighteenth amendment and repeal of the Indiana bone dry law. Of the Allen county delegates 45 voted for the plank and six were opposed. In Noble county five voted for resubmission and seven opposed. Steuben and LaGrange county delegations voted solidly against the plank. In Whitley county one delegate voted for the plank and eight were opposed.

Wednesday night at midnight, the fishing season opened, and anglers galore were seen all over the lakes in this section of the state. Due to the warm weather, the spawning season is earlier than usual, and many of the parent fish have gone to deeper waters, but there seems to be more fish than usual.

The farmers of DeKalb county are protesting the recent real estate assessment made by the county and township assessors at a mass meeting, called for Saturday afternoon at one o'clock. A similar meeting was held Wednesday evening, this week at the court house, to discuss ways of solving our tax problems, headed by Dr. Shook of Spencerville as the temporary chairman.

The exterior work about the erection of the addition to the St. Joe Filling Station, is completed and cleaning up the grounds, has taken place. Mr. Yeiser will finish the inside of the building with his men and possibly in a couple weeks will be ready for business. The addition is a fine piece of work and was much needed.

After July 6, the first class postage rate will be increased to 3 cents, and of course there will be a great slump in sale of stamps in this class. Guess folks will appreciate getting three post cards from you instead of one letter. Then there is much of the advertising done today by first class mail, and that will be cut out. So we wonder just where Postmaster General Brown expects to gather in enough money to balance his budget. The parcel post department never was self supporting. It took from the express company, their patrons, and at such a reduced rate, and from the freight department of the railroads likewise, that all three of these carriers are hard up.

COUNTY HOME BUREAU
ENTERTAINED BY CONCORD

Pleasant memories will linger of the annual Home Bureau meeting which was held at Eckhart Park, June 7, by the members of the different townships of the county with Concord township as hostess. Mrs. Mary Krise, Mrs. Clara Foltz and Mrs. Arline Koch met the ladies of the thirteen different townships and extended to them a warm welcome.

The short time before dinner was enjoyed in a social way. Mrs. Millie Shull assisted by a very efficient committee arranged the long pavilion table with beautiful flowers of the season used for decoration and all the good edibles of the farm were in evidence. Mrs. Lou Woodcox presided at the coffee urn. About 175 ladies and children were served in cafeteria style at the noon hour. In the afternoon the following program was given:

Concord township young folks composed an orchestra which rendered different numbers, they also accompanied Miss Helen Washler and Miss Ilene Gaff who pleased the audience with a duet; a hearty welcome was then given by the Concord township president, Mrs. Gertrude eBorthwick, closing with a poem entitled, "A friend by the side of the road."

Roll call of townships was given and responded to by singing "The Farmer in the Dell," with Mrs. Cora Curie at the piano. Franklin township next on program gave a playlet with Mrs. Effie Shultz and Mrs. Phila Wolfe impersonating a negress, they responded to an encore by using one verse of "Brighten the Corner Where You Are," accompanied by tin pan music. A cornet solo from Jackson township and a reading by the county president, Mrs. Lola Carper, entitled "Shrine at Mother's Knee." A musical number by Mrs. Grace Sheffer and Mrs. Mayola Kinsey of Concord township. A reading by Lucile Clum of Grant. Troy township was represented by Mrs. Elmer Mills and Mrs. Mary Sharp in a playlet using for their encore a parody on "Mother, O Mother Come Home." Keyser township was next represented by a reading. Richland township young people presented "A day on the farm" in a pantomime. Union, was represented by Mrs. John Horn giving a reading entitled "What Is Am." The afternoon entertainment was closed by all singing, The More We Get Together. Jackson township will be hostess next year.

SPECIAL HOME BUREAU MEETING

There will be a meeting of the Ladies Home Bureau at the home of Mrs. Grace Sheffer next Friday June 17, for the benefit of those who wish to cut slips and slip patterns. All wishing to cut patterns will please bring paper, also shears. Those who may desire to cut the slip, and have it fitted by the project leaders, may bring their material and have it fitted.

The ladies may gather any time after dinner, as this will not be a regular meeting and work may be started at any time. Any lady not a member of the Home Bureau who may wish the pattern or a slip cut, is welcome to meet with Mrs. Sheffer and secure patterns or a fitting.

TAXES, AND THEN SOME MORE TAXES

The new tax bill, designed to increase the revenue of the federal government, again will be a hard blow to the common people. Practically everything we use will bear some form of a tax. Tires, oil, gasoline, electricity for the home business, or industrial consumption will carry a 3 per cent levy.

The tax on conveyances, effective June 21, is 50 cents on items of more than $100 and up to $500, and 50 cents for each additional $500 or fraction thereof.

"Conveyances" are defined as follows: Deed, instrument or writing, delivered on or before July 1, 1934 (unless deposited in escrow before April 1, 1932); whereby any lands, tenements, or other realty sold shall be granted, assigned, transferred or otherwise conveyed to or vested in, the purchaser of any other person.

This provision does not apply to any instrument or writing given to secure a debt.

All the rest of the new taxes become effective on June 21. They are:

POOR SUSIE

Poor Susie! At least that is what people who didn't know the whole story always called her. That's what Aunt Mary said, too, one day when she was going to call on her, that is, before she went and discovered things. You see, Susie was considered to be very poor, one of a large family, with hardly enough money to buy food and clothes and certainly not enough to buy toys and things just for pleasure. It looked that way on the outside. The house was small, scarcely big enough to hold nine of them, and it was shabby and needed many repairs which Susie's father was too poor to make. But inside, it seemed that a magician had been at work. The windows were shiny and clean, letting in all the sunshine there was. Pretty crisp curtains fluttered at them, too, adding color and daintiness to each room. All the furniture was painted a fresh clean color, and all nine children were happy and smiling as if they were the richest children in the town.

The day that Aunt Mary went to see them, she took her little niece

Myrtle and her little nephew Paul. They had brought some of their toys thinking that since they had so many they would give some to these poor little children. Their surprise was great as they stepped inside the room where the children played. There were toys galore, only the toys were different from theirs. There were not only toys but useful things as well, made out of cast off boxes, scraps of colored cloth and paper, string, wire and odds and ends of all kinds that are usually thrown carelessly away. There were carts out of pasteboard boxes, with wheels made of clean milk bottle tops or of cardboard disks, and colored bright colors. There were dolls of all shapes and sizes, made from cloth tied together at neck and waist with ribbon or string, and the arms and legs made from other pieces of cloth sewn on in the right places. Just strips of cloth, fastened together and Myrtle and Paul were fascinated to see what lovely dolls they made, soft cuddly ones. Why, Myrtle's mother had lots of pieces of cloth in her attic. She could make all kinds of dolls. There were animals, whole circuses of them made from things like burdock burrs stuck together in animal shapes and then painted to resemble the particular kind of animal they were, the prickly surface being trimmed off neatly before painting them. There were quilts and covers made from scraps of cloth sewn together. There were lamp shades and curtains made of pretty colored crepe paper, the curtains tied back with crisp paper bows. Susie herself was smiling happily as she showed all the fascinating things. "You should save everything," she told Paul and Myrtle, "and see what you can think to make from it. It's much more fun than buying things." And Paul and Myrtle saw readily that indeed it was for these children were happier making their own toys than they ever were with more expensive ones. After that visit it was no longer, "Poor Susie." Instead it was "Lucky and clever Susie."

The Kitchen Cabinet

VARIOUS DISHES

A TART sauce that will be well liked because it is unusual, is prepared as follows: Dissolve a tablespoonful of powdered mustard in one-half cupful of fish stock, add two tablespoonfuls of white wine vinegar, or any vinegar will do, bring to a boil, add two lemon slices and boil a few minutes longer, add two eggs which have been beaten with a teaspoonful of water. Season with salt and pepper, heat again but do not boil.

Sauce Mouseline.—This is another good fish sauce. Beat two eggs, add one cupful of this cream, one tablespoonful of butter and pepper and salt to taste, stir until it begins to thicken. When of the proper consistency, add a tablespoonful of lemon juice and it is ready for the table.

Fish a la Marseilles.—Chop into fine bits a small sweet chili pepper and toss it about in a saucepan over the fire with a cupful of olive oil or butter. When hot add a cupful each of olives and sliced fresh or canned tomatoes. Cook fifteen minutes and add a cupful of fresh fish and half a cupful of salt fish—mackerel for example. Cover and cook for twenty minutes longer and serve with crackers.

Mutton With Spinach.—Roast a small leg of mutton, season well with a bit of garlic and plenty of salt and pepper. Add a small quantity of water in the roasting pan. When half cooked remove the meat and skim the gravy of all fat. Return the mutton to the pan, surround it with small, even sized potatoes and cook, basting the potatoes until tender and brown. Cook three pounds or less of spinach, drain and pass through a sieve. Return to the sauce pan and season with salt and pepper. Add a tablespoonful of the gravy from the pan and simmer until serving time. Serve the spinach with the potatoes, about the meat, and serve with the gravy in a sauceboat.

Great Musical Director Leads "Jobless Musicians" Band at Philadelphia's City Hall

Leopold Stokowski, musical director of the Philadelphia orchestra and idol of concert-goers throughout the world, is shown coatless and in a blue shirt, leading a band composed of some 200 odd jobless musicians, on the steps of Philadelphia's city hall. The concert was a triumph for Musicians Union Local 77, after its leader had upbraided Mayor Moore in a speech and stated that the "City fathers would not allow even Stokowski to give music away free in Reburn plaza." The city fathers showed that they were not afraid and that they enjoyed the music in the bargain.

Lights of New York

By WALTER TRUMBULL

A well-known New York newspaper woman, who lived on Perry street, owns a cat by the name of Mollie. Perry street is a homelike neighborhood, and Mollie roamed at large, known and liked by all. Frequently she would go out walking in the evening and return escorted by two or three gentlemen friends. But recently the newspaper woman and her family moved uptown. Not only that, but they moved to a fifteenth floor apartment, where there was a doorman and elevator boys in uniform. The old, care-free atmosphere was left behind. Mollie moped. The new surroundings did not suit her at all. There were none of her race with whom to exchange gossiping minnows. She had risen fifteen floors above her former admirers. But once a flirt, always a flirt. The other day, Mollie's mistress found her perched on the sill of the open living room window. Five stories below, in another window, sat a large gentleman cat, singing to Mollie in a throaty yowl—a perfect troubadour. Mollie was giving him one of those looks. For the first time since occupying her new quarters, she appeared to be contented again.

Many of those now prominent in the theatrical and moving picture world did other things before taking up their present occupations. Among New York producers, for example, George Cohan was once a boy violinist; Sam Harris, before he managed Terry McGovern, ran a laundry; Morris Guest was a ticket speculator; Bill Brady was a manager of pugilists; Winchell Smith, the playwright, was a grain salesman. Al Wood was in the spectacle business. Charles Dillingham was a hotel clerk, and a boxer. Joe and Nick Schenck were druggists.

Now, we all know what a ball is—we have played with all manner of them from infancy up—baseballs, footballs, tennis balls—but why should we call a dancing party a "ball"?

The first answer that suggests itself is that this must be a different kind of "ball"—one spelled and pronounced the same but meaning and rooted in something different.

This, however, is not the fact. Both words are identical and the allusion in the case of a dancing party is to the early practice of combining a game of ball with the dancing, derived from the game of ball played in church by the Dean and choir boys of Naples during the Feast of Fools.

The captain of bellboys in a big Florida hotel has aspirations as a dramatist. His name is Henry Trueheart, which would appear to be a good name for his hero. At any rate, every time John Golden goes South, Henry has new ideas for a play. He tells them all to Mr. Golden who, if Henry ever writes the play, undoubtedly should be its producer.

One of the extremely few inhabitants of Andros, that island of the western Bahamas where flamingos still are found in large flocks, is Percy Cavill, a perfect type of the gentleman of fortune. He has been all over the world but came originally from Australia. His brother, Tom Cavill, was a swimming champion and is credited with being the originator of the Australian crawl stroke. They tell me it was known originally as the "Cavill stroke."

Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington baseball club, told me that Sam West of Iule, Texas, not only was his best outfielder, but one of the best he had ever seen. Texas appears to be a state which turns out good outfielders. Witness, for instance, Mr. Tris Spenker.

As a matter of fact, Texas appears to turn out major league players for all positions. There is Rogers Hornsby from Winters; Gus Mancuso from Galveston; George Watkins from Palestine; Art Whitney from San Antonio; Lloyd Brown from Beeville; Pat Caraway from Gordon; Tex Carleton from Comanche; Sam Gray from Van Alstine; Fred Marberry from Streetman, and several more. Tex Rickard always used to take pleasure in recounting to me the number of athletes Texas had produced.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for June 12

JUDAH THE TRUE BROTHER

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 44:18-45:15. GOLDEN TEXT—Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!

PRIMARY TOPIC—Keeping a Promise.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Benjamin's Big Brother.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Boys and Girls Can Do for Their Family.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—True Brotherhood.

1. Joseph Severely Tests His Brethren (42:9-44:17).

Driven by sore need because of the famine, Joseph's brethren came to Egypt to buy food. As Joseph personally dispensed the food, he immediately recognized his brethren upon their arrival in Egypt, but they did not recognize him. In this test Joseph (42:9-17). He declared that they had come to see the nakedness of the land. In spite of their protests of innocence, he cast them into prison and demanded that their younger brother be brought as a proof of the truthfulness of their word.

2. He kept Simeon as a hostage (42:18-23). Joseph declared that because he feared God he sent the rest home with provisions for their families, demanding that Benjamin be brought to him. To further impress them with his wisdom and power, Joseph ordered the money of every one to be restored in his sack. Upon the discovery of the money they exclaimed, "What hath God done to us?"

3. Benjamin's peril (42:24-35). By a clever device Joseph's cup was placed in Benjamin's sack and was used as an occasion for bringing them back on the charge of theft. Convinced now of their sins and realizing the seriousness of their situation, Judah pleaded for the release of Benjamin. Benjamin was now being held as the one supposedly guilty of theft.

11. Judah's Plea (44:18-34).

1. For the turning away of Joseph's anger (vv. 18-23). In this plea he related the history of the family, their coming to Egypt, and appealed to Joseph on the basis of the effect upon Jacob, their father, if Benjamin were not permitted to accompany them home. In most powerful and persuasive language he set forth the love of Jacob for Benjamin, the son of his old age, and the sole survivor of his beloved wife, Rachel. His plea was as much for his father as for Benjamin.

2. That he himself might be kept in slavery instead of Benjamin (vv. 32, 34). In this he showed his true worth, that is, as being worthy of the trust reposed in him by Jacob his father.

III. Joseph Reveals His Identity (45:1-15).

After such a plea as Judah had made it is not surprising that Joseph could no longer restrain himself.

1. He declared his identity (vv. 1-3). This act on the part of Joseph troubled them. It ought to have made them glad. Under ordinary circumstances this would have been a time of exceeding joy, but their sins were in the way. This not only affords a beautiful example of forgiving love, but most beautifully illustrates Christ's dealing with his brethren, the Jews. When the seven years of famine came his brethren who had left him and sold him were compelled to come to him for aid. Joseph dealt severely with his brethren to test them and to bring them to repentance.

2. He bade his brethren come near to him (vv. 4-8). When he revealed himself to them, the remembrance of their sins pierced them through. How just it would have been now for Joseph to take vengeance upon them. Joseph's first question was about his father, showing that his desire was to put their thoughts far away from their crime. He invited them to come near to him and assured them that God had overruled their crime for salvation. They meant it for evil, but it was part of God's plan for good. He comforted them. This is exactly what Christ will do for his brethren, the Jews. He will become reconciled unto them and become their Saviour and Benefactor. Just as all Egypt was obliged to come to Joseph for sustenance, and become the servants of Pharaoh through him, so will all the world come to Christ for his blessing and be reconciled to God through him.

3. Joseph sent his brethren away with good news (vv. 9-15). As soon as Joseph's brethren knew him and were reconciled to him they were sent with glad tidings to their father. As soon as the Jews come to know Jesus Christ as the Messiah he will send them away to the ends of the earth with the good news of his saving grace.

JAMES MCKINLEY EIGHTY YEARS OLD MONDAY

When the sun comes up on next Monday morning and "Jim" is still on earth, he will be ringing the bell at the eighty mark. Being of an Irish descent and a man of action, he has spent most of his time in this world, working on his farm, dancing jigs, running foot races, and occasionally polishing is neighbors' chins when they needed it.

In matters of business, Mr. McKinley has a record of strict honesty and has adhered to his life's slogan, "Give a square deal and demand one." Jim says that "he has had no trouble in demanding a square deal as long as he squared himself in case he had to collect it. It's half in letting the world know what you intend to do about anything, that gets results."

As Jim stroked his gray beard and took a couple of blinks with his little blue eyes, he continued, "These eighty years have made me feel a little graveyard-ly but my Irish says that I can still out dance, out prance, out walk, and out talk or out run any 80 year old in the county and I might be induced to take on anyone in the seventy class. If you want to write my obituary now while I am here to read it, just tell the world that my two outstanding badges of honor have been honesty in business, and a member of the Democratic party, they both mean the same thing."

When the fair season comes and the different fall festivities are in full swing, you will probably see Jim oiling up his joints for a race at some gathering. In fact, the old running warrior ought not to let old age and the 80 mark hinder him in his yearly performance of a dance or a foot race.

FOUR PERSONS STRICKEN BY PARALYSIS LAST WEEK

Of the four persons stricken with paralysis about St. Joe last week, none have proved fatal, although some are in a serious condition.

Mrs. Belle Graves, mother of Mrs. Clarence Widdifield, who resides in the M. C. Blue home, suffered the third stroke Saturday night and is serious. Two weeks ago she was brought here from Dayton to her daughter's home, after her second attack.

Saturday noon, John Hull, of south of Concord, was stricken while in the Millman barber shop getting shaved. His son, Fred and Dr. Shook were called, and the Kinsey ambulance removed him to his home. By evening he rallied and sat up on the edge of the bed.

Mr. Ella Wilmot, a pioneer of the Cheesetown settlement was stricken last week, falling in the yard. Today he is able to be about and hopes for his recovery after some time, being afflicted with rheumatism.

Mrs. David Poper, who is making her home at Butler with her daughter, Myra Malone, suffered a stroke last week, but we were unable to learn her condition.

FIFTEEN MEN ON THE DEAD MAN'S CHEST TREASURE HUNT

Captain Kidd with his cutthroats and vast army of followers went on a treasure hunt last Tuesday night. As the captain had only half of the map showing where the treasure was hidden the first command was to find the other half and map out his route according to the clues given on the map. After hardships known only to pirates of wading ditches, climbing trees and fences to find the treasure, it was suddenly and mysteriously unearthed with yells of triumph. The cutthroats with their mighty swords kept the army in command while the treasure was opened.

At the end of the hunt the worthy hunters enjoyed a Weiner and marshmallow roast. At a late hour as the campfire died down the guests left for their homes expressing their thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Walter Coburn for a fine time.

The next meeting of the Home Builders class will be in July.

THE STORY

By chance James Lee meets Lucy Gresham, daughter of the John Gresham, wealthy ship builder. Lee, unjustly accused of robbing the Gresham firm, was sent to prison. He blames Oliver Ames, Lucy's cousin, and Gresham's manager, and seeks revenge. Lee inherits wealth, and in compliance with the will, changes his name from Warrington. He secures an invitation to the girl's birthday party. Lucy is practically engaged to Ames. She meets Lee, who makes love to her. With Gresham's approval, Lucy and Lee are married. Lee stuns the girl by telling her he does not love her and hates her "whole breed." She hears the story of his wrongs, and his determination to be avenged. She believes in his innocence of the crime for which he was convicted. "Linforths," rival of Gresham's, shows a determination to crush its competitor. Lee tells Lucy he is "Linforths," and means to ruin her father. Lucy is hurt by Joseph Upson's assertion that Lee loved her before he met Lucy.

CHAPTER VI

Lucy Goes Away

On reaching the flat, she found a fresh and unexpected perplexity awaiting her: Oliver Ames.

He was just going up to the door, and turned as he saw her approaching. Her heart quickened, and she forced back the tears that had been fighting to master her. But the necessity for quick thinking steadied her.

Oliver, if anyone, would be likely to recognize Jim, and the time for such a recognition was not yet. . . . She did not know for it but to greet Oliver with the friendliness he would be expecting. . . . She went up to him: "Oliver, you utterly surprising person," she cried, "I didn't know you were in town." And her voice was a real triumph of conventional lightness.

He turned to her quickly.

"Lucy, how are you? Yes, I came up to see your father about this nasty snipe we've just had from Linforths." She offered her hand and he took it in silence. Then:

"I am making my ceremonial call at a most unceremonious hour," he said. "But, Lucy, I broke in with a rather forced little laugh. What would happen when he came face to face with Jim? Still, she must ask him in. There was no way of getting out of it. She opened the door with her key; went in, and invited him to follow, with all the cordiality she could muster.

She took him into the drawing room and breathed a sigh of relief at finding that Jim was not there.

At first they talked chiefly of the Linforths affair, and Oliver was very outspoken in his indignation.

"It's simply a dirty trick. Linforths have always been our rivals, but so far they have fought clean. I can't understand it, quite."

Lucy found it awfully difficult to endure. This was Jim he was speaking of. She had to swallow hard before she could say again:

"I understand perfectly what you feel, Oliver."

She felt that the truth about Linforths must be blaring forth from her burning face. She ought to warn Oliver that she knew that Linforths would stop at nothing. But how could she, without explaining how she knew? "I think Gresham's ought to be prepared," she said at last, hoping that the words sounded less shaky to him than they did to her. "Gresham's ought to be well, even for a vindictive campaign."

"Oh, I'm prepared, Lucy. I wish I weren't quite so much in the dark. I seem to be able to find out absolutely nothing about the enemy. But if he thinks Gresham's will surrender so easily, he's mistaken. We've a big contract hanging in the balance now. We've estimated as low as the thing can be done. I know what I'm talking about. If Linforths estimate one penny lower, they'll be doing it simply to under-cut us."

"And then?"

"Then? Why, if they can hold out, afford to lose hand over fist, why, they can beat us. . . . But of course, they can't afford that. I'm not really fearing it. And anyway," he broke off, smiling, "what right have I to bring such troubles to you? Is life as a rose-strewn as ever, dear?"

The question, asked with that plucky smile of his, somehow brought all her troubles and perplexities, all her unhappiness, to the surface, and the tears she had been so manfully keeping at bay, came swimming into her eyes again. She blinked them away resolutely, and was grateful that he only stayed a very little longer.

"Give my best salams to your husband, Lucy," he said, as he took his leave, "and tell him how sorry I am not to have seen him. I hope I'll meet him when I'm next in town."

"Yes; thank you, Oliver; I'll tell him."

She went with him to the door; biting her lip to keep back the tears, but no sooner had he gone, than they welled up into her eyes, overflowed, and ran shivering down her face. She was going toward her sitting room, when the sound of the front door being opened with a key made her stop and turn back.

It was Jim. He shut the door with a slam and demanded abruptly:

"Was that Ames?"

"Yes," she replied, trying to steady her voice.

"I saw him leave. I didn't think I could be mistaken. I know the look of him pretty well. What did he come here for?"

"To see us. He's been in town for a day or two discussing business with father."

"Business? The Linforths affair?"

"Yes; chiefly."

He laughed shortly.

"What did he want to see . . . us . . . for?"

She looked up at him, her forehead puckering to a perplexed frown; drawing a breath to get the sound of tears out of her voice:

"What's the matter, Jim?" she asked. "I only asked what he came to see us for," he retorted.

"Just because he hadn't been since we were . . . married," she answered, hesitating slightly over the last word. He opened his lips as if he would speak again, but closed them, with nothing said, and to her dismay, caught her arm, pulled her into the drawing room and only stopped close beside the window. His hand under her chin, he said abruptly:

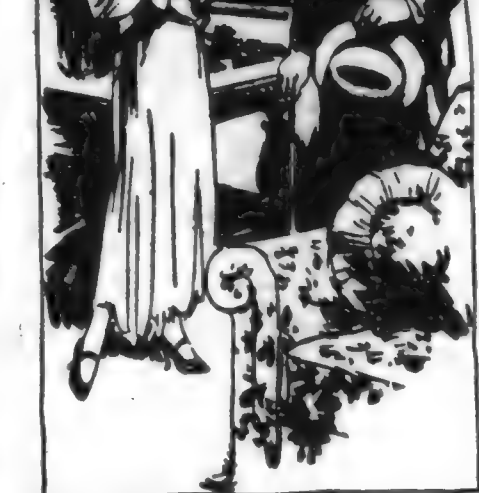

"You've been crying."

She made no answer; couldn't; her lips were trembling so.

"You're crying now," he added. She tried to free herself, but he wouldn't let her go.

"What are you crying for?" he went on.

"Because. . . . Oh, I don't know! Oh, what does one cry for? Not because one is . . . gloriously happy, anyway. . . ."

"Give My Best Salams to Your Husband, Lucy," He Said.

"Did he make you cry? Ames?"

"No. . . . Yes. . . . Perhaps it was he. . . . Oh, do let me go!" She was crying out-and-out, now; beyond the power to disguise or control the fact. He released her suddenly, his face darkening.

"All right—go," he said, sullenly, and she turned and fled to her bedroom; flung herself face downward into her pillows, and let the tears have away. After the tears, came a blessed few minutes of sleep, from which she was awakened by Anne coming in to put out her evening lights.

"Oh, Anne. . . . It's you. . . ."

"About a quarter past seven, madam. Will you wear the gray crepe?"

"Oh, anything, Anne," broke in Lucy, lying back again. "I've . . . I've a splitting head. . . . Just put my things out and I'll look after myself. . . ."

She hoped that excuse would serve for the heavy eyes. When Anne had left her, she rose, tiredly, and dressed. She had just slipped on the shimmery, sleeveless frock of palest gray that Anne had laid out for her, and was struggling with a rather awkward shoulder fastening, when Jim knocked at her door and came in from his room.

She forgot the refractory hook, dropped her hands to her side, and her gown fell apart, revealing the flawless white of her shoulder and the sweet, curving line of her girlish neck. He stood for a moment, quite still, looking at her, and beneath that look she found herself blushing hotly and made a quick effort to gather the shoulder of her frock together again.

He put out a hand and pulled her nearer to him suddenly, and then gathered up the shimmery gray stuff.

"This is a devoted husband's traditional job, isn't it?" he said, and gravely studied the mystery of hooks and eyes that presented itself.

"Don't, Jim," she said, unsteadily, and tried to move away from him, but he held on to her firmly, and she pulled away, but he held her close.

"What can you think that I have to fear from love?" he said, the words coming through clenched teeth. "What can love do to me, when I can hold you near, touch you, look down into your eyes and remain . . . unmoved?"

She wrenched herself free, and stepped back from him, flushed and angry-eyed.

"Jim, that's hateful! Hateful! I was speaking of love. . . . Real love. . . . Not a passing, momentary emotion, such as the worst sort of man might feel, and the basest sort of woman might evoke. . . . I was speaking of love. . . ."

He stood for a moment hesitating, then pushed past her, and went out of the room quickly.

She stood as he had left her, a hand pressed tight over her mouth.

"I . . . can't stand it. . . . I can't!" she cried to herself. "I must get away from it all. . . . Right away, so that I can . . . think. . . ."

The insult he had just offered her, hurt badly. To say what he had said to her, when his heart was given to Jocelyn. It seemed to degrade all that she had tried to do for him.

"I must get away from it all. . . ."

She said again, as she went, after Lee, to dinner.

Dinner was a very silent meal that evening. During the whole course of it, he said only one thing. Which was:

"Gresham's are busy with the question of building two boats for the Pavanari line. Linforths have got to beat them on the deal. You may as well know that Linforths intend to do."

She looked at him with tired eyes and said, in a subdued voice:

"Very well, Jim. Go your own way."

During the following week she scarcely saw him, and when she did he was particularly morose and unsmiling. She felt that she was awaiting some sort of crisis. She found herself trying to guess what it would be, and from what quarter it would arise. Would it come from Jocelyn? From herself? Or . . . from Jim?

When it came, it came from a quarter she hadn't reckoned on. From Oliver Ames. A letter, telling her that Linforths had once again beaten them. Their deal with the Pavanari Line had fallen through, and he heard that Linforths had got the job of building the boats.

"And it's no particular consolation to reflect that they are bound to lose on the job," the letter went on. "I think things are going to be serious. But we'll fight, of course. . . ."

The news seemed to galvanize her back to life and energy. She knew now what she intended to do.

At breakfast she went round to Jim, stood beside his chair, and silently laid the letter before him.

"I told you that, didn't I?" he said. "I'm going up to see Oliver about this," she said abruptly.

"To Edgemoor? Where the Gresham shipyard are?" he asked, rather as if he were thinking of something else.

"I shall go to an hotel in Newchester. Edgemoor is only . . ."

"Four miles out of the city," he said. He supplied the information in the same mechanical way.

"So I can easily go there and see Oliver. Or he. . . ."

She broke off, because he rose suddenly, pushing back his chair, rather violently, and said in an odd voice:

"Or he can come and see you at your hotel, I suppose?"

"Yes."

"Did it ever occur to you to ask whether it would be . . . convenient to me?"

"No," she said at once. "I didn't think I was under any obligation to consult you about it."

"Perhaps you're not. . . . What are you going for?" he broke out after a moment's silence.

"To see him about this," she pointed to the letter on the table.

"To tell him about me, you mean, don't you?" he countered.

"No. I shall tell him about you, Jim. But I shall talk it over with him exactly as if I do not know who Linforths are, and try to devise some means of defeating Linforths exactly as if I were . . . a stranger to them."

"Then you are setting yourself against me?"

"Against you? I'm doing my utmost to keep you from making a success of a—dirty trick."

"Won't it seem odd to him if . . . I don't come with you?" he said, slowly. She looked up at him quickly.

"No. He knows you are . . . very busy."

"Suppose I want to come?" His eyes looked down into hers, wondering and dark. She met his look quickly, (TO BE CONTINUED.)

and his hands dropped to his sides. He turned from her.

"Skies above! You nearly took me off my guard!" he cried in a low voice. . . . "But you shall not, You can't! Offer me all the love in the world and it shall not weaken me! You are asking me to betray the vows I made, in the blackest moments of my humiliation. . . . Vows made in a prison cell, from a soul in purgatory, are not to be lightly betrayed. My weakness shall not conquer my strength! Shall not! Do you hear, Lucy?" He protested it strongly.

"Yes, I hear, Jim," she answered.

He caught her by both shoulders, and drew her toward him. Held her quite close and looked down into her eyes.

"The power of woman is very great. It can do almost anything it likes, with man. Make of him almost any kind of fool and traitor. . . . But great as it is, it can't tempt me away from my task. Do you understand that, Lucy?"

Without looking up, she answered: "Yes, very well, Jim. I . . . have tried; I have tried; I have tried; but he held her close.

"What can you think that I have to fear from love?" he said, the words coming through clenched teeth. "What can love do to me, when I can hold you near, touch you, look down into your eyes and remain . . . unmoved?"

She found herself trying to guess what it would be, and from what quarter it would arise. Would it come from Jocelyn? From herself? Or . . . from Jim?

When it came, it came from a quarter she hadn't reckoned on. From Oliver Ames. A letter, telling her that Linforths had once again beaten them. Their deal with the Pavanari Line had fallen through, and he heard that Linforths had got the job of building the boats.

"And it's no particular consolation to reflect that they are bound to lose on the job," the letter went on. "I think things are going to be serious. But we'll fight, of course. . . ."

The news seemed to galvanize her back to life and energy. She knew now what she intended to do.

At breakfast she went round to Jim, stood beside his chair, and silently laid the letter before him.

"I told you that, didn't I?" he said. "I'm going up to see Oliver about this," she said abruptly.

"To Edgemoor? Where the Gresham shipyard are?" he asked, rather as if he were thinking of something else.

Stowaway Takes in Sights of London

Very Simple the Way La Raviere Tells It.

London.—Strict as immigration officials and steamship officers are, it is still possible to cross the Atlantic as a stowaway, eat two square meals daily for seven days while mingling with the passengers and crew, and then enter Great Britain without so much as a question from the authorities.

Raymond La Raviere, twenty-eight, who says he lived at 2432 Marquette road, Chicago, did it. Travelers who have experienced the thoroughness of the European investigations of foreigners at ports and frontiers, plus the usual ticket and passport inspections of stewards and others aboard ship, merely go through formalities in no way essential. La Raviere proved it.

He boarded the Olympic in New York 15 hours before the vessel sailed, made himself comfortable in the crew's quarters, and, after a walk, he came back at eight, got his bag, and picked out an unoccupied third-class stateroom. Mattresses and other unused bedding were stored in the room, and out of these he built a screen to shield himself from the door. Then he made his bed behind and turned in for the night. When he woke up next morning he was at sea.

La Raviere stayed in his stateroom until evening, when he grew hungry. So he changed his clothes and went on deck. Then he learned that the night crew was about to be fed, so he dashed back and got into his sea-crow in to supper. He helped himself and nobody asked any questions.

He made this quick change twice a day for seven days. He ate lunch with the day crew and at night he fed with a different watch. Nobody suspected. The rest of the time he loitered in deck chairs and mingled with the passengers.

La Raviere meant to debark at Cherbourg, but found this impossible because of the landing card necessary to board the tender. So he went on to Southampton and was unlucky enough to arrive there in mid-afternoon. He saw two gangplanks taken aboard, one for the passengers and the other for the crew, who immediately began unloading laundry. Then he did his quick change for the last time. He left his bag behind to avoid customs officers and walked off the ship with the crew.

He was unable to get out of the dock yards at Southampton because the only exit is through a gate in a high steel wire fence and this is guarded by immigration officers.

But he waited until dark and then jumped the fence, the last hurdle of his crossing taken. Then he walked

Car Breaks Record With No Oil in Crankcase

Elgin, Ill.—A world's motor "dry-run" record is claimed to have been established here recently, when an automobile processed with a new lubricating fluid was driven 318.7 miles in 13 hours, 35 minutes, with absolutely no oil in its crankcase.

Mayor Myron M. Lehman and a group of Elgin business men witnessed mechanics drain all of the oil from the car's crankcase and padlock the motor hood at the start of the test.

City and state officials checked the car in at the end of the test and certified to the mileage covered. Numbers 5 and 6 connecting rod bearings were burned out but otherwise the motor was in perfect condition.

The fluid used in conditioning the car for the test is a concentrated extract, which when introduced into a motor with the regular oil and with the gasoline, penetrates the pores of the metal and then forms a thin film over the outer surface of the bearings. This provides not only a self-lubricating surface on the metal, but a built-in supply underneath which, when released by frictional heat due to an inadequate amount or total absence of oil, furnishes the necessary lubrication until its own reserve has been drawn out of the pores and exhausted.

New Yorker Owns Goose That Lays 11-Inch Egg

Pen Yan, N. Y.—Peggy J., owned by Mrs. J. F. Goudry, is no ordinary goose.

Peggy lays eggs so large that one of them, mixed with two quarts of milk, will make enough custard for the family.

Every spring Peggy goes on an eccentric production schedule. On alternate days she lays a huge double-yolked egg weighing ten ounces. It measures 11 inches around.

When hot weather sets in, she settles down to one normal egg a day.

to London, a fraction less than 80 miles away.

He confessed to a policeman guarding the door of an American organization in London that he entered as a stowaway without a passport. This policeman, La Raviere claims, refused to arrest him then, but when he saw him on the following day strolling with him under arrest and took him to the immigration office in Bow street. He was convicted of entering the country illegally and on the same day they took him to Wormwood Scrubs, a prison on the outskirts of London.

There he says his treatment was of the best. After his sentence was finished La Raviere was sent automatically to Brixton prison to await deportation. He appealed to the home office for release and to polish off his experiences he was allowed his freedom in the name of Sir Herbert Samuel, home secretary. Throughout his difficulties American consular officials were anxious to help him, but they could do nothing without proof of his American citizenship. This he could not supply without a passport, and it was necessary to write to Chicago for his birth certificate.

KING'S BODYGUARD

Here is the bodyguard of a king of the west coast of Africa, a soldier in the guard of the King of Kongo, who wears green spectacles, a straw hat on his mud-plastered hair, a bandana handkerchief, and decorates his arms with a string of bracelets.

U. S. Memorial in France

Old French Defenses Are Discovered by Laborers.

Bar-le-Duc.—As excavations for the construction of an American monument were being made on the peak of Montfaucon, in the Argonne, the foundations of an old fortress built there by Godefroy de Bouillon in 1076 were discovered.

The American monument is to commemorate the 1,512 soldiers of the United States army who were killed there in September, 1918, when the position was taken from the Germans. The old fort is said to have been destroyed and reconstructed in the Eleventh, Thirteenth, Fifteenth, Sixteenth and Seventeenth centuries and finally burned with the village during the Thirty Years' war by the Swedes.

Godefroy de Bouillon was a young vassal of Emperor Henry IV, from whom he received the title of Marquis of Anvers at the death of Godefroy-le-Boson. The fortress was dismantled when the Duc de Basses Lorraine left with the Crusaders.

Excavations are being made by Baron Renaux, curator of the Verdun museum and library, under the auspices of the ministry of fine arts, in collaboration with Canon Almond, historical savant of the Meuse, and other authorities. Among the finds so far are an entrance stairway, a series of galleries of different sizes, small rooms in one of which was a stone bench, and several piles of burned wheat, indicating the destruction of 1636. These were all discovered at a depth of eight or ten meters.

The American battle monument is to be made of reinforced concrete faced with Burgundy stone. It will be 200 feet high, overlooking the entire battlefield. Dedication ceremonies are scheduled for this summer, unless present excavations postpone the work.

Spain Ignores Death Penalty in New Regime

Madrid, Spain.—Although the constitution of the second Spanish republic is silent on the subject, and the new criminal code has not yet been drawn up, the death penalty has gone out of vogue in this country.

Recently, the minister of justice, Don Alvaro de Albornoz, announced the commutation of the death penalty to life imprisonment of a man who had killed the wife of a dairy owner, and their twenty-seven-month-old baby.

The Cortes Constituyentes, a few weeks ago, refused to take into consideration a bill proposed by a deputy belonging to the radical party, which would provide the death penalty for all robbers who engaged in holdups. The bill was proposed on the day when a bank in Madrid was held up and robbed of $4,000, but it was promptly hooted down by the Socialists and Radical Socialist deputies.

These two events are symptomatic of the spirit of the times in Spain.

Scotch Clans, in Feud 200 Years, Sign Truce

London.—The Campbells and the MacLeans, two famous Scotch clans who have been battling in a feud for 200 years, have agreed to a truce. The peace was announced in a telegram sent by the duke of Argyll, chief of the Campbells, to Col. Sir Fitzroy MacLean. The occasion was the ninety-seventh birthday of Colonel MacLean. He lives in Duart castle on the Isle of Mull.

Twins Celebrate at Eighty Bristol Ferry, R. I.—Mrs. A. Gore Trueman and Mrs. George B. Martin, twins, recently celebrated their eightieth birthday here. They were married at a double ceremony 60 years ago and each is the mother of two children.

300-Year-Old Bean Sprouts in Museum

San Antonio, Texas.—A large white bean, picked up in the ruins of Grand Quivira and believed to be 300 years old, has sprouted into a living stalk at White Memorial museum here.

The bean was found in an excavation 70 feet from the surface at ruins located 100 miles south of Santa Fe, N. M. Franciscan missionaries founded a mission there in 1620, and prior to that time the Piro Indians maintained a settlement there called Tabira.

The bean was soaked in water for five hours March 19. Less than two weeks later a stalk six inches tall had grown from the seed.

Best of the New Coast Guardsmen

Four members of the graduating class of the United States Coast Guard academy at New London, Conn., who were awarded prizes as well as diplomas at the ceremonies conducted in the casemates of old Fort Trumbull. Left to right: Cadets R. D. Schmidtmann of Washington, D. C., winner of a prize for proficiency in military tactics; G. I. Lynch of Methuen, Mass., awarded the Charles A. Root prize for being best in drawing; W. H. Snyder, honor student who won the alumni association prize for the highest academic standing for the entire three-year term, and J. D. Craik of Andover, Mass., awarded a sword by the Connecticut Daughters of the American Revolution for having best conducted himself during his course.

The LOWEST TIRE PRICES ever offered for GOODYEAR QUALITY

IT'S GOOD NEWS that you can buy any tire for as low as $3.49.

But that's only half the story. The other half is—this price buys a GOODYEAR.

You can put stout new Goodyear Speedways on your car today at the lowest prices you ever paid for a Goodyear Tire.

No need to worry about old, risky tires—no need to wonder whether they'll bring you home safe every time you start on a trip—when you can get Goodyear values at these bargain prices.

And you can bank on it—they are bargains! Full oversize tires—marked with the Goodyear name and house flag. Built with patented Goodyear Supertwist Cord. Lifetime guaranteed. Balanced for long, even wear.

Goodyear can give you such tremendous values because more people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind. Here certainly is the chance of a lifetime! "Why buy any second-choice tire when first-choice costs no more?"

PATHFINDER

SIX "PLIES"?

You can count six layers of fabric here, but the first two under the tread in this tire (or in any so-called "six-ply" tire built this way) do not run from bead to bead. Some tire-makers count these as "plies," but they are really "breaker strips," so we call them that.

America Might Profit by Academy of Humor

Establishment of an American Academy of Humor has been suggested. We fear it would too frequently be drawing comparisons between Mark Twain, Bob Burdette and Bill Nye and our present generation of laugh makers. There was an age of Poesy. It passed. And has the Age of Humor in America gone over the hill?

This is the age of mechanics and mechanism. The race has its moods, as do individuals. Long ago its minds were possessed of a medieval religiosity; and it exalted and proselytized in the name of its new-found savior.

Next it flew in pursuit of "liberty" and performed such deeds before high heaven as would make the angels weep. It romanticized with Shakespeare and Dante and made war with Charles XII and Napoleon. It took its pen in hand with Shelley, Keats and Tennyson, and in America with Bryant and Longfellow.

Then it laughed with Artemus Ward and Twain, Nye, Burdette, George Ade, George Fitch and all that school. Now, upon what is it most employing its still substantial intellect? Certainly not on Humor. Let us have the American Academy of Humor and see what it can do for us.—F. H. Collier in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

MANY LETTERS addressed to you personally

Think of the advertisements in this paper as so many letters addressed to you, personally. That's what they're intended to be, and, actually, that's what they are. This newspaper is, in effect, a mail-bag which brings you news of events and news of the best merchandise at the fairest prices.

You don't throw away letters unread. You don't read three or four letters carefully and skim through the rest. Treat the "merchandise letters" in this newspaper the same way. Read them all. Read them carefully. One single item will often repay you for the time it has taken to read them all.

Many good housekeepers have formed the habit of reading their newspaper with a pencil and paper, ready to jot down the articles they wish to look at when they start out on their shopping tour. Try this method. It saves time, and saves money, and provides you with the pick of the day's merchandise.

Every advertisement has a message all its own.

PICKING OUT TWINS

An old gentleman, after admiring two babies in a carriage, turned to the nurse and said: "Ah, twins?"

"Yes, sir," replied the girl. "Both boys."

"So," said the gentleman, "how do you tell them apart?" "Which is which?"

"This one," said the nurse pointing, "is this and that one is that."

"Dear me, how very interesting. But," added the old gentleman, "indicating the second one, 'might not this one be that one also?'"

"It might," said the girl after a short pause. "Then of course that one would be that."

"Well, in that case how do you want to put one in one room and the other in another room?"

"Do you indeed? Which do you put in one room?"

"Sometimes this one and sometimes that one."

"How do you know which one you are putting in which room?"

"We look and see which one is in one room and then we know that the other one is in the other room."

"Very good," said the old gentleman, warming up to the problem, "but if one of them was in the house and the other was away somewhere would you be able to tell which one were away?"

"Oh, yes, sir. All we would have to do would be to look at the one in the house and then we would know which one was away. It would have to be the other one. There are only two of them you see, which makes it very simple."

At this the old gentleman passed on with a look on his face as though he had been misunderstood. Who wouldn't have?

BOARD OF REVIEW ORDERS VALUATION CUT

An order has been made by the county board of review reducing the assessments of farm lands and improvements in fourteen of the townships of DeKalb county from those reported by the township assessors. The only township in which no change was made is Franklin. The board was satisfied with the valuations reported from that township by the local assessor.

The greatest additional cut on land was made by the board in Wilmington township, being 25 per cent. Union was reduced 20 per cent, Fairfield 16 2-3, Keyser 12 1/2, Butler, Jackson, Concord, Spencer, Newville, Stafford, Grant, Richland and Smithland 10 per cent each and Troy 4 per cent.

On improvements, which includes buildings, the board reduced the assessments from those reported by the township assessors as follows: Concord and Smithfield, 33 1/2 per cent each; Union, Jackson, Wilmington and Fairfield, 25 per cent each; Butler, Stafford and Grant, 20 per cent each; Spencer, Keyser and Troy 16 2/3 per cent each; Richland, 12 1/2 per cent and Newville, 10 per cent.

The final average assessment in each township for lands follows: Butler township, $31 per acre; Jackson, $29; Concord, $30; Spencer, $31; Newville and Stafford, $28; Wilmington, $30; Union, $35; Grant, $31; Keyser, $33; Richland, Fairfield and Smithfield, $29; Franklin and Troy, $25.

The final average assessment on improvements in each township follows: Butler, $11 an acre; Jackson, Concord, Spencer, Stafford and Fairfield, $14; Newville, Franklin and Troy, $12; Wilmington, Richland and Smithfield, $13; Union, $22; Grant, $15 and Keyser, $16.

The final average assessment on both lands and improvements for each township follows: Butler, Stafford, Richland and Smithfield, $42 an acre; Jackson, Wilmington and Fairfield, $43; Concord, $44; Spencer, $45; Newville, $40; Union, $51; Grant, $46; Keyser, $49; and Franklin and Troy, $37 each.

The grand average of assessment of farms in DeKalb county this year becomes $43 per acre by virtue of the board's order. In 1928, when the last assessment was made, the grand average was more than $65. The reduction is approximately one-third.

The board has not conferred with reference to the assessment of real estate in the cities and towns, but the average reduction will be made about the same as in the rural sections.

FORMER ST. JOE BOY LOSES HIS WIFE

Mrs. Henry Engle, the former LaVonne Showers, a young wife and mother, died Friday morning at 5:45 o'clock at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Scott Showers, of Auburn, after an illness of six months. Death was the result of a complication of nervous ailments.

Mrs. Engle was 20 years of age. She was born in Auburn on December 5, 1912. She attended the Auburn public schools and graduated with the class of 1930. On April 1, 1931, she was united in marriage with Henry Engle, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. John Engle, former residents of north of St. Joe. To them was born a daughter, Janice, nine months old.

The funeral services were held Sunday afternoon from the home.

GENERAL SMEDLEY D. BUTLER AT WINONA LAKE

The dates for the great Winona Bible Conference are August 12 through August 21. Great preparations are being made for two special days, Saturday and Sunday, August 13 and 14. These will be known as THE EIGHTEENTH AMENDMENT DAYS. Every indication points to the attendance of a vast throng of people. On Saturday both Clinton N. Howard, well known at "The Little Giant" and F. Scott McBride, the fearless leader of the Anti-Saloon League will speak, and then on Sunday afternoon the vast Billy Sunday Tabernacle, with a seating capacity of 8000, will scarcely hold the people who will want to hear General Smedley D. Butler on the burning issue of the day. On Saturday night the Dramatic Trial entitled "Protection," with a cast of more than twenty characters will take place.

R. H. W. Club

The R. H. W. Club met at the home of Mrs. Gladys Hart, Tuesday afternoon. On the door was a note saying, "No one at home. Follow the road to the corner." There securely hidden was another note of direction. Slowly the cars made their way past by-roads and down lanes to a place where the cars had to be left. Then on foot the women went through flower gardens, raspberry patches, gravel pits, etc., even climbing trees, until they came to a spot where after much searching they each found a dinner pail. There they had to carry still farther until they came to a place on the river where they found blankets and cushions spread for their comfort and even fish poles and worms were ready for use.

A short business session was held after which the pails were opened and enjoyed. The hostess was assisted by Ellen Hart.

John Gresham's Girl

By CONCORDIA MERREL

(Copyright) WNU Service

THE STORY

By chance James Lee meets Lucy Gresham, daughter of Sir John Gresham, wealthy ship builder. Lee, unjustly accused of robbing the Gresham firm, was sent to prison. He blames Oliver Ames, Lucy's cousin, and Gresham's manager, and seeks revenge. Lee inherits wealth and, in compliance with the will, changes his name from Warrington. He secures an invitation to the girl's birthday party. Lucy is practically engaged to Ames. She meets Lee, who makes love to her. With Gresham's approval, Lucy and Lee are married. Lee stuns the girl by telling her he does not love her, and hates her "whole breed." She hears the story of his wrongs, and his determination to be avenged. She believes in his innocence of the crime for which he was convicted. "Lin-forth," rival of Gresham's, shows a determination to crush his competitor. Lee tells Lucy he is "Lin-forth's" and means to ruin her father. Lucy is hurt by Jocelyn Upton's assertion that Lee loved her before he met Lucy, and the latter believes her.

CHAPTER VI—Continued

"Well, I don't want you to come. There would be too much risk of your being recognized. Oliver would be bound to know you. And there are the Greshams men to think of, too."

"And if I am willing to take that risk? If I don't give a d—n whether I'm known or not?"

Beneath the burning intensity of his eyes, she found herself hesitating slightly.

"I still don't want you to come," she said at last, looking away. "I... want to get away. . . . Just for a little while." There was a shake in that.

"From me?"

"From everything."

"From me?" he insisted.

"Yes . . . and from you," she cried. He drew a breath and wheeled round from her. And again there was silence.

Suddenly he went back to his chair and sat down.

"When are you going?" he asked abruptly.

"Tomorrow. Perhaps I shall wire to Oliver today, asking him to fix up rooms for me at the most decent hotel in Newchester."

"The Royal is the best. Will you go there?"

"I don't mind where it is, so long as it's comfortable. All right, I'll ask Oliver to get rooms for me at the Royal."

He said no more, and from the time he left the house after breakfast, she did not see him again until midnight. He came to her room, then, just as she had retired for the night.

"Made all your arrangements?" he asked from the doorway of his room.

"Yes," she answered, looking at him. She thought he looked tired, rather pale, and not very happy.

"What time are you leaving?" he asked.

"By the ten fifty-five from King's Cross."

"All right. Good night, Lucy." Her voice was not quite steady as she bade him good night, too.

A good deal to her surprise, she found, when she was ready to start next day, that Jim was waiting to take her to the station. She thanked him for that.

He bought her ticket, found her a place in a first-class pullman, heaped the table before her with papers and magazines, and as he left her, he took off his hat, bent down and kissed her cheek.

"A devoted husband does this sort of thing," he murmured, and he left her quickly, without looking back. She watched him go, with the quick stinging of tears in her eyes, so that his mighty figure was blurred in her sight. Lee went straight out of the station, without once looking back, flung himself into his car and started it immediately. What he was thinking or feeling, the wisest man on earth could not have guessed from his set, sullen face. And yet a turmoil of emotions was raging through him.

As he was rounding a corner, slowly, he was hailed from the pavement by Jocelyn Upton, and drew up beside the curb to greet her.

"Want to give me a lift?" she asked, her thin eager little face lighting up.

"Certainly. Get in," he answered, and she obeyed.

"Where to?" he asked, as he started off again.

"Anywhere. I don't mind. Shall we go for a little trundle in the country?" she suggested.

"Sorry. Not possible. I've a lot to do."

She moved restlessly beside him.

"Oh, all right . . . home, then," she said disconsolately.

He took her home.

"Come in and see mother," she invited, as they reached the door.

He followed her in.

It appeared, though, that Lady Cordelia was not at home, so he presently found himself alone with Jocelyn in the drawing room.

"Sit down, Jim dear," she said, and pushed him into one corner of a deep couch, while she took the other. "So nice to have you all to myself again, after all this time. . . . How's the married state? Does it offer any real compensation for a state of single blessedness?"

Lee was in no sort of mood for this kind of thing, but he managed a laugh, and mumbled something to turn it off.

She lit a short, stumpy little cigarette, and put one, with a rather angularly coquettish gesture into his mouth. "I don't want one of these scented, silly little things," he protested, half laughing.

But she silenced him by thrusting forward the one she held between her lips, as a means of lighting his. Which, the cigarette being so exceptionally short, brought their noses very nearly touching. She drew away, laughing.

"Now you see the reason, don't you?" she said softly.

"Reason of what?" he asked, rather moodily, smacking the cigarette into an ash tray.

"Why they are made so short. . . ."

He rose abruptly. . . .

"I must go . . .," he said quickly, almost unhearingly irritated by her. "Don't you stay!" she questioned softly. He looked at her, suddenly startled. There had been a meaning in that, that had missed him up till now. Then he turned away again as if he were going to leave, just as quickly as a wholly mannish panic could carry him. But her voice, saying:

"How's Lucy?" halted him, and brought him round again, as if there were some magic power in the name.

"Very well, thanks," he answered, a touch stiffly.

She looked at him, with her little dark eyes. "Has she said anything about me lately, Jim?"

"Let's see. . . . No, I don't think so. I didn't know she had seen you lately."

"Oh, didn't she even tell you that?" she cried, in affected surprise. He looked at her, steadily for a moment. Then:

"What Time Are You Leaving?" He Added.

"Jocelyn, what are you driving at?" he demanded bluntly.

"Come and sit down again, dear, and I'll tell you," she said.

But he didn't move. He just stood where he was and said:

"Tell me."

"It's difficult to about these things out across such a distance," she objected. These things. . . . What things? He was silently questioning. He finally compromised by striding over to her and standing close before her.

"Well?" he asked.

"She was telling me the other day that a fiasco your marriage is," she said slowly.

"What?" That broke from him from the sheer unexpectedness of it.

She laughed; an implish, disagreeable sound.

"Oh, yes; she was telling me that, Jim. And more besides. How miserable she is; what a mistake the whole business has been. . . ."

She paused a minute; then added: "And she was wondering what could be done about it."

"Done? What did she mean. . . .?"

"Well, Jim dear, marriages aren't the irrevocable things, these days, that they once were. . . ."

"Did she . . . suggest . . . anything of that sort?" he asked. She said in a tone that suggested the spit of a cat.

"Go home and ask her."

"She's away," he replied. Her eyes lit with a sudden new interest.

"Since when?" she asked.

"This morning. . . . I've just seen her off."

"Where has she gone?"

"She has had to go north, to Gresham's. . . . A business matter. . . ."

She laughed. . . . It grated on his nerves, badly, that laugh of hers.

"Her cousin Oliver is head of Gresh-am's. . . . Did you know?" The cat in her voice was purring now.

"Of course. . . ."

"He has been mad about her for years. . . . Every one said they were going to marry. . . . Don't be a fool, Jim; you know well enough why she has gone. . . ."

Silence, while their look held.

"Oliver Ames," she added.

He drew a breath, and stood quite still. . . . Suddenly she rose, and moved up to him in her thin, angular way, and put her arms up round his neck.

"What do you care . . . while there is . . . me. . . ."

She whispered, straining her pale, peaky little face up to his.

For a moment he stood there, passively with Jocelyn clinging round his neck, too dumfounded to do anything, or to think clearly. When he did recover from his astonishment to think anything at all, his first thought was that Jocelyn must suddenly have gone completely mad. He tried unceremoniously to loosen her clinging hands, but she only clung the tighter.

"You do love me, don't you, Jim? And Jim, I've always loved you. . . . always! Why were you so mad as to go and marry Lucy? What made you do it? Didn't you guess that I cared? Didn't you know? Jim, I thought I'd made it clear. . . ."

He wrenched her hands apart and flung her away.

"Jocelyn, don't be a fool!" he said, roughly. "You're talking utter nonsense."

She stumbled from him, her thin little hands clenched tight over her breast.

"But, Jim, before you met Lucy, you absolutely haunted me. You were always here; you practically lived here. . . . Every one thought you cared for me; every one looked upon you as my property. . . . Why, it was only through us that you met the Greshams at all!"

He laughed shortly.

"Well, if I haunted you, Jocelyn, that was why."

"That you wanted to meet the Greshams?"

"Lucy in particular."

"Lucy in particular."

"Had you already made up your mind to marry her?"

"Yes; definitely; absolutely; and unchangeably."

She backed away further, looking up with incredulous eyes.

"Then you didn't marry her for love?" she cried, a renewed ring of triumph in her voice. "That much of what she said, was true, at least."

"Did she tell you that?" he asked sharply.

"Oh, she told me everything! But I wasn't sure until now that it was true."

"Why should you be sure now?"

"How could you have loved her before you had even met her?"

"I had met her. But very informally. I wanted to meet her formally."

"One meeting? And you made up your mind to marry her? Those romances are out of date. . . ."

She scoffed.

"I'm telling you what is true," he said inflexibly. Her scoffing manner softened.

"Do you really mean it, Jim?" she pleaded. "Do you really mean that you don't love me any more?"

"Any more?" he questioned irritably. "I never have loved you, Jocelyn. I don't know what's given you this ridiculous idea. Look here, I'm sorry if I've hurt you or offended you in any way, but of course you don't mean all you say. You're exaggerating, aren't you? Something's upset you, and you don't absolutely realize all you are saying. . . ."

She broke down then; sank into the couch, hid her face in her hands and cried bitterly. But he remained unmoved by any pity for her, because she gave way with such a weak abandon, that her giving way only disgusted him further.

"Don't be silly, Jocelyn. For mercy's sake, pull yourself together," he said. She raised a tear-streaked face. There was nothing appealing about that little peaky face all blotched with tears. But again he realized the brutal bluntness of his words, and added:

"Of course I know you don't mean it. . . . It's just. . . ."

But he got no further. His attempt at soothing her was ill-timed. It flicked her vanity almost more stingingly than his brutal outspokenness had. She sprang up from the couch, her thin little body quivering from head to foot; her pale face white as a sheet; her eyes feverishly bright.

"I don't mean it! And you're sorry if I'm hurt? And I'm to pull myself together. . . . You're sorry. . . ."

She cried out, flinging the words back at him with passionate contempt.

"Sorry! Thanks. . . . And I don't mean all I say! Don't L. . . ."

"I think you'll find that I do. . . . You can't pick me up and throw me down when it pleases you, and get away with it. . . ."

"There's no question of it. . . ."

he put in, trying to stem the torrent of her words.

"I know your marriage with Lucy is a fiasco. She told me so, herself. . . ."

She went on. "She confided the whole thing to me. She told me that she was tired of your coldness toward her; that she was going to get free of you for a bit. . . ."

She was inventing wildly now. "A woman can't live on coldness, you know, Jim. No matter how much she loves you—and she made it clear enough that she was frantic about you—indifference will kill it all. . . . Well, you've killed her love for you. . . . D'you understand?"

He had turned from her, but at that he swung back to look at her, and the flash of temper he had just shown went suddenly to a bias in his somber eyes.

"What are you saying?" he demanded through shut teeth.

She was beside herself with baffled emotion and wounded vanity and past caring what she said or whom she injured. She thrust her distorted little face up close to his.

"I'm saying that she's tired of you. . . . Tired of giving all and being given nothing. And she's gone back to a strong, faithful love. . . . D'you understand? She's discovered that she was a fool ever to leave it. She's learned her own heart, and is going back to the man she has always belonged to—Oliver Ames. . . . Does that move you. Whether you love her or not, that hasn't quite a nice flavor, has it?"

His words flamed on his nerves till his control broke and his temper rose, now, to sudden fury.

His hands shot out suddenly and caught her arms.

"Take it back! Take it all back! She didn't say any of this. . . . She doesn't love Oliver. . . . You're lying. . . ."

He was shaking her now, and the words were jerking from his lips, harshly, brokenly. . . . He didn't realize how rough he was being; some intense feeling had him by the throat and he was past the point of realizing what he was doing. His impulse was simple; just to punish her for speaking the words that could move him so. . . . Her poor little thin body was as helpless in the strength of his hands as a sapling in a raging storm. When he pushed her away, she stumbled onto the couch, breathless, confused and frightened. But he waited for nothing further; he jammed on his hat and left her, his heart beating out an agony suddenly more poignant than any he had ever known.

Mosquito Said to Have No Use for Naphthalene

Malaria-bearing mosquitoes emulate Santa Claus in some parts of the South. When they find doors and windows screened they come down the chimney, and bearing unwelcome gifts of "fever 'n' ague." But you can keep them out by hanging a little basket of naphthalene, the stuff mothballs are made of, at the top of the chimney. They hate it, and will soon out of its range as soon as they smell it, no matter how much good biting may be slumbering below. This is one of the curious facts about mosquito behavior which have been learned by the United States Public Health Service. Not all mosquitoes will enter houses by coming down chimneys, and it is not known whether all of them can be driven off with naphthalene. One species, however, responds in this way, Anopheles quadrimaculatus, the most potent malaria mosquito. But she is important enough to make this bit of entomological knowledge very much worth having.

Famous Negro Physicians

The first negro physician of any standing in this country, of whom there is record was James Derham, a slave in Philadelphia, 1787. He was taught by his master to compound medicines and attained such skill that he was sold to another doctor, who used him as an assistant. He was enabled to purchase his freedom and moved to New Orleans, where he built up a lucrative practice. The celebrated physician, Dr. Benjamin Rush, published an account of Derham and gave high praise to his skill. The first accredited physician was Dr. John V. De Grasse, who became a member of the Medical Association of Massachusetts in 1854.

Rules and Exceptions

Exceptions are not the case with all rules. There are certain laws of nature which are steadfast. And there are certain laws for success which are just as unchanging. No one has yet found an acceptable substitute for ambition, honesty, integrity and industry.—Grit.

Lesson for June 26

REVIEW: WHAT WE HAVE LEARNED FROM GENESIS.

GOLDEN TEXT—And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Some Friends We Have Made.

JUNIOR TOPIC—What We Have Learned in Genesis.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Favorite Characters in Genesis.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What Genesis Teaches About God and Human Relationships.

Genesis, the book from which the lessons of the quarter are taken, as its name indicates, is a book of beginnings. It contains the only reliable information we have of the origin of the heavens and the earth, plant and animal life, human life, institutions, and relations.

Lesson for April 3.

God was before all things. Everything but God had a beginning. The things which are came to be by the creative act of a personal God. Man himself came to be by the creative act of God.

Lesson for April 10.

An explanation of theills and sorrows of the world can be made only on the basis of the historic fall of man as recorded in the Bible. Man is not what he was when he came from the Creator's hand. The prime actor in this tragedy was the personal, cunning, and malicious being called "the Devil." Because man is a free being, possessing the power of choice, sin entered through the act of man's will in believing the Devil instead of God.

Lesson for April 17.

Following man's fall, God gave the promise of a redeemer. God chose Abraham to be the head of the new race through which this gracious promise was to be realized. The failure of this new race to carry out God's plan is the explanation of the disorder of the world.

Lesson for April 24.

Lot's prosperity was due to his relationship to his uncle, Abram. In spite of this fact, he selfishly grasped for the best. Abram, to avert possible strife between Lot and himself, according to Lot the choice of the best of the land. Though Lot's choice involved him in trouble, Abram graciously went to his rescue, delivering him from his oppressor, thus being a fine example of the act of living in peace.

Lesson for May 1.

Isaac was a child of the covenant; gentle and peace-loving. Though a lover of peace, he had enemies. His prosperity incited the envy of the Philistines. His peaceable withdrawal from them gave him increased influence.

Lesson for May 8.

Esau sold his birthright for a bowl of pottage. The birthright was the right of being at the head of the patriarchal family. In a time of physical exhaustion he relinquished his claim to the future in order to gratify a present desire.

Lesson for May 15.

Jacob's scheming involved him in trouble. On his flight from an outraged brother, he was overtaken by night and obliged to sleep in a field with a stone for his pillow. It was under such circumstances that God gave him the vision at Bethel.

Lesson for May 22.

On Jacob's return to Canaan to meet Esau, the Angel of the Lord wrestled with him at the ford of Jabbok. Jacob's self-will needed to be broken before he could enter Canaan. He was humbled by the dislocation of his thigh. When thus humbled, he quit wrestling and clung to God. Jacob did not get the blessing through wrestling, but because of his clinging to God. It was easy for Jacob to be reconciled to his brother because he was now right with God.

Lesson for May 29.

Joseph was hated by his brethren. The father's favoritism fanned this hatred into a flame, and resulted in his being sold into slavery.

Lesson for June 5.

Joseph's success was not primarily due to the fact that he was a good worker, but to the fact that the good hand of his God was upon him. Joseph was not a self-made, but a God-made man.

Lesson for June 12.

Though Joseph severely tested his brethren, he graciously forgave them and nourished them through the years of famine. He knew that God had sent him to be their deliverer.

Lesson for June 19.

In old age after many years of sorrow for the loss of Joseph, Jacob goes to Egypt and is there nourished through the famine by Joseph. After Jacob's death, Joseph continues his gracious attitude to his brethren.

Three Kinds of People

There are three kinds of people in the world, the wills, the won'ts and the can'ts. The first accomplish everything; the second oppose everything; the third fall in everything.—Selected.

He Is the Looser

It has been said that certain insects which sting, lose their lives when they sting. A man who uses his tongue to express the venom of his hate loses that which to him is better than life.

THE DAIRY

NOT ALL ANIMALS REVEAL INFECTION

But Losses by Abortion Can Be Minimized.

This question has been asked us: "Is it advisable to attempt to rid a herd of contagious abortion by selling every cow as soon as she aborts?"

Little or no benefit will be secured from any such program, because many animals that have the infection present do not give any evidence of it and cannot be detected except by a blood test.

Doctor Metzger of the New York State College of Agriculture suggests that breeders who are unable to use the blood test to eradicate the disease, can reduce their losses by the following practices:

Isolate every aborting animal.

If possible have a maternity stall with a concrete floor and clean and disinfect it thoroughly.

Raise all replacements on the farm except the herd sire. Research shows that heifers born of an aborting dam have the infection at birth, but by the seventh or eighth month the infection generally leaves. After breeding, they become highly susceptible.

Everything should be done to guard the bred heifer from taking the infection into her system. This means watching things not only in the barn but while on pasture.

All cows and heifers should be pastured separately from all outside stock. One aborting animal will often infect all bred animals in the pasture.

For replacements, some dairymen are buying four and five-year-old cows hoping that they have had abortion. Generally such cows are not as susceptible to the infection as heifers.—American Agriculturist.

Testing Necessary for Keeping Check on Cows

In these days of financial uncertainty how long would a banker last if he simply accepted the deposits that were offered and cashed the checks that were drawn on his bank, without going to the trouble and expense of keeping a line on each customer and entering each transaction in his records?

It sounds ridiculous, doesn't it, but it is no more ridiculous than for a dairymen to say he can't afford to test his cows simply because prices are down and conditions trying. The banker individualizes each account. If you are one of his customers and you write a check to pay the gas bill when there is no balance in your account, the check does not pay the account and possibly you will get in bad.

In like manner, the successful dairymen will individualize his cows, and when he is not keeping the deposits of feed and care up to standard, the cow is going to return the drafts marked "Insufficient Funds," or, if he is doing his part up to the letter all the time, and the cow isn't honoring the checks, then there is something wrong, and the cow herself is very apt to be in bad.—H. E. Colby, in Iowa C. T. A. Report.

Sunlight Affects Flavor

A tallowy or even a burnt flavor in milk about which housewives in Chicago and other cities recently have been complaining may be caused by nothing more than leaving the milk exposed to light, according to P. H. Tracy, assistant chief in dairy manufactures at the college of agriculture, University of Illinois.

Milk users who take advantage of natural refrigeration during the winter months and leave bottles of milk standing in windows or unprotected out of doors are likely to find that the flavor is impaired, he said.

Either direct sunlight or diffused light when permitted to pass into milk through colorless glass hurls the flavor. Permitting the bottle of milk to remain in the sunlight even for 30 minutes may cause the milk to acquire a tallowy flavor sometimes described as a "canny" or paneboard taste. If the milk is allowed to remain in the sun long enough a distinct burnt flavor will predominate.—Exchange.

Potassium Proved Value

One lot of calves at the Ohio experiment station was fed on the milk from cows which were getting normal feeds while another lot was fed on the milk from cows which were being given one gram of potassium iodide per day each. The calves fed on the milk from cows getting the potassium iodide made better use of their feeds. Another test at the same station showed that cows on pasture produced butterfat approximately twice as potent in vitamin A as the pasture of the same cows before turning them on pasture.—Successful Farming.

Record Friesian Cow

A German newspaper, Gemeinheits-er of Varel, Oldenburg, East Friesland, Germany, reports that G. Taben of Poggenkrug, Kreis Wittmund, East Friesland, has received highest reward for record Friesian cow, Gertrud 181121. In her test of 865 days she produced 13,519 kilograms milk (approximately 30,465 lbs.). This matter was brought to our attention, says the Rural New Yorker, by a reader, Carl Ufren, whose early home was in that part of Germany.

Buy a First-Choice Tire

YOU KNOW a bargain when you see it. Cast a thrifty eye on what you are offered here.

Goodyear quality—Goodyear value—stout, husky, handsome tires with the Goodyear name on every sidewall—at the lowest prices in rubber history!

Goodyear builds these Speedway Tires with patented Super-twist, that famous cord material which gives tires longer life. And every one of these tires has a lifetime guarantee.

You can get such amazing values because Goodyear builds millions more tires than any other rubber company.

And if you stop to wonder why Goodyear builds more tires—here's the answer: more people want Goodyear Tires, more people buy them, because experience shows they're the best tires on the road.

That makes it easy for you to get the best tire for your money. Just ask yourself: Why buy any second-choice tire when FIRST-CHOICE costs no more?

These figures represent prices established before enactment of Federal Tax

SIX "PLIES"?

You can count six layers of fabric here, but the first two under the tread in this tire (or in any so-called "six-ply" tire built this way) do not run from tread to head. Some tire-makers count these as "plies," but they are really "breaker strips," so we call them that.

Breton Marriage Mart

No depression exists in the marriage mart of Breton. After the final count following a three-day marriage festival there, it was discovered that a conservative estimate placed the number of ceremonies at 1,400. This made a day's average approximately 466 brides and bridegrooms. This is the result of a century-old tradition which claims that the best days for getting married are the Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday following Easter. To comply with this custom in all Breton towns the men and maidens, clad in their picturesque costumes, are married each year. Breton bagpipes play the wedding marches and there is dancing in all the public squares. The vows of fidelity are made in French at the mairie, but in Breton in the churches.

Order in the Court

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Helgum of Albany, N. Y., argued so hard about a quarter that neighbors summoned the police. In court, after hearing the evidence, Judge Edward Hogan said: "It is lucky it was not a dollar or it might have been necessary to call out the marines."

Silent Lancashire Clogs

Another new trade has come to Lancashire. In the wake of a new fashion. It is the making, and the wearing, of the silent clog. Once every cotton town was filled with the clatter of the wooden clogs of the millworkers, as the irons with which they were shod clanged on the pavements. Now clogs are being made again in this time of economy, shod with rubber instead of iron. The millworker has taken back her old footwear, but goes to her looms on silent feet. Even postmen and policemen are using the new clog.

Mercollized Wax Keeps Skin Young

Get an ounce and use as directed. Fine particles of good skin sand will all diffuse such as wrinkles, liver spots, tan and freckles disappear. Skin is then soft and velvety. Your face looks years younger. Mercollized Wax brings out the hidden beauty of your skin. To remove wrinkles use one ounce Mercollized Wax dissolved in one-half pint warm water. At drug stores.

The greatest thrill a mother can know

HER BABY . . . thriving . . . gaining by leaps and bounds! His back, strong and fine as a little champion's. His teeth developing perfectly. His legs straight and sturdy. His skin rosy, his flesh firm, his whole body a living promise of health—radiant, buoyant health—through the years to come!

Can any food except Nature's food build such a baby? Millions of mothers have answered Yes to this question. And now more emphatically still a world-famous clinic answers Yes.

Living proof—in millions of healthy babies

Seventy-five years ago, Gail Borden gave Eagle Brand to the mothers of America. Today, Eagle Brand—second only to mother's milk in easy digestibility—is known as a wonderful infant food the world over. Eagle Brand has raised more healthy babies than any other food, excepting mother's milk. In practically every community are healthy, sturdy boys and girls, and men and women who got their start in life on Eagle Brand. In your own community, see how these Eagle Brand ex-babies compare.

What the scientists discovered

But newer still is the news from the world-famous baby clinic. Two physicians fed a group of 50 average babies on Eagle Brand for a period of several months—checking with care every detail of their health and growth. Bone structure. Tooth development. Weight and height gains. Blood count . . . And those 50 Eagle Brand babies, judged by every known test, proved themselves superbly nourished!

Mail coupon below for a free copy of "Baby's Welfare"—containing feeding instructions and directions for general care; also histories and pictures of Eagle Brand babies. We will gladly send your physician a report of above scientific test of Eagle Brand. Your grocer sells Eagle Brand—feeding instructions are on the label.

A damaging frost appeared last Thursday night, and ill effects are seen on the low lands. Corn was frozen badly and the potatoes that were in bloom were ruined many acres being torn up and re-planted. The late potatoes may recover from the set back.

The sidewalk in front of the Betz Restaurant has been lowered, where the roots raised and broke the cement. An improvement much appreciated. Other places about town that need attention ought to be cared for now and thus add to the appearance of our little city.

A Home Coming and Washington Bi-Centennial celebration will be held at the Coburn Corners Church on Sunday, July 10th. The public is invited to attend this all day meeting as a very good program has been arranged. At the noon hour basket dinner will be enjoyed. Come bring your basket and prepare to stay for the day and great old friends. Clyde Hart is the chairman.

A nice crowd turned out Saturday night to hear the band concert and they did themselves justice. Surely considerable credit is due the members of the organization and their instructor, Donald Kinsey. Arrange to hear them next Saturday night, and meet your neighbors here.

TO TEACH AT FLINT

Dorothy Glinther, who has just completed her four years schooling at Purdue University, has a teacher's contract for next year at Flint, Ind., west of Angola, where she will teach English and Home Economics in the consolidated school. Dorothy is sure a lucky girl to step into active work, as there are so many teachers looking for schools and not many changes being made.

SPENCERVILLE SCHOOL REUNION THURSDAY

The Spencerville School Reunion met June 30th in the school house, with 75 in attendance. The younger mingled with the older in such a spirit it was hard to tell which was getting the most enjoyment. The familiar faces of some of the older faces were missed, but a goodly number of new teachers enrolled.

In the absence of the president, the vice president, Mrs. Ella Fischer, very ably filled the chair, opening the meeting with prayer by Rev. Brown of the M. E. Church. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Dr. Carey gave the history of the township organization, which was very interesting. Remembrance meeting of the deceased: Emma Tyndall Kees, Belle Scott Cope, Dr. Gerry Emanuel and Chris McNabb. Business meeting of bills read and approved.

Officers for the following year were chosen as follows: President, Dr. Wyatt, of Fort Wayne; vice president, Ella Fischer, of Pleasant Lake; secretary and treasurer, Mattie Hart. It was suggested that next year we bring good books for the library.

Brotherhood Entertainment at Newville Church.

The Wittenberg Brotherhood will meet in the Newville Christian Church, Wednesday evening, July 13 at 8:00 o'clock.

Frank Lyon, County Auditor, will speak on the subject of "The Duties of the Officers of the Local Government." All the men of the county are cordially invited.

A cool soda or sundae is certainly worth the price... but where do you get more for your money than in buying Electric Service?

Tickling your palate for a few minutes with a cool, refreshing soda or sundae is certainly worth the money.

Not everyone realizes that for the same price you can use electricity in your home for many hours—or even days.

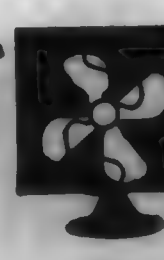

Compare what you spend for refreshments—or for anything else—with what you pay for electric service, and you will know how cheap your electric service is.

JOHN GRESHAM'S GIRL

By CONCORDIA MERREL

(Copyright)—WFOU Service.

THE STORY

By chance James Lee meets Lucy Gresham, daughter of Sir John Gresham, wealthy ship builder, Lee, unjustly accused of robbing the Gresham firm, was sent to prison. He blames Oliver Ames, Lucy's cousin, and Gresham's manager, and seeks revenge. Lee inherits wealth, and in compliance with the will, changes his name from Warrington. He secures an invitation to the girl's birthday party. Lucy is practically engaged to Ames. She meets Lee, who makes love to her. With Gresham's approval, Lucy and Lee are married. Lee starts the girl by telling her he does not love her, and hates her "whole breed." She hears the story of his wrongs, and his determination to be avenged. She believes in his innocence of the crime for which he was convicted. "Linforths," rival of Gresham's, shows a determination to crush his competitor. Lee tells Lucy he is "Linforths," and means to ruin her father. Lucy is hurt by Jocelyn Upton's assertion that Lee loved her before he met Lucy, and the latter believes her. Jocelyn seeks to win Lee, but is repulsed.

CHAPTER VII

Lucy Meets Macklin

Lucy arrived at Newchester shortly after five, and there, as she went into the train to greet her, he noticed that she looked rather tired, but put that down to the length of the journey. Within five minutes they were in his big car, driving to the Royal hotel.

"Did your father suggest the Royal to you?" he asked, as they drew up outside the main entrance.

"No, Jim did," she answered, and caught a quick breath.

"Oh, he knows Newchester, then?"

"He . . . stayed here, once . . . ago ago . . ." She couldn't say it quite evenly, because it was utterly against her nature to be anything but absolutely frank.

"It's a nice, homely place. A bit old-fashioned, but jolly good food of the roast beef and plum pudding type. . . . And I was able to get you the best suite. I've got to bolt back to Edgestone just to clear up some business I left unfinished. Shall you feel sufficiently rested to dine with me to-night?"

"Yes, I'm all right."

"Then that's settled. I'll call for you at seven, and then I'll hear all this pressing reason of yours for this perfectly joyful visit. . . . Au revoir!"

He left her and she went up to her room. Here too was brought to her, and she drank it gratefully.

She had a lot to think about. She must be careful what she said to Oliver tonight. She must tell him how she was planning to help Gresham's, without making him suspicious that she had any inner knowledge of the situation. For her plan to help Gresham's was in reality a plan to save Jim by defeating him. She could not let him be successful in this fight that was not a clean fight; this campaign that all honest men would call a dirty trick; that would make all decent men shrink and eyes him ashamed. . . . If her help should be no good, at least it should not be said that she had not tried. But Oliver must not know that her anxiety to help Gresham's was just a disguise for her passionate desire to save Jim.

She dressed presently, and was ready when Ames called for her. He took her to the best restaurant in Newchester and when dinner was well under way, said:

"Now then, Lucy, what was it you so urgently wanted to see me about?"

"About Gresham's," she answered, "and Linforths." He looked at her a little surprised. "Since when has John Gresham's girl taken such an interest in the business?" he asked, with a laugh. She leaned across the table.

"No; don't laugh, Oliver. I'm in earnest," she protested. "I know I've never taken much interest in Gresham's. But I do now. You can call it a newly awakened sense of . . . responsibility, if you like. Anyway, I don't like to hear that we are threatened. Oliver, we mustn't let Linforths beat us. We mustn't."

She leaned nearer still and her face was extraordinarily earnest. He looked at her a moment.

"I'm not going to imagine for a single second that Linforths will," he said lightly. "And I honestly don't think Linforths can. The campaign they are running against us is a dead loss to them pretty nearly every time. That can't go on for long."

"It might go on long enough to drag us down into the loss, too," she argued. "Only if they're a mighty big capital."

"Perhaps they have," she said quickly. "Perhaps they have heaps of money; and heaps of . . . malicious, revengeful feeling. . . ." She drew a breath. He laughed slightly.

"They've got that, all right," he said shortly.

"Yes," she said slowly. "They've got that all right. . . . I mean," she caught herself up quickly. "They seem to have. But they mustn't win. Oliver. They mustn't be allowed to win. It will be . . . an awful disaster if . . . they . . . should be allowed to win."

"Well, dear, they shan't win if Gresham's can prevent it. You may be sure of that. But we, no better than they, can afford to lose for ever," he answered.

"I've been thinking about it, Oliver, and it seems as if it would be so terribly important to us. . . . So awful if they should win. There's nothing very much I can do, but I can help in one way. Money, Oliver, you can count on every penny, to the very last, of my money, the money that mother left me; to help Gresham's; to beat Linforths."

He looked at her, smiling.

"You warm-hearted, generous dear," he said. "But your father will never allow your money to be used."

"Then he mustn't know. That's why I came to you. I haven't said anything to daddy. But, Oliver, if you were to let Linforths win this disgraceful victory, because you wouldn't touch my money; when my money would have beaten them, I'll never, never forgive you." Her intensity astonished him.

"Why, Lucy, I'd no notion you felt like this!" he cried. "But I'm glad of your interest in the old show. I thought you didn't feel it; just took what it yielded without question or affection." He spoke a little suddenly, as a man will when he speaks of something that means a lot to him.

"Then if you're glad of that, Oliver, you'll promise me to use my money, if it should be necessary. Or before it's necessary; if it should ever be useful. I've got a heap, as you know. And I'll every penny of it, Gresham's."

"What does Jim say to this?" he asked, and the question came so suddenly that she started, saying:

"What?" And, recovering quickly, managed a very good imitation of a laugh and went on quickly: "Oh, Jim isn't interested in what I do with my money. He has such a lot, that mine doesn't count," she went on, conscious that she was speaking very fast, "and since he . . . does . . . precisely as he likes with his own . . . he'd be the very first to admit the justice of my doing as I like with mine."

She could not prevail upon Oliver to give the definite promise she wanted, but he did say that he'd remember it when he had need. And with that Lucy had to be content, and after that, they talked in a more general way.

Next day, he took her over the yards and offices of Gresham's, showing her everything; and explaining things to her, lucidly and well. She was tremendously interested in everything and something tremendously more than interested, too. For, though to Ames this was merely the work of Gresham's, to her it was the place where Jim had done his bit of that work. The place where he had put his big energy into his job; his hope and ambition, too. The place where disgrace had fallen upon him, and the doors of the future had suddenly closed against him. She spoke of the Warrington case. Asking questions about it as unconcernedly as she could, while her heart threatened to suffocate her with its violent beating.

"You've got that wretched man on your conscience, Lucy," Ames told her. "Your father said you had been talking about him only a little while ago."

"His case," she answered, flushing, "is part of the history of Gresham's. I want to know it all; in every detail."

"Then you shall," he said, easily, and steered the talk along happier channels.

As they were passing the entrance to the office, a man came running briskly downstairs and out through the wide doorway. Ames stopped him.

"Oh, Macklin," he said, "will you take Mrs. Lee to have a look at the works? She is here to inspect."

The man turned quickly, a smile on his lips.

"I will indeed, sir," he answered, "Go with Mr. Macklin, Lucy," said Ames, "and when you've seen everything you want to see, tell him to bring you up to my office."

Story of Samson Found in Oriental Literature

Discoveries on the site of the ancient city of Beth-Shemesh, in Palestine, by the Haverford college and archaeological expedition, confirm the scientific supposition that this gray mound on the border between Dan and Judah was once a part of Egypt's domain, once Philistine, once Hebrew, once Roman, once Byzantine; but it would have been more interesting if the American archeologists had found something like a visiting card of the giant Samson, or a bit of jewelry with the monogram of a lady named Delilah, in the ruins. For it is supposed that it was here, at Beth-Shemesh, that the famous betrayal of Samson—

Fire Insurance Beginning

Fire insurance may be said to date from the Great Fire of London, in 1666. Several companies were formed during the remainder of the Seventeenth century and at the beginning of the Eighteenth century, some of which still exist. In the United States, the first fire insurance company to be established was the Philadelphia Contributionship, which was organized on April 13, 1752. This company was patterned in many respects after the Hand-in-Hand of London, which was established toward the close of the Seventeenth century.

Found by Columbus

The Hargrave sea was discovered by Columbus upon his first voyage to this hemisphere.

Lucy went off with her new guide. He was very attentive, very respectful. But Lucy disliked him. She could not have told just why. Perhaps it was the touch, ever so slight, but still a touch of cringing in his deference. He was just a shade too respectful. Lucy found herself jarred and irritated by it, and she was glad when she had seen all she wanted to and could ask him to show her to Oliver's office.

He rose as Macklin showed Lucy in, and pushed up a chair for her.

"Since you are so interested in that affair, Lucy," he said, "I've looked out the various papers and notes about it, so that you can see them. Mrs. Lee is anxious to know that Warrington had a square deal, Macklin," he added.

Macklin was at the door, just going out. He stopped; stood still a moment; then turned back.

"I wish we could think he didn't, sir. He always seemed such a fine young fellow."

Lucy felt an almost irresistible impulse to get up and hit out at something or some one; Macklin perhaps, for the smug patronage of his words and tone. "Such a fine young fellow. . . ." Jim! With all his strength and courage; and all he had had to suffer! . . . To be patronized by this obsequious, insincere, shifty-looking man. . . .

"Mrs. Lee thinks, very rightly, that, as future owner of Gresham's, she ought to acquaint herself with all the details of Gresham's history. The Warrington case is certainly one of one of the finest servants this show has ever secured," Oliver explained. "I don't like him. He's insincere."

"How? What evidence have you of that?"

Evidence! And she had only her woman's answer to give:

"I just know it."

Oliver laughed again.

"You dear," he said, pettingly. She rose suddenly, irritated by his tone.

"Don't," she said sharply. "This is serious. That man isn't sincere. You can laugh and scoff as much as you like. But I know I'm right. If I were in your place, Oliver, I wouldn't have him working for me for two seconds."

"Perhaps, then, it's just as well, for the good of Gresham's, apart from the good of poor old Macklin that I am sitting in this chair, and not you. Big business aren't to be run on likes and dislikes; on instincts and feelings, but on reason, Lucy. A man has to be proved untrustworthy before I'll believe him so."

"Proved?" she countered, "just as it was proved against . . . this man."

"Warrington?" The words came difficultly and she pointed to the papers on the desk.

"Exactly," he answered.

She laughed. It wasn't a very laughing sound, and said:

"All right. But I don't agree with you, if you cut out instincts and feelings, you are cutting out the subtlet, swiftest method of summing up a character, there is. I'll borrow these Warrington records, if I may, Oliver. I'd like to go to them carefully."

He gathered them up, snapped a rubber band around them, and handed them to her.

She said good-by and went to the door.

Macklin turned and sped, feet and silent-footed, along the corridor, and was out in the main yard when Lucy passed through to the taxi that was waiting for her at the gate.

"She's got some reason, beyond the mere desire to see justice done, for her anxiety over this Warrington business," he thought to himself. "And I'd very much like to know just what the reason is. . . ."

Lucy was deep in those papers all the afternoon and evening. The evidence, as Oliver had said, seemed terribly strong against Jim. But her belief in him was stronger still, and it did not waver, even though she could see no clear support for it.

There was just one thing her mind worried over and couldn't leave, and that was the fact that Macklin's evidence against Jim seemed to have had terrific effect. She could see now, just how Macklin came into the scheme of things, and his narrow face was often before her mind's eye.

It was nearly ten o'clock before she thought came to her.

"Supposing Macklin had supported Jim in his contention that he had lost his wallet before the robbery took place? . . . Supposing that, when Macklin had been asked whether Jim had spoken of the loss of it, he had said yes instead of no?"

At that point, she found her head humming. . . . Why, of course, it was that point that really had decided the whole case. That one point. Really, that one word: "no," of Macklin's. Then the thing resolved itself to this: Which was telling the truth: Jim or Macklin? She knew where her faith lay, and was instantly raging with indignation that anyone, given the opportunity for believing either in Jim or in Macklin, should deliberately have chosen the man who, it seemed to her, was so obviously insincere in everything he said.

There was one thing she found in the papers that started a new trail, and that was the name of the cottage where Jim had lived. "Brady's cottage," it was called, and it seemed to be situated somewhere between Newchester and Edgestone. She felt that she wanted to see it. She turned thought over in her mind for a while, and at last went to bed with her mind made up. She would go to Brady's cottage tomorrow morning.

When a maid brought up her breakfast next morning, Lucy asked her whether she knew Brady's cottage.

"Oh, yes, madam. Quite a landmark the place is," the girl answered at once. "It's supposed to bring bad luck to anyone who lives in it. Old Mrs. Brady—Mother Brady they used to call her, she lived there for years, and her husband died there, and one of her boys was killed in the war, and her girl ran away with a man who wasn't good. . . . And then there's the tree, you know, a huge elm, and every one said it 'ud fall and smash the cottage some time. And on top of all, the robbery, well, it's enough to give a place a bad name, isn't it, madam?"

"What robbery was that?" asked Lucy, spreading butter on a triangle of toast, with great attention.

"It was under the elm that the poor clerk was found; all bleeding, they say he was, and unconscious. I never saw him, but I've been to the place often; it's empty now and no one won't have anything to do with it. Can't blame anyone really, can you? I wouldn't, know." As she was hurrying away, Lucy said:

"How do you get to the cottage? I think I'll go and have a look at it some time today. . . ."

She obtained all the directions she needed, and the girl left her.

She had a lot to think about.

The details. To Lucy he said "Mr. Macklin was very much in that case, Lucy. No one knows more of it, or can judge more impartially than he."

Lucy raised her eyes suddenly and looked at Macklin. It came flooding in upon her mind that he must be one of the men concerned in the building about him only a little while ago.

"His case," she answered, flushing, "is part of the history of Gresham's. I want to know it all; in every detail."

THE CALL OF MOSES

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 3:1-10. GOLDEN TEXT—And he said, Certainly I will be with thee, and this shall be a token unto thee, that I have sent thee: When thou hast brought forth the people out of Egypt, ye shall serve God upon this mountain.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Bush on Fire. JUNIOR TOPIC—Moses Given a Great Task.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Hearing and Heeding God's Call. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Accepting a Great Task.

I. Moses Trained in Midian (2:11-15).

The occasion of his being in the desert was the effort of Pharaoh to slay him when he heard of Moses' act in slaying the Egyptian who was smiting a Hebrew. Having fled from the face of Pharaoh, he took up his abode in the land of the Midianites. He himself needed further discipline for his great work. This he experienced through forty years in the desert.

II. His Marriage to Zipporah (2:16-22).

Soon after his arrival in the Land of Midian he defended the daughters of Reuel, the priest of Midian, against the shepherds, and watered their flock. Out of gratitude for this act Moses was called into the priest's house to eat bread. While dwelling in this house Zipporah, a daughter of the priest, became his wife.

III. The Lord Speaks to Moses at the Burning Bush (3:1-6).

While keeping the flock of his father-in-law in the desert the Lord

NEW INVENTION AID
TO AIR TRANSPORTExplorer Reveals Secrets of Ancient Near East.

Chicago.—How he has ridden "on a magic carpet with three motors" over the exhumed cities of the ancient Near East, looking down through many centuries and many strata of old civilizations, recording on 12,000 feet of film the most extraordinary motion picture ever attempted, was told by Charles Breasted of the University of Chicago.

As executive secretary of the university's Oriental Institute, Mr. Breasted has just completed a 3,500 mile flight over Egypt, Palestine, Syria, Turkey, Iraq and Persia, where twelve archeological expeditions under the direction of his famous father, Dr. James H. Breasted, are digging up ruins of forgotten cities.

"The new past"—"new" because the human race now living has never known the facts before, and "past" because it dates from King Solomon—will be the title of the picture when it is produced, with the voice of Doctor Breasted himself giving meaning to what appears on the screen.

But it was the younger Breasted who described how one old city after another has yielded its secrets to the spades and picks of the expeditions.

"What it means," he said, "is not merely the digging up of buried cities, but actually the reconstruction of life as it was lived in successive periods.

Marked 50-Cent Piece
Ends 20-Year Journey

Bakersfield, Calif.—Twenty years of travel, over thousands of miles and through many states, by the hand of honest men and thieves, ended here for a marked 50-cent piece, when Lee Bryan returning the coin to its rightful owner.

Bryan, grocery store manager, was a clerk in the C. A. Blodgett store, in Spokane, Wash., on March 17, 1912, when his employer marked the 50-cent piece with his initials and the date, to commemorate the birth of a son.

Bryan watched the ritual. Blodgett put the marked coin in the office safe. It nestled alongside a prized dollar, dated 1794. Six months later the strong box was opened by burglars. They took the two keepsake coins, along with other loot.

Recently, the Bakersfield grocer was counting up the cash at his store. He noted a familiar coin. It was the marked half dollar, with "C. A. B.—March 17, 1912," scratched on its face.

Bryan sent the coin back to his former employer.

"Hot" Ice Is Produced by Harvard Professor

Cambridge, Mass.—Ice hot enough to burn one severely has been produced by Prof. F. W. Bridgman of Harvard university.

High pressures are used to produce hot ice. Ice which melts at four degrees below zero is obtained at 80,000 pounds pressure and at 300,000 pounds pressure water remains solid at 190 degrees Fahrenheit.

Professor Bridgman's method of producing high pressure is described by him as "simple." Here it is:

"Take a large thick block of steel, bore a hole in it and put liquid into the hole. Then put into the top of the hole a plug which will not leak and push on the plug. A limit of the high pressure obtainable is set by two things: The leaking of the plug and the yielding of the steel container."

In a few cases, pressures up to 600,000 pounds have been reached. The danger of the process is seen by the fact that it has been found necessary to set some pieces of apparatus behind boiler plate to protect the operators, for such extreme pressures are 10 to 30 times those in long-range guns.

It Was His Cow; His Whistle Proved It

Fort Worth, Texas.—She was his cow, she knew his whistle, a negro told Deputy Sheriff Galloway.

Two negroes were disputing the ownership of the cow. Galloway took them to the pasture where the cow was grazing in a distant corner.

"When I whistle, she'll raise her head and bawl," the first negro said. He whistled. The cow bawled. He got the cow.

We can tell how kings ruled, how armies fought, how common people tilled their fields, traded, married, reared families, died and were buried. These cities are silent mounds now, representing stratum after stratum—"layer cakes" of different civilizations and periods.

The most important work under way, he said, is that of the expedition which is restoring Persepolis, capital of the Persian empire built by Darius the Great about 500 B. C. and destroyed by Alexander the Great in 331 B. C. It rests at the base of a black mountain on a terrace constructed of huge blocks of stone.

The tombs of Darius and Xerxes are there, carved out of rock in the mountainside and faced by mighty sculptured columns. The expedition has its headquarters in the reconstructed harem of Darius.

Mr. Breasted told of the unearthing of engineering achievements so extraordinary that modern builders cannot guess the methods used—the Cleopatra arch, for example, 140 feet high, with an unsupported span of eighty-four feet.

"It seems to defy the law of gravity," he said. "Modern engineers are unable to explain how it was built and why it has not collapsed."

Another expedition, he said, is excavating the mound of Mogiddo, which guards the pass leading through the Carmel range near the lake of Galilee. All the ancient armies that marched between Egypt and Palestine had to use that pass.

"Digging through layer after layer there," said Mr. Breasted, "our expedition has reached the period of Solomon, 950 B. C., and one may now walk through the stables once occupied by the monarch's horses."

At Khorsabad near Mosul, one expedition is digging out the palace and the city of King Sargon II, who ruled Assyria. That is where the institute obtained the great winged bull of stone, now at the museum at the university.

Deepest of all, in terms of time, is the work of the Iraq expedition, uncovering twin cities northeast of Baghdad, dating back to 2500 B. C.—forty-four centuries ago.

Dyke Makes Zuider Zee a Lake

Holland to Reclaim 500,000 Acres for Farms.

Amsterdam.—The Zuider Zee, a familiar landmark on all maps of Europe for centuries, has become a thing of the past. Amid the screeching of sirens on hundreds of excursion steamers and tugboats the last gap was closed in the 18-mile dike connecting Wieringen with Friesland. The Zuider Zee thus became an inland lake, as it was before the North sea rolled in over northern Holland 600 years ago.

Hereafter the Zuider Zee will be known as IJssel Lake, or, in the Dutch, IJsselmeer.

The completion of the dikes will make it possible to reclaim 500,000 acres now under water for Queen Wilhelmina's little kingdom. This work will soon begin on three large areas of reclaimed land, which, when completed, will leave the lake with only one-quarter of the Zuider Zee's present expanse. Another area near the island of Wieringen already has been reclaimed, and the first villages built upon it were visited recently by Princess Juliana.

While all the rest of Holland rejoiced over today's event, the fishermen of the Zuider Zee ports were in mourning. The Dutch flag flew at half-mast on the fishing boats huddled beneath the dikes at Volendam and Marken and tragedy brooded over the picturesque villages known to tourists from all over the world. The completion of the dikes means the end of the Zuider Zee fishing industry. When the reclamation is finished, a few years hence, these little fishing towns will become inland farming communities.

The Zuider Zee consists of an inner and an outer basin, covering 2,027 square miles. Its greatest length from north to south is 80 miles and its greatest width 34 miles.

Expert Thinks Ancient Papyrus May Alter Bible

London.—Sitting in a fireproof room guarded with a steel door and each window protected by iron bars, Chester Beatty, American collector, showed a number of glass frames containing papyrus, said to constitute the oldest biblical manuscript in the world.

Considerable comment was caused in scholarly circles by the recent announcement that Beatty had succeeded, finding a series of papyrus relating to the Bible and said to be two hundred years older than anything else of the sort yet discovered.

Whether the translation of the papyrus now being prepared by Sir Frederick Kenyon, formerly curator of the British Museum, and other experts, will reveal new versions of biblical subjects or not it is too early to tell, explained Beatty.

"I do know already," he continued, "that a number of minor differences have been noted, but I doubt whether they will make it necessary to do more than alter words in the Bible. I should be surprised if there were any important alterations."

Hospital Uses Sun Tan to Mark Newborn Babies

Kansas City, Mo.—A sun tan brand, putting a number on the sole of a baby's foot, will make certain that no baby born in General hospital here will ever be given to the wrong mother.

Since the famous Bamberger-Watkins case in Chicago, when a mother claimed she had the wrong baby, hospitals have tried various ways to "label" the newborn youngsters.

The sun tan has solved the problem, hospital attaches believe.

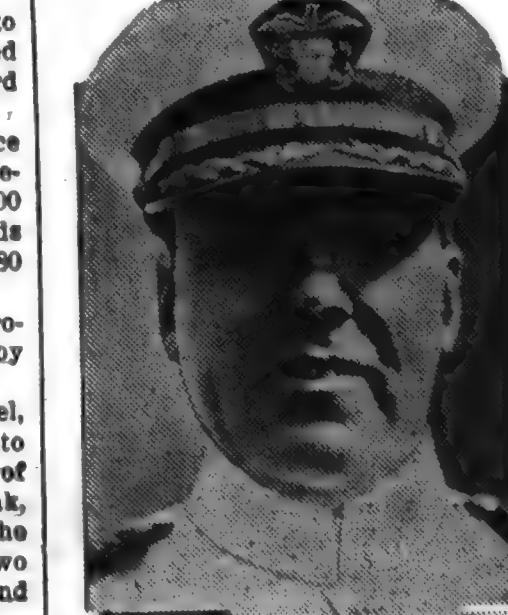

Just after the baby is born and before it and its mother leave the delivery room the baby is put in the sun tan machine. In less than a minute the ultra violet ray has stamped the identification mark on the bottom of the baby's foot.

Then the mother's arm is put in the machine and the same mark is stenciled there. After that there is no chance that the labels will get mixed.

Texas Cave Soon Will Be Opened for Tourists

San Antonio, Texas.—Wood's cave, 100 miles north of here, soon will be open for the inspection of tourists, according to plans to beautify Texas highways. The underground recess consists of three main corridors, all more than one-half mile in length, and is of sandstone and limestone formation. The central cavern is 40 feet in diameter and 30 feet high.

PRESIDENT'S AIDE

Capt. Walter Newhall Vernon, U. S. N., commanding officer of the U. S. S. Northampton, who has been appointed to succeed Capt. Charles Russell Train as naval aide to President Hoover.

Air Pilot on Horseback

Butte, Mont.—Airmail Pilot Ray Elmore was forced to abandon his southbound plane in a field and connect with the Salt Lake City bound train to deliver his mail. He rode horseback for the "ten toughest miles of the 600-mile trip" to make the connection.

Wears "Class" Numerals

Middleboro, Mass.—A turtle shell bearing the initials "E. F. T." and the numerals "1835" was unearthed by a sewer gang here.

Great Highway Bridge Across the Rogue River

The recently completed bridge which connects the Roosevelt highway between the cities of Wedderburn and Gold Beach in the southern part of Oregon and crosses the mouth of the Rogue river, the headwaters of which are famous as the fishing grounds where President Hoover tried his luck in 1927.

VALUES?

You can't beat these!

RIGHT now, Goodyear is building the best tires that ever came from the world's largest rubber factory.

Right now, you can get the lowest tire prices ever featured before a July 4th holiday.

This statement is true, even though the prices shown here include the new U. S. tax.

Read them and be convinced. These prices buy Goodyear Speedways—the tires that have been making such a sensation in this low-price year.

They're real Supertwist Balloons—built to Goodyear standards—marked with the Goodyear name and house flag—with the extra mileage of Goodyear balanced construction.

When you look at these big, husky, stout and sturdy Goodyears you'll certainly say to yourself:

"Why buy any second-choice tire when FIRST-CHOICE costs no more?"

MODERN RUSH NOT OBSERVED IN SPAINPeasant's Tempo That of the Mule and Donkey.

The real Spain consists of all the land between the Pyrenees and Portugal, except Madrid, Barcelona, and perhaps one or two other towns. It is a land of vast plains, ending upon the horizon in great mountains dying down again far away into another vast plain. It is a land of the donkey and mule, of corn and vines and olives. The inhabitants are peasants who cultivate with immense assiduousness the great levels, and who terrace high up into the mountains in order to grow more corn and olives and oranges and almonds.

If he has money it goes into land rather than into the hands of bankers, brokers and jobbers, and so the traveler from the railway-carriage window Spain appears to be a gigantic country very sparsely populated, the price of land is everywhere very high, amounting in some places to as much as $500 an acre.

The life of these peasants and cultivators is bound to the land. Its "tempo" is that of the pace of the mules and donkeys, which, wherever you may be, are to be seen with their great packs, moving slowly across the plains, or up and down the mountainous tracks. In Spain, as everywhere else, it is the method of transport which determines how men shall live.

The superficial vivacity and excitability of the southerner conceals the fact that the Spaniard lives slowly and meditatively. In a Spanish posada you sit after dinner round a wood fire with the innkeeper and his family, the "boots" and the carrier, and the conversation is only an interval between long silences in which everyone meditatively stares into the glowing embers. The Spaniard, in fact, belongs to a Europe which had not invented the steam engine, or rather, perhaps, he belongs, not to Europe at all, but to the East, where men talk quickly, but live slowly, cultivating their gardens and moving at the same pace as their camels or their bullock carts—Leonard Woolf in "Essays."

Bohoid friends can't explain why they are fond of each other. They are dumb, but devoted.

WHAT THE NEW TAXES MEAN

A recent Associated Press dispatch from Washington gave an interesting insight into what the new revenue bill will mean to the wage earner.

A married business man with one child, having a net income of $6,000, will pay an income tax to the Federal government of $124 as against $23.63 in the past. If he buys a $600 automobile he will have to pay a new tax of $18 plus 60 cents for taxes on tires, etc. If he uses 700 gallons of gasoline during the year and 30 gallons of lubricating oil, he will pay a tax of $8.20, in addition to state gas and oil taxes. If his wife gets a $200 fur coat the tax will be $20.

If he makes home brew he will pay about $3 in taxes on malt. His wife's perfumes, powder, etc., will cost another $3. If he buys a $75 radio and pays $100 for an electric refrigerator, the taxes will be $3.75 and $5, respectively. He will pay increased taxes on cameras, electricity, matches, the telephone and a hundred other commodities and services. If he spends $2 a week for shows and movies, the Treasury will get $10 from him by the end of the year.

His total direct taxes will be about $310, as against $174 under the old rates—an increase of $236.

It looks as if the new bill will fatten a depleted Treasury—but its going to make a deep hole in the public pocketbook. And these taxes are only a beginning unless definite steps are taken to curb the expense of government, the cost of which increases like compound interest as the number of public employees grows.

LEO

Mr. and Mrs. Homer Garman and daughters spent Sunday with Mr. John Gerig and Miss Lena Gerig.

R & A DENIED PETITION TO CLOSE LOCAL STATION

Official word is now in the hands of our town officials, received from the Public Service Commission last week, and the part of special interest to our readers, contained in the report, is as follows:

"The Commission having considered add available evidence and being sufficiently advised in the premises believes and finds:

1. "That the revenues derived by the petitioner at the said station of St. Joe are adequate for the maintenance of the said station without any financial loss to the petitioner.

2. "That it has been made to appear to the Commission beyond any reasonable doubt that at this time there is a necessity for the services of an agent at the station of St. Joe, and that the general public would suffer an inconvenience by reason of the removal of said agent. Therefore, it is the judgment of the Commission that the prayer of the petitioner should be denied, and it will be so ordered.

"IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED by the Public Service Commission of Indiana that the petitioner, the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company shall be denied the authority to change the station at St. Joe, DeKalb County, Indiana, from an agency to a non-agency station."

"I LIKE THE DEPRESSION"

No More Prosperity For Me,
Says Texan.

I like the depression.

No more prosperity for me.

I have had more fun since the depression started than I ever had in my life. I had forgotten how to live, what it meant to have real friends, what it was like to eat common everyday food. Fact is, I was getting just a little high hat.

Three years ago, only one man of the News-Globe organization could be out of town at a time and he had to leave at the last minute and get back as soon as possible. Many times I have driven 100 miles to a banquet, sat through three hours of bunk in order to make a five minute speech, then drive the 100 miles back so as to be ready for work the next day.

Nowadays, as many News-Globe employees as are invited make the trips and we stay as long as we want to. The whole outfit could leave the office now and it would not make any difference.

I like the depression. I have time to visit my friends, to make new ones. Two years ago when I went to a neighboring town, I always stayed at the hotel. Now I go home with my friends, stay all night and enjoy home cooking. I have even spent the week end with some of the boys who have been kind enough to invite me.

It's great to drop into a store and feel that you can spend an hour or two or three or four hours just visiting and not feel that you are wasting valuable time. I like the depression.

I am getting acquainted with my neighbors. In the last six months I have become acquainted with folks who have been living next door to me for three years. I am following the Biblical admonition, "Love your neighbors." One of my neighbors has one of the best looking wives I have ever seen. She is a dandy. I am getting acquainted with my neighbors and learning to love them.

Three years ago, I ordered my clothes from a merchant tailor—two and three suits at a time. All my clothes were good ones. I was always dressed up. But now, I have not bought a suit in two years. I am mighty proud of my Sunday-go-to-meeting clothes. At times when I dress up, I am dressed up and I don't mean maybe. I like the depression.

Three years ago I was so busy and my wife was so busy that we didn't see much of each other. I never went home to lunch. About twice a week I went home for dinner—at 6:30 o'clock, I never had time to go anywhere with her. If I did go on a party, I could never locate her and since there was always a "blond" or a "redhead" available I didn't worry much about it.

My wife belonged to all the clubs in town. She even joined the young mother's club. We don't have any children, but she was studying—and between playing bridge and going to clubs, she was never at home.

We got stuck up and hifalutin. We even took down the old family bed and bought a set of twin beds—on the installment plan.

When I would come down home at night if my wife was at home, she would already be in her bed and I would crawl in mine. If she came in last, it was vice versa.

We like the depression. We have come down off our pedestal and are really living at my house now. The twin beds are stored in the garage and the old family affair is being used. We are enjoying life. Instead of taking a hot water bottle to bed these cold nights she sticks her heels in my back just like she did before Hoover was elected.

I haven't been out on a party in eighteen months. I have lost my book of telephone numbers. My wife has dropped all the clubs. I believe we are falling in love all over again. I am pretty well satisfied with my wife. Think I will keep her at least until she is forty, and then if I feel like I do now I may trade her for two twenties. I am feeling better since the depression. I take more exercise. I walk to town and a lot of folks who used to drive Cadillacs are walking with me. I like depression.

My digestion is better. I haven't been to see a doctor in a year. I can eat anything I want to. I am getting real, honest to goodness food. Three years ago we had filet mignon once a week, now we have round steak with flour, gravy. Then, we had roast beef of guinea bosom with the buttons.

I like the depression. My salary has been cut to where I can't afford to buy lettuce and spinach and parsley and we can't afford to have sandwiches and frozen desserts and all that damfoolishness which has killed more good men than the World War.

I like the depression. Three years ago, I never had time to go to church. I played golf all day Sunday and besides I was so darn smart that there wasn't a preacher in West Texas who could tell me anything.

Now, I am going to church regularly, never miss a Sunday.

And if this depression keeps on, I will be going to prayer meeting before long.—(Written by Henry Ansley of The Amarillo, Texas, Globe-News.)

BIG DOUBLE CIRCUS HAS VAST PROGRAM

The colossus of all amusements, Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey Circus is definitely scheduled to exhibit in Ft. Wayne, Friday, July 22.

The No. 1 advertising car, the first of three in advance of The Greatest Show on Earth, is now in this vicinity. Billposters, bannermen, lithographers, radio men and press agents are heralding the great event, and soon everyone will be planning for a gala visit to the world's largest "big top," the center of the biggest canvas city ever assembled to thrill, entertain and amuse a great and discriminating populace.

Traveling on four trains of double-length steel railroad cars, the giant of super-circuses will bring 1600 people, 1009 menagerie animals, 50 elephants, 700 horses and a herd of the largest and tallest giraffes ever exhibited.

Pre-eminent features are many. A tribe of monster-mouthed Uban, of Savages from the jungles of equatorial Africa are presented this season by popular demand.

The Flying Codonas, featuring Alfredo, the world's only triple mid-air somersault to a hand-to-hand catch; the Concellos and Haroldas, sensational aerialists; Miss Tamara, Europe's greatest circus star; Lucita Leers, supreme aerial gymnast; The Wallendas, defying death in astounding feats on a steel wire in the peak of the big top; Al Powell, flying aerial contortionist; The Rubio Sisters, Yacopis, Danvills and Hugony Sisters, amazing acrobats; The Rieffenach Troupe, heading the new five-continent congress of bareback stars; Maximo, beloved comedian of the slack wire—these are but a few of the stellar attractions.

There are 800 performers and 100 internationally celebrated and beloved clowns. The Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey horse fair has become a feature amazing in its appeal throughout the North American continent.

John Gresham's Girl

By CONCORDIA MERREL

(Copyright)—WNU Service.

THE STORY

By chance James Lee meets Lucy Gresham, daughter of Sir John Gresham, wealthy ship builder. Lee, unjustly accused of robbing the Gresham firm, was sent to prison. He blames Oliver Ames, Lucy's cousin, and Gresham's manager, and seeks revenge. Lee inherits wealth, and, in compliance with the will, changes his name from Warrington. He secures an invitation to the girl's birthday party. Lucy is practically engaged to Ames. She meets Lee, who makes love to her. With Lee are married. Lee stuns the girl by telling her he does not love her, and hates her "whole breed." She hears the story of his wrongs, and his determination to be avenged. She believes in his innocence. "Linforths," rival of Gresham's, show a determination to crush his competitor. Lee tells Lucy he is "Linforths," and intends to ruin her father. Lucy is hurt by Jocelyn Upton's assertion that Lee loved her before he met Lucy, and the latter believes her. Jocelyn seeks to win Lee, but is repulsed. Lucy places her personal fortune at Gresham's disposal to save the firm.

CHAPTER VII—Continued

Lucy did not take a taxi, as she wasn't at all anxious to make her visit in any way conspicuous. She got into a street car and went as far as it would take her out of Newchester and in the direction of Edgemoor. She walked the rest of the way, keeping to the main road until she came to a lane which turned off to the left. There, a very ancient signpost told her that it was "Brady's lane." Along one side of this lane was a small wood, and at the end of it she saw the cottage, standing in the open light of a stretch of big fields.

Absorbed in her thoughts and with a fluttered little feeling of excitement, Lucy made quickly toward the cottage, until the sudden sound of soft footsteps, among the crackling undergrowth of the copse, made her start and stop. And when she turned quickly she drew a breath of sheer, downright fear. For coming toward her out of the cool dimness of the little wood was the strangest figure she had ever seen.

A man, dressed in dark, shabby clothes; immensely tall, and with big, stooped shoulders; long arms that hung before him in a rather monkeyish way and a slouching, loutish walk that made extraordinary little sound among the dry undergrowth. His small eyes were near together and squinted badly; his nose was thick and short, and his flabby, egg-shaped sort of mouth hung open in a silly way that gave her creeps.

She stood, absolutely struck with horror, watching the approach of this man; wishing she could force her legs to run, but startled beyond the power to make them. He came slouching toward her, nearer and nearer, and when suddenly he stopped short, about two yards from her, and smiled, it came to her just where the horror of him lay; he was mad. Then she realized that he wasn't exactly mad; that was too severe a word; he was silly; a village idiot type. She swallowed hard and forced her shaking lips to respond to his smile.

"Um Billy-Billy," he said, in a quite amiable, but rather husky voice. "Don't you know Billy-Billy? Every one knows Billy-Billy."

Frantically, she wondered what she ought to do. Ought she to humor him? Or would it be better to turn and go? No, that might offend him, and there was something in those squinting eyes of his, which made her think he wouldn't be a good person to offend. So she smiled again and said:

"Of course I do. How are you? Isn't it a lovely day?"

"Does yer want t'see the cottage?" he asked. "You must pay me a bob if you want to see the cottage."

"I . . . I haven't time to see the cottage today," she said hurriedly. "But I'll pay you the . . . the bob . . . with pleasure."

"If you don't want to see the cottage, you must pay me two bob," he said, and grinned at her more broadly still. He seemed a fairly harmless sort of loon, and was certainly possessed of the idiot's traditional "cuteness."

"That's the rule," he added. "Billy-Billy's rule."

"A very clever rule, too," she said, wishing her hands wouldn't tremble so as she fumbled with the money in her purse. "Did you think of it all yourself?"

He nodded. Lucy saw that his eyes were squinting down at her purse with acute interest. She offered the coin and he took it; but said:

"You're got more in there," and he pointed with his stumpy finger at the purse. She was startled again. This great, uncouth creature was hinting very plainly that he wanted the rest of her money. To her horror he came a step nearer.

"I'll tell you something," he said suddenly. "You gimme your purse an' I'll show you a clever trick . . ."

She backed away from him, nodding her head and saying, her voice shaken with the thumping of her heart. "All right . . . I'll give it to you . . . or, at least, I'll give you all the money. That's what you want, isn't it?"

"Yes, yes, yes, the money's what I want . . ." he agreed at once. So she gave him a miscellaneous collection of silver and copper. She thought now that he had the money, she could go. So she turned away and said:

"Good-by . . . I must hurry now . . ."

But he called out:

"Wait a minute! I haven't showed you my trick . . . Silly-Billy's darn clever trick . . . You think Silly-Billy's clever feller, don't you?"

"Yes, of course, only I haven't time . . . I must go . . ."

But to her horror, he caught her arm and began pulling her toward the little wood. It was as much as she could do to keep back a cry of terror, but instinct told her that her safest plan was to keep him in a good humor. The thought of what his temper might be, if aroused, was more terrifying than anything else. She could only think, with terror, that she was here alone, at the mercy of this abnormal creature with the gleaming squint eyes, and the thick, shapeless, awful mouth . . .

Lucy had plenty of pluck, but she was badly frightened now. There was nothing that she knew how to appeal to, in that coarse, distorted face; no argument she could think of to offer to that clouded, deformed intellect. The horror of those few moments was something she could never afterward forget. She could do nothing against him; she just had to allow herself to be taken wherever he cared to take her . . .

To her relief, he did not take her far. Some six or seven yards within the green shade of the trees, he stopped, released her arm, and grinned at her.

"Now Billy show his clever trick," he said, with great satisfaction. "You watch me," and dropping to his knees, he began pulling apart the bramble branches, and when he'd cleared a space, began scraping away the leaves and twigs. He looked like a great strange animal, as he scratched a shallow hollow, put some of the silver in it, and scraped the loosened earth over it again. Then he drew back the brambles, and scattered the leaves about. When he rose, she summoned her voice sufficiently to say:

"That's a . . . a very clever trick . . . Thank you for showing it to me . . . Now I must go . . ."

But Billy-Billy hadn't finished with her yet. He held out the few coins that still remained in his hand, and said:

"No, no, no . . . That's only half of the trick. You come along o' me . . . I'll show you . . ."

She was beginning to feel desperate by this time; wondering when on earth she would get free of him, but her instinct was still to keep him in a good humor, so when he moved away deeper into the wood, she followed, slowly, reluctantly, and keeping as great a distance from him as he would let her. After a minute or two, he stopped again, and again the same little scene was played through, and he buried a few more of the coins. Then he wanted to go further still for the last ones, but she said:

"No, let's find a better spot. A really good one, where no one would think of looking." And as he eagerly agreed and led the way through the trees, toward the main road. If she could once get out of the wood and into the road, she thought! He stooped along after her and said nothing until, with too great eagerness and hope, she was almost running. Then he called:

"No! Not Road over there. Too near. People see Billy-Billy . . . Too near . . ." So she was forced to stop. She looked back, saying:

"Oh, yes. I hadn't thought of that. But look what a lovely thick spot it is. No one could find it here."

He vigorously nodded his stupid, cunning head, dropped to his knees, and began to clear and scrape and dig with great energy, until the last of the money was buried. Then he rose again.

"That's Silly-Billy's trick," he said, grinning broadly. "Silly-Billy made that trick. Only me and you know . . ."

"You must be a very rich man," she said, admiringly.

But her compliment had a more violent effect than she had anticipated. He suddenly thrust his big head toward her, laid his thick finger across his lips and said—"Sh . . . sh . . ."

And glanced half-frightened, all around him. Then took a quiet step toward her, his squinting eyes glinting horribly.

"Don't you ever come lookin' to see what a rich man Billy is . . . Don't . . . ever come lookin' . . ."

"No, of course not . . . I wouldn't . . ."

She stammered . . . There came into his face then, a look which made her think again that he would be a hideous thing to deal with if his anger were aroused. She continued to stumble away from him, her fear rather obvious in her wide eyes, a hand pressed over her mouth to keep back the rending scream that was tearing at her throat for utterance. His big, misshapen hand was almost gripping her shoulder, when the sudden honking of a motor horn sounded from the road.

At that, Billy stopped dead still; dropped his hand to his side, stood a moment with an expression of terror in his eyes, then turned away, a queer, low cry breaking from him, and went off into the thick of the wood, going over the roughness with a sort of animal lightness and ease . . .

Lucy let fear have rein, and blindly made her stumbling way toward the narrow, rutty lane, running as fast as her legs would carry her . . . Suddenly, at the end of the lane just where it met, and turned into, the road, she saw a tall figure approaching . . .

"Jim!" she cried unthinkingly. "Jim!"

It's you!" Her heart was beating over this, and she was almost crying for relief, but this time she got through to her voice, for the reaction from her fear, and her utter astonishment at seeing Lee, put a curious, shaken note into it, which entirely cut out the ringing joy she felt. And he, completely unaware of the strain she had been through, and very full of his own peace-destroying thoughts and questions, came toward her, so dark-faced, dark-eyed and grim-lipped that even the relief and happiness her heart had felt seemed to go suddenly cold, when she saw him close to.

As he stopped before her, he looked down rather strangely into her face, and after a second asked abruptly:

"Are you alone?"

She stammered, her lips so shaky that she couldn't control them. He saw, then, how pale and near to tears she looked, but still had not the faintest notion of what had caused it.

"What's the matter?" he asked, abruptly still.

"It's all right . . . Only I've had a rather . . . queer adventure. Have you the car? Was it your car we heard?" Can you take me back to the hotel? He stood and looked down at her for a moment; then:

"We heard? You said you were alone. Who's we?"

"S . . . Silly-Billy . . ." she stammered. He frowned, puzzled and surprised.

"What?" he asked.

"Take me back, Jim, and I'll tell you."

"All right. Come along," he said, briefly. They went in silence to the car.

CHAPTER VIII

Lucy Makes a Discovery

When Lee had started the car, and they were on their way towards Newchester, he asked:

"Now tell me. Who's this Silly-Billy? Is it an idiotic pet name for . . . anyone?" His tone was so curiously brusque, that it suggested that he'd be glad to hit some one, or something. She glanced up at him, a good deal puzzled.

"A pet name? Jim, I wonder if you've ever seen him? You may know him quite well . . . He's a crazy creature. The village idiot of these parts, I imagine . . . Silly-Billy was the name he gave himself . . ."

Lee sat silent a moment, thinking back through nearly four years to the time when he lived at Brady's cottage.

"Why, that must be Billy Brady, old Mother Brady's half-witted nephew; son of one of her brothers-in-law . . . A great hulking fellow? With an awful squint? How did you meet him? How did you happen to be here, anyway?"

"I came to see the cottage. Where you used to live."

"Were you alone?"

"Again she looked up at him, puzzled.

"Yes. Until I met Billy."

"All right. Well, what did you come here for?"

She hesitated; then:

"Jim has it ever occurred to you, that the really effective thing to do, is to prove your innocence of that hateful business three years ago?"

He looked at her quickly.

"Why are you so convinced of my innocence?" he asked, rather as if her faith plagued him. "Remember that twelve good men and true, have proved otherwise."

"That was just some ghastly, nightmare mistake," she said, "and I am not influenced by it."

When he spoke again it was to return to the subject of Billy.

"What did he do to frighten you?"

She told him of the scene in the wood; how Billy had got her money from her and buried it under the brambles . . . And how, finally, he had really seemed dangerous when he warned her not to come back and find out what a rich man he was . . .

When they reached the hotel he had a suitcase taken in, and the car garaged, and followed Lucy up to her room. She stood for a while, looking at him; then drew a shaky little breath and laughed unsteadily.

"You're an utter surprise . . . But I've been so terrified by Billy and so crazy-glad at being rescued from him, that I've hardly had time to wonder what made you come here. What did, Jim?"

"Have you forgotten that I am Linforths?"

"But Linforths are not here."

"No; but Gresham's are."

"Ah, Jim! Is there nothing you will stop at to satisfy this demon of revenge that possesses you?" she cried, hurt to the heart, as she was always hurt when confronted by fresh evidences of his vengefulness.

"Nothing." He shot the word out through shut teeth; but she failed to hear in it the ring of challenge, as if he sought to assure himself; to strengthen his own resolution.

She looked at him thoughtfully.

"You oughtn't to come to Newchester, Jim. You might be recognized. There are so many of Gresham's men about. Surely, if it is necessary to watch our business movements, you could find some trustworthy . . . spy . . . to do the watching for you."

"There was a curl to her lip as she said that, that brought the hot color to his face.

For a moment it seemed that words clamored at his lips, and that he held them in check only with a mighty effort. Even with that effort his check upon them was evidently not complete, for he said abruptly:

"Perhaps that was not my only reason for coming here. Perhaps I came to . . . see you." Then:

"I've seen Jocelyn Upton," he said, and waited.

Wealth of Historical Interest in Old Boston

Boston is one of the oldest cities in the United States and few are possessed of greater historical traditions than this, "The Hub." Founded in 1830 under the lead of Gov. John Winthrop, it is a city in which landmarks, known to every school boy, abound.

To mention a few, there are Faneuil hall, "The Cradle of Liberty," the Old South Meeting house, the Old State house, the home of Paul Revere, the site of Griffin's wharf, where the Boston tea party was held, and the old North church, where the lanterns were hung out for Paul Revere.

Boston common, with its famous frog pond, remains intact, and the "Sacred Cod" still hangs in the hall of the house of representatives in the State house on Beacon hill. On School street is the site of the first public school in America, established in 1635.

The tourist will also wish to visit Charleston and see Bunker hill monument, dedicated in 1843. At the Charlestown navy yard may be seen the United States frigate Constitution, "Old Ironsides." And, of course, the visitor will wish to see Cambridge across the river, where Harvard university is located.

Lexington and Concord, famed sites of Revolutionary war battles, lie within easy ride of Boston.—Boston Herald.

Wealth of Historical Interest in Old Boston

Boston is one of the oldest cities in the United States and few are possessed of greater historical traditions than this, "The Hub." Founded in 1830 under the lead of Gov. John Winthrop, it is a city in which landmarks, known to every school boy, abound.

To mention a few, there are Faneuil hall, "The Cradle of Liberty," the Old South Meeting house, the Old State house, the home of Paul Revere, the site of Griffin's wharf, where the Boston tea party was held, and the old North church, where the lanterns were hung out for Paul Revere.

Boston common, with its famous frog pond, remains intact, and the "Sacred Cod" still hangs in the hall of the house of representatives in the State house on Beacon hill. On School street is the site of the first public school in America, established in 1635.

The tourist will also wish to visit Charleston and see Bunker hill monument, dedicated in 1843. At the Charlestown navy yard may be seen the United States frigate Constitution, "Old Ironsides." And, of course, the visitor will wish to see Cambridge across the river, where Harvard university is located.

Lexington and Concord, famed sites of Revolutionary war battles, lie within easy ride of Boston.—Boston Herald.

World's Wonders

Sir J. Arthur Thomson, famous naturalist, has suggested the following as the four wonders of the world: The power that keeps stars and planets spinning on their axes, immensity of space, the delicate mechanism essential to insect life, and the orderliness of nature.

FIND INTEREST IN STUDY OF DIALECTS

Important Work Undertaken by Scholars.

The linguistic atlas of the United States and Canada on which the American Council of Learned Societies is at work promises to be a contribution of rare importance to the history of our vernacular. During the last eight months Prof. Hans Kurath and his assistants have recorded 10,000 pages of New England colloquialisms noted in their talks with farmers, fishermen, sailors, merchants, and men in professional life.

Through a study of these dialectal expressions can be traced the influence of various early migrations and of contacts of people of British stock with the French on the northern border and the Dutch on the southwest.

In the region along the boundary between southern New England and New York many old Dutch words survive—"stoop" for "steps," "acry" for "swing." The cheese which is known as "cottage cheese" in eastern New England is called "Dutch cheese" in most of the country between the Connecticut and the Hudson rivers. Indeed, it used to be bought and sold as "Dutch cheese" in New York and Brooklyn groceries.

The early Dutch in Manhattan must have had their own name for it—a name perhaps too difficult for English tongues to master, therefore it came to be known in the newly Anglicized province as "Dutch cheese." In western New York and perhaps elsewhere in the central states it was and probably is called "pot cheese."

Professor Kurath says that "the apple dumpling of Connecticut is known as 'apple dowdy' or 'pandowdy' in northeastern Massachusetts." But in Boston we have both the dumpling and the pandowdy, and they are not quite the same thing. Their ingredients may be, but they are differently put together. An apple dumpling can be either baked or steamed. It comes to the table a golden brown or creamy dome of pastry under which the apple awaits cheerfully its gustatory doom. The pandowdy, on the other hand, is baked in a deep dish and is served up a disintegrated glory of apple, crust, spice, and sweetening. It is without form but has plenty of substance, and during the process of ingestion harmonizes perfectly with the workings of a good man's inner machinery. People from the hinterland and beyond the Hudson tell us that apple-pandowdy, both by name and nature, is utterly unknown to the pagan dwellers in those parts. Its geographical range, therefore, is confined to this favored district. The subspecies, however—the apple dumpling and the steamed pudding with sherry sauce—were probably carried across the plains in covered wagons by the old forty-niners.—Boston Transcript.

Authoritative Art

"Do you enjoy politics?"

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne. "Only I think some of our statesmen would be more entertaining and influential if they would imitate Padreski and learn to play the piano."

PURCHASES ELABORATE
OPTICAL INSTRUMENT

Dr. Earl E. Frisbie, of Butler, Ind., has recently purchased a new and up-to-date optical instrument for examining and testing eyes. This instrument which is known as the Rodenstock, is manufactured and sold by the Rodenstock people of Munich, Germany, who are one of the oldest manufacturers of optical instruments of precision in the world. This instrument is of special value in testing children's eyes, also adults who have trouble in securing good comfortable vision with old methods of examination for better eye sight.

In looking the instrument over, we find it very small, compact and very fast in its findings and no doubt will be a great aid and help to the large army who need better vision through the use of glasses.

Mrs. Karthryn Haller, of South Bend is here the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. K. Shull for the week.

MOTOR RACES PLANNED AT FORT WAYNE SPEEDWAY

Fort Wayne Ind., July 19.
Plans for a 100-mile race, the first of its kind to be staged on the five-eighths mile dirt track of the Fort Wayne speedway have been started by officials of the local organization in cooperation with heads of the contest board of the American Automobile Association. The race will be staged here Sunday July 24th and $1,700 in prize money will be offered the drivers who finish in the first six positions, with one thousand of it going to the winner.

The race will necessitate 160 laps around the 24-foot banks and wide straightways of the local track, which this year is under the supervision of the A. A. A. Because of popular demand it was decided to try the long event in preference to the usual four or five-event card.

By special permission from the A. A. A. sixteen cars will be permitted to start in this race. T. E. Allen, secretary of the American Automobile Association, with offices in Washington, D. C. is lending his entire cooperation toward securing the cream of A. A. A. pilots and cars for this event and this is assurance in itself that there will be plenty of competition in the time trials for the sixteen starting positions in the race.

KENVINATOR ADVANCES
V. C. WOODCOX

V. C. Woodcox, Sales Promotion Manager of Kelvinator Sales Corporation has been promoted to the position of Director of Advertising and Sales Promotion, according to an announcement by J. S. Sayre, Sales Manager of the Company.

"The appointment of Mr. Woodcox as Director of Advertising and Sales Promotion is in recognition of his record of achievement made in several responsible positions since joining the company in 1926," says Mr. Sayre. "Mr. Woodcox has been successively Assistant to the Sales Manager, District Manager in the field, Domestic Sales Manager, and since 1930, Sales Promotion Manager."

"The personnel of both departments has been retained intact, and will continue to operate on a scale of increased advertising as compared to previous years, in view of the fact that Kelvinator's Management firmly believes the present successful record in sales is due to their policy of consistent increases in advertising and sales promotion budgets and schedules."

"Mr. A. M. Taylor, formerly Kelvinator Advertising Director, has been appointed Merchandising Director of the Leonard Division, and will devote his entire time to the advertising and sales promotion of Leonard Electric Refrigerators."

E. W. Crook, a pioneer Hicksville, Ohio, manufacturer, died Sunday at the age of 84 years after a three months' illness due to cancer of the liver. Mr. Crook, located in Hicksville in 1877, became the head of the largest handle factory in the world, the firm of Crook, Son & Co., which has been in operation at Hicksville under various names for more than 50 years, the product therefrom going to all parts of the world.

Former St. Joe
Boy Accidentally Shot to Death

The J. C. Hull family were given a tremendous shock Tuesday afternoon about 4:00 o'clock, when a message arrived at The News office stating that Merritt Hull was dead and for the family to come at once to the home near Hellen, Ohio. The strange and baffling part of the sad news was that Mr. and Mrs. Hull had just returned from the home of their son and wife and he was in good spirits and had been working on his ranch every day. The family hurried to the bereaved Ohio and there learned that he had accidentally shot himself while attempting to clean the 30-30 rifle. Both Mr. and Mrs. Hull had been taking a rest at noon, and Merritt got up and proceeded to clean the gun as evidenced by the rags and ram rod lying on the floor where the gun lay following the discharge. The discharge entered his breast. He survived about ten minutes.

The body was brought to the home of his parents here where it lay in state until the funeral hour, 1:30 Thursday afternoon, with interment being made in the K. of P. cemetery.

"I PAID THAT BILL"

It was a tradesman's error, rendering the same bill twice. However, mistakes will happen and fortunately this customer had paid by check. She was able to produce the cancelled check to back up her assertion that she had paid.

Paying the check way saves time, trouble, misunderstanding. It makes it easier for depositors to see where their money goes and to avoid ill-advised expenditures.

It pays in several ways to settle your obligations the business way—with the checks of this bank.

John Gresham's Girl

By CONCORDIA MERREL

THE STORY

By chance James Lee meets Lucy Gresham, daughter of Sir John Gresham, wealthy ship builder, Lee, unjustly accused of robbing the Gresham firm, was sent to prison. He blames Oliver Ames, Lucy's cousin, and Gresham's manager, and seeks revenge. Lee inherits wealth, and, in compliance with the will, changes his name from Washington. He secures an invitation to the girl's birthday party. Lucy is practically engaged to Ames. She meets Lee, who makes love to her. With Gresham's approval, Lucy and Lee are married. Lee stuns the girl by telling her he does not love her, and hates her "whole breed." She hears the story of his wrongs, and his determination to be avenged. She believes in his innocence. "Unforfeited" rival of Gresham's, show a determination to crush his competitor. Lee tells Lucy he is "unforfeited" and intends to ruin her father. Lucy is hurt by Jocelyn Upton's assertion that Lee loved her before he met Lucy, and the latter believes her. Jocelyn seeks to win Lee, but is repulsed. She places her personal fortune at Gresham's disposal to save the firm. She is frightened by a demented man, "Silly Billy," and is saved by her husband.

CHAPTER VIII—Continued

She raised a hand to her breast as if to still the sudden quick beat of her heart. His somber eyes watched her narrowly.

"Well," she said at last. And she waited, too. Waited for him to tell her that he loved Jocelyn and knew now that she knew it, and had come to see her to say that any further pretense was impossible. Come to arrange with her, perhaps, for that freedom which Jocelyn had insisted that he so much desired.

"Well," she said again, unable to endure the suspense in silence.

"I didn't know that you were going to boast of the . . . success of our marriage . . ." he said harshly. "I thought the idea was to pretend that it was a great success."

"I didn't boast of it," she said unsteadily. "Jocelyn guessed it. Knew it. And Jim, hasn't she good reason for knowing?"

"What reason? That I love her?" The words came oddly. "Do you believe that I love her?"

"She gave me such evidence of it," she answered. "No woman could have said all that she said, if it hadn't been true."

"Then you do believe it?"

"I did believe her this time . . . though mostly I am never quite sure of anything she says . . . it all fitted in with what you had said, yourself." The words came stammering out.

"What had I said?"

"That you had loved and . . . conquered love." He laughed suddenly. "Oh, Jim," she cried out. "It isn't funny . . ."

"No. And I'm not amused," he answered. "Why don't you usually believe what Jocelyn says?" he asked.

"Is she a liar?"

"She is . . . inclined to be hysterical . . ." said Lucy.

"If she told you a lie, she could tell me one. That stands to reason, doesn't it?"

"Yes. What has she told you, Jim?"

He opened his mouth to speak; closed it again and turned away with nothing said. Then:

"She said that you loved Ames."

It was her turn to laugh now.

"I should think I have given proof that I didn't," she said, the bitter note still ringing through her words.

He drew a breath.

"She says that you regret—choosing me," he said.

"I have reason to regret it. But, of all things concerning our marriage, Jim, my choosing you . . . my loving you, is the one thing I don't regret."

"You do love me then? Still?" The words broke from him.

He nodded.

He drew a deep breath and breathed it out again before speaking. Then he said:

"And I don't love her. Never have; never could; never even remotely dreamed of it. Does that mean anything to you, Lucy?"

"Jim, you know it does."

There was a considerable silence.

"I came here really to see whether you were with Ames," that was said confessionally, and he looked rather sheepish as he said it.

She looked at him with incredulous eyes.

"That's why you have kept on asking whether I were alone?" she cried. He nodded.

"When I arrived here this afternoon they told me that you were out, but that you had been in, not long before, with Mr. Ames, of Gresham's. . . I asked if they knew where you were, and they inquired and found that you'd mentioned going to Brady's cottage. . . So I changed it. . . And came after you. . . He told her all this, not quite looking at her."

"I see," she said slowly. "I see. I had lunched with Oliver, and he had brought me back here afterward. And from that you thought. . . " She broke off, and after a pause went on:

"But, Jim, whatever the conditions of our life together may be, I shall not make that sort of fool of your name; our name; you needn't ever fear it. And I'd like you to apologize for suggesting it."

She looked at him squarely. There was a gleam of admiration for the spirit of her in his answering look, and without further comment he made the apology she had demanded.

"Thank you," she said.

Suddenly she sat down, rather as if her knees were shaky. When she spoke again it was of the entirely prosaic question of food. The next few moments were given to arranging that dinner should be sent up to her sitting room.

"And about my room?" he asked.

"Are you staying?" she cried. "Oh, I hadn't thought of that!" She looked up at him, her color heightened. Then, quickly: "My suite is only half a suite really. The rest adjoins. You can arrange for that, if you like. . ."

"Thanks," he said, smiling, rather queerly. "Do you know, Lucy, I never expected to be ordered about; given permission to do this or that, quite as much as I get it from you. Above all . . ." he paused, looking down at her.

"You never expected to obey, did you?" she put in.

He laughed.

"And do you know why you do?" she went on. "Because deep down you know I'm right; deep down, you know this revengefulness of yours is hateful, wrong, a waste of everything that's fine in you; and because, Jim, just because there is so much that's fine in you . . ."

She broke off breathlessly and added:

"Telephone down to the reception clerk about your room."

Over supper he asked her about the papers that were scattered on her writing table, and she told him what they were. He laughed bitterly.

"And though you have read the evidence, you still believe that I am innocent?" he asked.

"More than ever," she assured him. "Jim, the whole case against you rested, really, upon that horrid man, Mackled. His saying that you hadn't mentioned the loss of your wallet. Just that one lie of his turns the whole thing against you, Jim."

"Might not I be the liar?"

She shook her head.

"Jim, why won't you ever tell me that you didn't do it? Not that I need your assurance, but why won't you, Jim?"

"Why won't I?" he asked abruptly. "Do you want to know why? Because faith . . . just pure, unquestioning faith, is so . . . so devilish sweet . . ." he said, his face working oddly.

She was touched through and through. She rose quickly and went to him; put her hands on his shoulders.

"Jim . . . Jim . . . Is it so sweet? Even from me? Does it help? Make things any easier? Ah, Jim, you've got all my faith . . . All my love . . . Can't you let it compensate? Can't you let it heal the wound of those awful years? . . . Ah, Jim, dear, there's nothing I wouldn't do . . . Nothing, if you could only . . . not fight me any more. . . Make me your friend. . ."

He stood, straight and rigid, then suddenly caught her arm with a strength that was painful, and shook her.

"Don't try it on," he said, through his teeth. "Don't; don't hear? Don't try your woman-power on me. . ."

He stood, hands clenched, breathing quickly. If he expected an outburst of indignation from her he was disappointed; for, all she said, very quietly, was:

"All right, Jim, I'll remember."

It was a long time before either of them broke the silence. He moved presently and flung himself moodily into a deep chair. Silence still reigned.

She reached out a hand suddenly and pushed the dark hair from his forehead, looking down into his face. Her voice was low and soft and tender, as she said:

"You think yourself a man aged by suffering. Made . . . oh, so terribly old . . . but you aren't, Jim; you're just a hurt boy, mad with the boy's impulse to hit back. . . Just a hurt boy, Jim, dear."

He started from his chair.

"D—n it! Don't!" he cried fiercely. A silence followed that held the words ringingly.

She looked at him with shining eyes.

"Oh," he cried, "it was madness to come here! I don't know what made me do it!"

"Don't you? I believe you do, Jim. I believe I do, too. And if you don't

"When I Arrived Here This Afternoon They Told Me That You Were Out."

own up to that you know, I shall tell you what I think the reason is . . ."

There was something like sheer, downright panic in his dark eyes at that; and he stretched out a hand defensively as if to ward her off; although she had not moved one step.

"I own up . . . I own up . . ."

he said unsteadily. "For God's sake let me go . . . Let me go . . ."

He turned, searchingly, because the room was not familiar, and made for the door.

She heard him go through her bedroom—rather as if he plunged, blindfolded, through it—to his own. Then the slam of his door. She raised her hand to her forehead, drawing a quivering breath.

Something had happened this evening that changed the whole aspect of life for her. She knew that Jim did not love her; never had loved her; and she knew that he was jealous of Oliver. Beside that wonderful knowledge, her indignation against Jocelyn for the lies she had told, dwindled to a small thing. Amid the glorious crowd of new thoughts and new hopes, that were suddenly in her heart, she could find very little room for anger against anyone.

When she was in bed she lay for a long time staring up into the dark. What had happened to the memories of Jim; of looks and words, that kept racing through her mind. When at last she did sleep it was to dream of his harsh, broken voice, and his dark, tormented eyes. But along toward midnight, her dream changed to more violent things. It seemed to her that the hotel was on fire and that it was Billy who had set it alight. She lay for a moment, rigid, staring, while the lightning flickered its piercing, vivid light through the room, and thunder crashed overhead. Then panic swept her, as a storm always made it, and before she knew it, she was halfway to Lee's door. . . . But evidently he had already thought of her, for before she reached it, she saw him in the doorway, a dressing gown over his pajamas and he was saying:

"It's all right; Lucy, don't be afraid; I'm here if you want me. . ."

If she wanted him! She just stumbled toward him, hands outstretched, and found herself caught in his arms; then picked up and carried in his strong, effortless strength, back to the bed. He put her back between the sheets, pulled the clothes up around her, and then sat beside her, and gathered her close. Words of comfort came rather stammeringly from his lips, and his cheek was close against her shining hair.

"It's silly, I know," she gasped, clinging to him with all her strength. "But, Jim, stay with me till it's over. . . Don't leave me. . ."

"Hold tight . . . hold tight. . . Little kid! I'll stay; of course I will. What makes you so afraid?"

"I don't know. It just . . . catches at me. . ."

She buried her face against his neck, as a blinding flash lit the room, to be followed by a vicious crash that seemed to shake the world.

He crushed her close, his big arms wholly around her; gentle with the wonderful gentleness of great strength; comforting; tender; just what she needed. But she struggled herself free enough to raise a white face to his.

"Something was hit that time, wasn't it, Jim?" she asked in a shaking whisper.

"Sounded like it," he answered. "Don't be frightened. We aren't likely to be struck."

"I'm not afraid of being struck," she answered. "It's just the awful light and the . . . awful noise. The not being able to do anything against it. . . Oh, Jim, I'm so glad you are here! . . . What should I have done without you? All alone. . . With all that awfulness going on. . . Do you think I'm an utter little idiot?"

"No, Lucy. No, just . . . rather a little girl, that's all. . ."

He was whispering, too, and the words were breaking from his lips jerkily.

She sat quite still, clinging close, giving herself to the lovely comfort of his arms, listening to his kind, soothing words, until the storm rolled away into the distance. Then came the snapping of the tension. His arms dropped from around her, and she lay back, rather limply, into her pillows. There was considerable silence. Then:

"Thank you, Jim, dear," she said softly.

He rose from the edge of the bed quickly, at that, and moved over toward his own room.

"You can be the most wonderful dear, when it pleases you to be," she added softly, her eyes following him; but he went straight on, without turning and without a word.

"But, Jim, you laughed at my fright," she went on. "Wasn't that rather a dangerous thing to do?"

"Dangerous?" He flung the word, questioning, over his shoulder.

"Yes; because I might retaliate by laughing at some of your fears. . . I know one or two things you have been afraid of, Jim, dear. . . You have been afraid of Oliver. . ."

He bit his lip, but would not speak. . . "And I know something that you are afraid of now; all the time; at this very minute. . ."

"G—d! So do I!" The words broke from him.

"Jim, you're afraid of me. . . Afraid of loving me. . . Aren't you, Jim?"

"Lucy!" Her name rang through the room on a note of sheer torture, and left the silence ringing with it. He stood for a moment, while some battle raged inside out within him. . . Then flung open the door and left her.

She lay looking at the door he had closed rather sharply behind him, half-smiling as she looked. Then raised a hand and turned out the light.

She scarcely slept at all, after that, until it was almost day. Then she fell into such a profound sleep that she did not wake again till past ten.

When she had dressed she went into the sitting room, and there she found him apparently waiting for her. He was standing by the window, looking out. The table was set, all ready for breakfast.

He turned as she came in, and for a moment they stood looking at each other. . . She didn't know what to say, and wondered what his mood was to be, this morning, after what had happened last night. He said nothing, only stood and looked at her.

Need Not Visit Europe for Literary Research

Two professors of English at Southern Methodist university published a book, "Famous Editions of English Poets," in which 18 volumes of verse are reproduced in full, just as they appeared in the originals, with photographic copies of the old title pages, and research, and was done at Oxford university and the British museum, where original copies of such works as Shakespeare's sonnets, Pope's "Essay on Criticism," Byron's "The Prisoner of Chillon," and Tennyson's poems were available for copying. On returning to this country, the Texas Weekly relates, the scholars were surprised to learn that all the rare volumes they had consulted overseas could have been found in libraries of their own state. This is an amusing incident, but it is more; it indicates

Ancient Wisdom

The shortest and surest way to live with honor in the world, is to be as really what we appear to be; and if we observe we shall find that all humane virtues increase and strengthen themselves by the practice and expectation of them.—Socrates.

Too Big to Ask

Robert insisted that his younger brother be sent on an errand to a neighbor.

"Why don't you want to go?" inquired his mother.

"I want to the grocery for her. She said she was going to make cookies today and Junior will get 'em, if he goes. I'm too big to ask."

SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for July 24

THE DELIVERANCE AT THE RED SEA

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 14:1-31.
GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord is my strength and song, and he is become my salvation.—Exodus 15:2.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Walking Through the Sea.
JUNIOR TOPIC—A Dry Path Through the Sea.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Israel Won Freedom.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How God Helps His People.

I. Israel in Straitened Circumstances (vv. 1-12).

1. Going out of the land of Egypt (13:18). The tenth stroke from the strong hand of the Almighty made Pharaoh willing to let Israel go. The tenth turn of the screw of Omnipotence brought him to time. The Israelites went out from Egypt on their way to the promised land with a high hand. The way of the wilderness was a longer route, but it had many valuable lessons for them. By this way they escaped the experiences of war which would have come to them at the hand of the Philistines, but they learned the crookedness and perverseness of their own hearts (Deut. 8:12).

2. Hommed in (vv. 1-3). At the Lord's direction they turned from their first course and were made to face a great difficulty. The Red sea was before them and mountains on either side. However, they should have been encouraged because the Lord went before them by day in a pillar of cloud to lead the way, and by night in a pillar of fire to give them light. He took not away the pillar of cloud by day, nor the pillar of fire by night (13:21, 22).

3. Pursued by Pharaoh (vv. 4-12). The stricken Egyptians had now recovered from their sorrow, and perceiving the straitened circumstances of the Israelites they interpreted this to mean that Moses was unable to lead them out of their difficulty. Therefore they went in pursuit, hoping yet to prevent their leaving the country.

II. The Miraculous Escape of the Israelites (vv. 13-22).

There seems to have been a twofold object in leading them in to this particular place.

1. To strengthen the faith of the people. To be delivered from such circumstances would impress upon them anew the reality of the love and power of God. The people, as usual, displayed their unbelief, and even censured Moses for leading them out of Egypt. Moses replied to their murmurings by saying, "Fear ye not, stand still and see the salvation of the Lord." Standing still in such a trial is faith taking hold on God's promises. God said, "Wherefore criest thou unto me? Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward." Having had his definite promise, to have prayed longer would have been unbelief. They were to go forward a step at a time without raising any question as to the outcome, for from the source from which came the command, came the power to obey. The presence of the Lord was adapted to their needs as they went forward. When the situation was such that the Lord's leadership was not necessary, the cloud passed to the rear and held the enemy at bay. The presence of God had a double effect—darkness and confusion to the enemy, and light and guidance to his people.

2. To lay a snare for the overthrow of the Egyptians. Those who will not heed the warning judgments of God may be allowed to go to their destruction under the presumption that the Almighty is helping them.

III. The Overthrow of the Egyptians (vv. 23-27).

Having seen the Israelites go across the sea dryshod, Pharaoh and his people madly pursued them. They insensibly thought that they in their unbelief could follow in the wake of God's children. The Lord looked forth from the cloud and wrought confusion among the Egyptians. He not only looked upon them but took off their chariot wheels which caused them to realize that God was fighting against them. He then directed Moses to stretch forth his rod and bring destruction upon the Egyptians.

IV. The Song of Triumph (15:1-21).

Standing on the other shore of the Red sea they could fittingly sing the song of triumph because of their miraculous deliverance and the overwhelming defeat of the Egyptians. They attributed it all to God. In a glad coming day, a similar but much larger company will sing the same song with an important addition, namely, the "Song of the Lamb" (Rev. 15:3).

GEMS OF THOUGHT

The question of duty is one of the most serious. On that pivot swings both usefulness and destiny.

We spend too much time ringing the doorbells of earth, and not enough the doorbell of heaven.—Quoted by Hanna.

The purpose firm is equal to the deed. Who does the best his circumstance allows, does well, acts nobly. Angels could do no more.—Young.

"Company From America"

Appreciated in Orient

Anybody might claim to be widely known and appreciated for whom a native of Shanghai would build an addition to his home, hopeful of a visit some time. That's just the position in which Dr. Samuel J. Brandenburg of Clark university and Mrs. Brandenburg find themselves.

When Dr. George H. Blakeslee reached Shanghai recently on his mission for Uncle Sam, he hunted up Lee Su, who formerly was a student at Clark. The young man showed Doctor Blakeslee a wing he had just added to his already luxurious home and said Doctor and Mrs. Brandenburg had promised to visit him some day, and he had the rooms prepared, ready for their coming. ## Teddy Bear Sanctuary Koalas, known colloquially as "native bears," real live teddy bears in soft, plush-like fur, have lately become the object of special solicitude, both official and private, in Australia. For several generations nobody paid any attention to them, for they were so numerous that it never occurred to Australians that they could ever become scarce. But a highly fatal epidemic got started among them some years ago, killing them by thousands. Shooting koalas is now forbidden. Even more promising is the setting aside of well-wooded sanctuaries, where only these attractive marsupials but also other interesting but threatened native animals and plants have a chance for their lives.

Platinum Mist

Platinum is caused to evaporate like water by a discovery announced from the California Institute of Technology. This precious vapor, probably the world's highest-priced mist, condenses into unobtainably thin films upon a wide variety of materials. It coats them virtually permanently. Smoother than dew it will cover fibers, converting them into pliant, filmy threads that seem made of pure platinum.

FIRST-CHOICE or SECOND-choice

Which tire will you buy at the same low price?

Why do you suppose that Goodyear Tires lead all others in public preference by better than two to one?

Why do you suppose that more people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind—and have for 17 years?

These tires must be FIRST-CHOICE because they're better.

They must outsell all other tires in the world because they outrun them on the road.

On a straight quality basis, then, it certainly looks like common sense to buy FIRST-CHOICE tires.

Which brings up the question, "how about price?"

Most of the best things on the market naturally cost more than the second-runners.

But here's the amazing fact about tires:

You can get the safety, the quality, the extra life and trouble-free mileage of the world's greatest tire at no extra cost.

Think that over when someone tries to high-pressure you into buying an unknown or doubtful bargain.

Just ask him this simple question: "Why should I pay good money for any second-choice tire when FIRST-CHOICE costs no more?"

VILLAGE HAS HAD ITS DAY OF GLORY

Old Tadoussac Now Quiet Summer Resort.

The oldest white settlement in America, and once the center of the American fur trade, the quaint little French Canadian village of Tadoussac, on the lower St. Lawrence river, is today a quiet Canadian summer resort.

Nestling among the foothills of the blue-capped Laurentian mountains at the junction of the St. Lawrence and Saguenay rivers, the village itself is still living in the past—the natural beauty of its surroundings and the quaintness of its people attract-ing each summer a large number of holiday-makers who are seeking to leave behind the rush and bustle of modern life.

Woven around Tadoussac is a long and romantic history. Here Jacques Cartier, the first explorer of New France, landed in the summer of 1535, and there are numerous tales of visits by those fierce sea rovers, the Vikings, at a much earlier date. Tadoussac, with its natural protected harbor, was long used as a whaling station by the Basques and Bretons, who were the first to form a settlement there, and it was in 1599 that the first house in Canada was built. At the opening of the century, Tadoussac became the center of the fur trading industry, which extended as far as Labrador and Hudson Bay.

Species of Hawks That

Are Friends of Farmer

The saying, "the only good hawk is a dead hawk," has been proven false by modern biological studies. Some hawks, of course, prey at times on poultry and valuable game birds. Many, however, live mainly on rodents, insects, and other destructive forms of wild life.

It is not easy to distinguish between the harmful and harmless species of hawks, that in itself being good reason for erring, if at all, on

The first trading post of the Hudson Bay company, that great company of gentlemen adventurers, was erected on the site where the modern Hotel Tadoussac now stands.

In 1603, Champlain landed at Tadoussac and made his disastrous treaty with the Algonquins, thus in-curring the enmity of the warlike Iroquois, and in the same year the oldest church in America, the Tadoussac Indian chapel, was erected. On the site of the first church a tiny chapel still stands and the bell, which three centuries ago called the converted Indians to mass, still rings out from the chapel belfry.

In 1961, the Iroquois sacked the village, leaving standing only the church, which their superstition prompted them to leave unmolested and for a time Tadoussac was a deserted village.

In the meantime, explorers had pressed onward and in the search for new worlds this beauty spot on the lower river was neglected. Great cities sprang up throughout the Dominion and Tadoussac remained a tiny village important today only for its historical interest and its summer resort fame. Once the scene of great historical events, peaceful and warlike, Tadoussac today submits each summer to a peaceful invasion as visitors arrive by steamer and by car to rest and play in this oldest settlement on the continent.

Governor Sterling's Job

Gov. Ross Sterling tells this one with a chuckle:
"I had been visiting the Imperial prison farm, near Houston. They furnished me with a car and an efficient driver to return to Houston."
"If it will not make you too late, I wish you would drive me on to the Bay." (Sterling's summer home), he said.
"Certainly, sir."
"You will have enough time?"
"Oh, yes, sir, I have seven years."

Woman's Chief Charms

Not to Be Purchased

The mouth is a photograph of the disposition. Someone has said that we are not responsible for the disposition we are born with, but we are responsible for the one that we die with. It is the name with the mouth. The sweetness and kissableness and dearness of a baby's mouth are not dependent on the shape or size. Baby's mouth is sweet because his soul is sweet. No brand of lipstick, nor any artist in its use, can camouflage a sour mouth and make even a casual observer believe it is sweet.

Then there is the eye, which the contents of the vanity case cannot change. "The eye is the window of the soul." You can buy something that will lengthen the fringe on the curtains to your soul-windows, you can change the cut of the lambr-quins above, but you can't keep people from looking in sometimes, unless you pull the shades down altogether and put yourself in darkness. No vanity case, not even a whole drug store or beauty shop, can make attractive the windows out of which looks a quarrelsome, envious soul.

Keep sweet within, if you want to get full value from your vanity case.—Nellie B. Russell in the Farm Journal.

LANGUAGE CLEW TO ALL PAST HISTORY

Why Archeological Work Is Important.

To some it may seem foolish for a man to spend weeks and months recording the peculiarities of speech of an aged Indian who recalls a language which will vanish completely with that person's death. That language is completely unknown. The descendants of those who used it are now speaking English or Spanish. To the uninitiated, it is the mere recording of useless gibberish.

Yet the American Council of Learned Societies reports with pride that one research worker has nearly completed records of the Southern Caddoan language, that another is now speaking English or Spanish. To the uninitiated, it is the mere recording of useless gibberish.

Such work is more than a pastime or a hobby. To archeologists and others interested in America's past it is of vital importance. Native languages form one of the most reliable means of tracing movements in prehistoric America. Pottery, weapons, jewelry, basketry, design and architecture all are clues to events in that forgotten past. But language is a thread running through them all. Ancient America, the two continents, had no fewer than 150 languages, each fundamentally different from the others in grammar, vocabulary and phonetics. Most of them had dialects. Some even had separate forms for the use of men and women. How complex this was and how great an aid it can be to the deliver in pre-history may be realized by remembering that Europe and Asia combined have only about 25 language stocks.

In tracing the movements of ancient Americans, scientists can make uncannily accurate guesses from evidence they dig from ruined villages. But there are many open links. Occasionally the student of native languages can close those links. Whether the pottery shards show it or not, if one-time inhabitants of Idaho moved to Pennsylvania, the languages will show it, if the languages can be studied. If the language of the Mound Builders, of Ohio were available for study, for instance, it might reveal similarities to the language of the Mayans and the Aztecs to prove a relationship which many archeologists have suspected but have never been able to prove.

This interest in Indian languages is not new. The Spanish priests gathered Indian words in Mexico as early as 1571. Roger Williams studied Indian languages in New England in the 1630's. John Eliot prepared his famous "Indian Grammar" in 1636. Thomas Jefferson in 1791 made an effort to rescue vanishing Indian tongues and when he sent Lewis and Clark to the Pacific he told them to study Indian languages. But only in recent years have scientists taken up the task in earnest as a phase of archeology.

Racers Paced by Robot

Like the mechanical rabbit that leads the whippets in a dog race, a robot athlete is used to set the pace for the track men at Oxford university, England. The figure of a runner, mounted on a mechanically operated rubber-tired wheel, moves around the outside of the track at different speeds. By keeping abreast of the speeding robot, the variety men learn to judge the pace at which they are running. The innovation is said to be of special value in training distance runners, whose success largely depends upon their ability to pace themselves so that they can reserve sufficient strength to carry them through the final sprint.

Vital Spark Slow

in Leaving Body

Accidents frequently happen in which the victim seems to have been fatally injured, and yet the vital organs have not wholly ceased to function. Respiration may cease and the heart stop functioning, producing a state of physiologic death, during which time the victim may sometimes be revived by the proper administration of artificial respiration.

This may occur in such accidents as drowning, electrocution and asphyxiation, and in some motor car accidents. The unfortunate and apparently dead victims may not actually die for some time following the accident.

Von Hoesslin reported before the Berlin Medical society that the electrocardiograph has demonstrated regular contractions of the heart continuing as long as 80 minutes after physiologic death occurs. The contractions are strongest immediately following the accident, and grow weaker gradually until the heart ceases entirely to function, except for occasional contractions, which occur at irregular intervals. Therefore, it would be the period immediately following the accident that normal life may be restored by artificial respiration.

Dr. Samuel R. Benedict of the Alabama Power company believes that many persons have died following injuries when they might have been resuscitated if artificial respiration had been promptly administered.—Journal of the American Medical Association.

What kind of food builds a 100% BABY?

READ WHAT 50 BABIES TAUGHT TWO SCIENTISTS

OF COURSE, you want your baby to be a rosy, healthy baby... taking his food contentedly... putting on his ounces regularly.

Yet you're hoping even more, perhaps, that he's building now for future health. Building hard bones, good teeth, strong muscles, sound nerves—to make him fit and fine in the years to come.

When mother's milk fails, can any other food build such a baby? Read of a recent scientific test.

World-famous clinic makes feeding test

Recently, two baby specialists made a test with 50 average infants. Into these babies' bottles—month after month—went a food famous for 75 years as a baby builder. Millions of healthy citizens are living testimonials of its benefits. Yet never before had such a thorough, modern test of this food been made.

This food was... Eagle Brand Milk. Throughout the test, it was the only milk these babies received. The usual supplementary foods* were used.

And how those babies were studied! X-ray pictures of bones were taken. Tooth formation was watched. Blood counts were made. Weights and heights were charted. And at last came the report.

By every known test, these babies showed themselves splendidly nourished. This simple diet—Eagle Brand, with the usual supplementary foods*—had proved itself equal to the building of a 100% baby.

If you cannot nurse your baby, try Eagle Brand. Next to mother's milk, it is the easiest form of milk in the world to digest. Mail coupon for new free booklet on all phases of baby care.

*The usual supplementary foods (used with any milk diet) are orange or tomato juice, and cod-liver oil or other source of the anti-rachitic vitamin D.

Points scientists look for in judging a baby

- ★ Well-shaped head; sound teeth in well-formed jaw.
- ★ Strong back.
- ★ Firm flesh.
- ★ Straight legs.

TEN TIMES BIGGEST CIRCUS HERE SOON

Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Offers Stupendous Program of World Novelties and Mammoth Menagerie

GIGANTIC FREE HORSE FAIR

The world's largest circus, traveling on four trains of double-length steel railroad cars, with 1800 people, 50 elephants, 1000 menagerie animals and 700 horses will exhibit in Fort Wayne, Friday, June 22, and throughout this section plans are perfecting for the attendance of every man, woman and child—so it seems—at one of the performances.

Everybody wants to see the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus this year, and it is a foregone conclusion that the world's largest tent, seating 16,000 persons, will be filled to the last chair afternoon and night. Seven rings and stages and the hippodrome track, to say nothing of the vast mass of aerial and wire display rigging, will be filled by the earth's foremost acrobatic talent—eight hundred acknowledged kings and queens of daring, grace, skill and incredible agility. One hundred clowns will project ten times that number of mirth waves. Countless new foreign features and innovations new to America are introduced on the gigantic program of the Greatest Show on Earth this year.

By popular demand, a tribe of monster-mouthed Ubangi Savages from Africa's darkest depths are presented in the main performances.

A herd of the largest and tallest giraffes in captivity; 28 zebras and the same number of camels, two rhinoceroses and the seven herds of elephants will be seen in the huge menagerie tent, where 1000 rare wild animals pace to and fro in ornate dens and cages.

Throughout circus day the three gigantic tented stables of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey organization will be open to the public free of charge. Here lovers of fine horses may view at random hundreds of the world's most beautiful thoroughbreds. Perfect specimens of almost every known strain will be found in the big show's great free horse fair which also includes a congress of tiny Shetland ponies to delight the little folks.

HOME BUREAU

The July meeting of the Concord Township Ladies Home Bureau was held at the home of Mrs. Arline Koch last Friday. The meeting was opened by the singing of "The More We Get Together," and "America," led by Mrs. Harriett Johnson. After a few items of business were taken care of, the secretary's report was read and approved. Thirty-two members responded to roll call with patriotic quotations. Margaret Hamilton-Thomson read "The Flag Goes By" after which a round table discussion was led by Mrs. Borthwick on "What kind of environment in the home make the best men and women?" A clever playlet was staged entitled "The Sewing Circle" by six of the most courageous ladies of the club, but which resulted in a bad case of stage fright, caused by the advent of a mouse. Those who took part in playlet were Mesdames Clara Foltz, Harriett Johnson, Ruth Davis, Myrtle Pugsley, Pauline Simanton, Carrie Morr.

The hostess and her committee then took charge serving home made ice cream and cake, which was most enjoyable. Six children were present, and four guests, Mesdames Cleota Morr, and Bee Woodcox, Mrs. Dr. Price and Mrs. Margaret Thomas. All expressed themselves as having had a very happy afternoon with Mrs. Koch and her committee. The August meeting will be an all day meeting in Auburn at the home of Mrs. John Engle, pot luck dinner at the noon hour, each lady will please bring one dish and sandwiches and her own table service.

The wheat harvest season is now in full swing and threshing crews are evident in all sections of the community. DeKalb county's 1932 crop of "golden grain" is being harvested and much of it is going to market. The yield is better than expected thirty days ago. Some fields are yielding as high as 28 and 30 bushels per acre and most of the grain is grading number 2, which means a very good quality. Some of it is grading number 1, or extra good. In most cases where farmers are not forced to sell on the low market, the grain is being stored and will be ground and fed during the winter.

Miss Opal Bishop is on the sick list.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Jenkins spent the week-end at their cottage at Cold Springs.

SCOVILLE HEADS OZARK BIBLE CONFERENCE

A copy of the Daily Times-Echo of Eureka Springs, Arkansas, arrived at our desk this week from Dr. Charles Reign Scoville, a Newville boy, in which the Ozark Mountain Bible Conference is shown pictorially.

We quote from the paper as follows:

"A great, new religious adventure, which is attracting nationwide interest has been organized this year in the Ozark Mountains and will hold its first session at Inspiration Point, five miles west of Eureka Springs on state highway 62.

"Dr. Charles Reign Scoville, formerly of Chicago, has been chosen director of the Bible conference, and he has sent out a thousand invitations to the very best people in the Nation. Dr. Scoville is very anxious that all the people in this whole region shall visit this Bible Conference and receive the inspiration, urge, and uplift that is sure to come to all.

"Dr. and Mrs. Scoville are just finishing their marvelous stone residence, which they call Castle Home, on Rock Candy Mountain. This is undoubtedly the prettiest spot in all the Ozarks, and they have properly called the scenic landscape, which is visible in every direction from their home, 'The Sublime View.'

"Just below the residence, on the fifty acres of mountain land, they have located a beautiful new Tabernacle built on the order of the Salt Lake City Tabernacle. The acoustics of this Tabernacle are perfect. The oval shaped roof makes it easily possible to hear a pin drop eighty-four feet away from the listener. The platform has been finished this week and everything is ready for the opening day Sunday, July 24, which they designated 'Eureka Day.'

Persons wishing to see this paper may call at News office.

WOULD YOU LIKE TO BE AN OLYMPIC WINNER?

The great athlete who has the skill and endurance to go in to the finals of the Olympic games is almost always a man who has reduced to science the art of eliminating waste motion and useless effort.

That, too, is the secret of thrift. Thrift is simply skill in spending. Build your financial strength as the Olympic winner builds his. Use brains and skill in your spending. Make your dollars go further and a few will do the work of many with the same result.

Exercise your skill in thrift in building up your account in this bank.

GREAT GATHERING OF WORKERS AT AUBURN

Six counties will meet in a regional Council of Children's Division workers at Auburn in the M. E. Church, August 3rd. Miss N. L. Young, State Children's Division Superintendent will lead the discussions. The morning session will be open at 10:00 o'clock (Central Standard Time.) All township children's division superintendents, each church school children's superintendent, and all teachers of children's classes are urged to attend the sessions.

MISS NELLIE C. YOUNG

Sunday School workers and general council officers are also invited. At the noon hour a covered dish luncheon will be enjoyed, each one attending to bring sandwiches, one dish, and complete table service. Hot coffee will be furnished. Keep the date and place in mind and plan to be present.

FORTY ACRES ADDED TO LAKE JAMES STATE PARK

The Conservation Department of the State of Indiana has completed the purchase from Latta F. Hershey of forty acres of land adjoining Pokagon state park on the south side of the main entrance road, known as Road 127. The purchase also included a strip of land along the south side of the road into the park and a 200 foot square parcel at the corner of state road 127 and federal highway 27. It is the intention of the department at some time in the future to widen the road into the park and make plantings along each side and also to provide a safe turn at the corner with road 27. The price paid, it is said, was about $40 an acre.

This new acquisition brings the total acreage of the park above nine hundred. It makes Pokagon one of the largest in point of area of the state parks, in fact the largest when the area of water available to the patrons of the park is included.

PROPERTY REDUCED ABOUT ONE-FOURTH

The valuation of taxable property, including locally assessed real estate and personal property, in DeKalb county this year is $23,206,510, as compared with $30,957,370 a year ago. The reduction of $7,750,860 is approximately 25 per cent and is doubtless the greatest decrease in a single year in the history of the county.

The state will soon report its assessment of railroads and other corporations. The grand total for the year will then be calculated. The total loss in this county is expected to be about $10,000,000, bringing the valuation down to $31,000,000.

From the assessed valuation will be deducted $1,466,280 in mortgage exemptions and $58,740 in soldiers' exemptions.

The July abstract of locally assessed property prepared in the office of County Auditor Frank E. Lyon shows the following valuations by townships:

Butler, $758,880; Concord, $561,780; Fairfield, $1,182,550; Franklin, $1,082,450; Grant, $602,540; Jackson, $1,258,800; Keyser, $821,940; Newville, $413,240; Richland, $762,800; Smithfield, $1,104,800; Spencer, $795,150; Stafford, $464,320; Troy, $461,740; Union, $1,070,700; Wilmington, $1,143,780. The valuations in the towns and cities follow: Auburn, $5,760,640; Butler, $1,055,880; Garrett, $2,642,250; Altona, $67,740; Ashley, $178,160; Corunna, $102,470; St. Joe, $185,470; Waterloo, $928,130.

The mortgage exemptions follow: Butler township, $51,850; Concord, $30,530; Fairfield, $33,400; Franklin, $73,890; Grant, $29,600; Jackson, $86,950; Keyser, $45,310; Newville, $34,640; Richland, $51,310; Smithfield, $67,760; Spencer, $48,330; Stafford, $14,310; Troy, $41,460; Union, $57,500; Wilmington, $77,850; Auburn, $318,040; Butler city, $58,970; Garrett, $254,700; Altona, $5,070; Ashley, $3,060; Corunna, $1,350; St. Joe, $2,840; Waterloo, $27,560.

The assessment of the locally assessed personal property this year is $5,991,580, as compared with $6,652,760 a year ago. Farm real estate is $10,272,190, as compared with $15,537,000. City and town real estate is $6,942,740, as compared with $3,767,610 in 1931.

The abstract this year lists 227,256.53 acres of land. The average assessment per acre, including improvements, is $45.20, as compared with $68.36 under the previous assessment.

INDIANA "BONE DRY" LAW WAS PASSED IN YEAR 1925

Indiana's "bone dry" law was passed by the house February 2, 1925, by a vote of 89 to 1. The senate passed it February 17 by vote of 35 to 4. It was signed by Governor Ed Jackson on March 4.

The "bone dry" law was the climax of a long series of prohibition measures which began in 1895 when the legislature passed what was known as the Nicholson law. This permitted majorities in city wards and townships, by remonstrances, to prevent the issuing of liquor licenses to any specific applicant for a period of two years.

In 1905 the Moore remonstrance law permitted majorities in townships and in city wards to remonstrate against the liquor traffic. In 1907 the blind tiger law was passed. In the special session of the legislature in 1908 the county unit local option law was enacted. In 1911 this law was repealed and in its place city and township option laws were enacted.

Both the county unit and the city and township option laws left the Moore remonstrance law intact. In 1917 the legislature passed the state prohibition law, being the twenty-fifth state in the Union to go dry. This law became operative April 2, 1918. In 1921 and also in 1923 this law was amended.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Thomas, of New Haven were Saturday visitors in the Sam Kees home.

Ninety days at the state farm was given Cecil Shilling Saturday, when he talked back to Judge Erdicott, regarding the uncertainty of paying of support money due his wife, Ila. The judge indicated he would give him ten days' time to pay up. "I'm telling you you'll have to pay," commented the court. "I'm telling you I'll pay if I can," countered Shilling. "All right, I'll just send you down to the farm for ninety days," added the court as he entered his order.

The mid-summer meeting of the Culture Club was entertained last Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. E. R. Kinsey. Seventeen members heard the reading, and accepted the program for the coming year. One new member was received into the club. The offices of secretary and critic being vacant, Mrs. R. H. Ridenbach and Mrs. Roy Bowser were elected to fill the vacancies. After the general business a social time was enjoyed. Ice cream and cake were served.

"Not had breakfast yet?" she asked. "I was waiting for you," he told her.

Her blue eyes looked, now, very straightly up into his. "That was . . . friendly . . . of you," she said. "Do you . . . feel friendly, this morning, Jim?" He did not answer that; he went, instead to the bell and rang for breakfast.

"That means that you don't," she said, with a little sigh.

The girl who brought in the breakfast tray, was the one Lucy had already made friends with, and she was in a talkative mood, if Lee was not. As she arranged the dishes on the table, she asked whether the storm had disturbed their rest.

Lucy glanced quickly at Lee as she said that he colored slightly, before answering, with attempted casualness: "Well, of course, we heard it, all right."

"They are saying this morning, that the big elm, down by Brady's cottage was struck," the girl went on. "Where you said you were going yesterday, ma'am."

"Why, Jim, that must have been that terrific crash . . ." cried Lucy.

When the girl had gone, Lee looked across at Lucy.

"I'll go and have a look at the tree this morning," he said. "I was going over there in any case."

"Were you? What for?"

"To investigate this Billy Brady business you told me of."

"To investigate? Jim, don't you believe I told you the truth about it?"

He looked at her quickly.

"Yes. It's just because it was the truth, that I want to find out what it means."

"Oh, I see, Jim, do you think it has anything to do with your affairs?"

"I don't know. But it's a d—n queer happening, and looks to me as if Billy has gone past the point of harmless lunacy. He's about ready for some sort of restraint, I should imagine."

"May I come with you?"

"All right, if you want to."

When a little later they were ready to start, a thought occurred to her and looking up at him, she spoke it.

"Isn't there a danger of your being recognized?"

"It doesn't matter to me if I am," he answered abruptly; and then, slowly and deliberately: "I've got Gresham's just where I want 'em. Anyone can know who I am at the back of Lincolnton for all I care."

"So even . . . loving me . . . would not make you give up your schemes for revenge?" she asked, eyes and voice challenging him. He returned her look steadily and answered without a falter:

"Even that would not."

The words sounded in her ears like a sudden knell. She felt, then, that she knew the bitterness, depths of hopelessness. She had hoped everything of love; had believed in its power to vanquish all evils. But even that was powerless against him. What, then, was left to her? What more could she do?

"Then shall we go?" she asked aloud, as steadily as she could.

"We won't take the car," he decided, and so they went on the street car, as she had, yesterday.

As soon as they turned into Brady's lane, they saw the riven and twisted shape of the stricken elm. It had been struck as it stood; and though some of its branches upon one side were bare and charred, on the other, half-burnt leaves and twigs still remained.

"We heard that happen," said Lucy, as they stood looking at it. "Shall you ever forget the crash of it?"

"No," he said, shortly. "I don't think I shall."

"But that nice little cottage hadn't anything to do with the bad luck of poor old Mother Brady," she went on. "She would have had the same luck anywhere."

"Would I, too?" he demanded.

"Jim, you don't think the cottage had anything to do with it, do you?"

"No, I don't. I think Macklin had a good deal to do with it, and Oliver Ames; and John Gresham," he answered through grim lips.

"I am quite willing to admit John Gresham's part in it," she said quietly. They went on toward the cottage.

"Can we get into it, Jim?" Lucy asked. "I want to see the room you used to live in. The place you know as home."

"We can find out," he answered, as he pushed open the gate and followed her into the weedy garden.

Lucy tried the door, but it was locked.

"Old Mother Brady used to hang the key up here," said Lee, groping among the ivy above the lintel. "And, by Jove," he exclaimed, "it's here still!" He produced the key, fitted it into the lock, and, rather to his surprise, found that it turned comparatively easily.

"I thought it would be rusted solid," he observed, as he pushed the door open and led the way into the main sitting room. After the fashion of old cottages, there was no hall.

"Where were your rooms?" asked Lucy, looking round her.

"Upstairs," he told her, and went first to show her the way. The rooms were empty, but she made him tell her how the furniture had been placed, so that she could visualize it as it had been.

"Now," she said presently. "Let's go down and see the garden and all around. I want to know just where all that terrible business happened, Jim. Will you show me?"

With his face rather set, he pointed over the wall toward the roots of the giant tree.

"That's where they found the poor devil of a clerk, but the assault most likely happened at the corner of the lane. . . . Then here," he moved further along by the wall, and pointed out some loose bricks. "Here is where my wallet was found stuffed with the stolen notes. Or rather some of them. There was a lot of money that was never found. Probably never will be, now. . . . Believe in me still, Lucy?"

He glanced at her quickly.

"Still," she assured him. "And, Jim, faith can be so . . . so devilish sweet . . . if you'll only let it. . . ."

She added that in a low, soft voice. He swung away from her as if he were going to leave her, but halted abruptly; and:

"Hullo," he said quietly. "Who's that?"

Lucy turned sharply, struck by his tone, to follow the direction of his look. She found herself looking over the low stone wall, toward the stricken elm. And there, beneath its twisted branches kicking aside the debris of twigs and leaves around its roots, was a man.

Instinctively she put out a hand and drew Jim back, but the man, at the same instant, raised his head sharply and looked toward them.

"Macklin," she said, in an almost soundless whisper. Lee nodded.

Macklin had recognized Lucy and was coming toward her, smiling suavely. He stopped on the other side of the wall and greeted her.

"Good morning, Mrs. Lee," he said, in the ingratiating manner that made Lucy judge him insincere. "I just ran out to see the damage. I heard this morning that one of Newchester's landmarks had suffered in the storm last night. It's not much of a tree, now, is it?" He smiled again, and turned toward Lee.

"Introduce me," said Lee in a quiet, rather deadly tone.

Lucy did it; as smoothly as she could.

"My husband. . . . Mr. Macklin is

"I know . . . I know. . . ."

he said in a shaken voice. "It's incredible . . . utterly. . . . And yet it happened. . . . I know of how you feel."

He shook her hand from his arm and suddenly covered his face with his hands. She stood silently by. Some battle of emotions was raging within him. She realized it, and knew that it must rage itself out. After a while, he brought him out of the most, revivified past into a problem of the present.

"Jim," she said quietly. "What was he doing here? He was kicking aside the branches and rubbish around the tree, and looked most awfully startled when he saw us here. Has he got anything hidden there, do you think? Shall we go and look around the tree, and see if we can find out what it was he was looking for. . . ."

Lee stood for a moment, thinking; then looked quickly along the road, hearing the sound of footsteps. A little group of people were straggling lightly toward them.

"No," he said quickly. "If there's anything there he wants, he'll be back for it some time. But not during the day, I fancy. We'll go back to the hotel now and I'll have this place watched. . . . If Macklin comes back it will be tonight, I think. . . ."

They made their way as quickly as possible back to Newchester. The first thing they did there was to find out a private inquiry agent, and arrange for a man to be sent to Brady's cottage to watch for the return of Macklin, or the appearance of Billy Brady. The man was to watch the place and report what he saw: with special reference to anyone who might come there and appear to be searching for anything among the ruins of the shattered tree, or in the garden of the little cottage, or even in the cottage itself.

For, as Lee had observed to Lucy, that lock on the cottage door had certainly turned with surprising ease for a lock that had not been used for more than two years.

"Yes, Macklin, I'm out," said Lee, such menace in the words, that Macklin drew back as if he'd been hit, and Lucy found her heart beating more wildly than ever.

"You are scarcely surprised at my being free again, are you, Macklin?" went on Lee in a strangely quiet and steady voice. "Haven't you been counting the days and weeks and months during these last three years, almost with as much attention as I have counted them myself? Haven't you, Macklin? Haven't you said to yourself each morning: One day nearer to the day when he'll be free again? Haven't you, Macklin? And haven't you wondered, sometimes, just what that day was going to mean to you? Just what it was going to bring to you? Haven't you, Macklin? Haven't you? Haven't you told yourself that there's a day of reckoning coming? And haven't you each day told yourself that the reckoning was one day nearer? Haven't you, Macklin? And haven't you wondered just what that reckoning was to be, when it came? Haven't you, Macklin? Haven't you?"

"That dining question! That cold, furious voice! Those accusing eyes! Macklin suddenly threw up his hands, as if to ward Lee off, although Lee was standing dead still and was separated from him by that stone wall.

"D—n you!" he cried out. . . . "What do you mean by talking to me like that? You dirty thief! I don't know what you mean. . . . Prison's turned your grain; sent you mad. . . ."

His voice rose hysterically high and, broke curiously.

"I might have let prison drive me mad," answered Lee, still without moving. "If I hadn't wanted, about every thing else, to keep my brain clear for what I had to do when I came out. And it's clear enough, Macklin, I can assure you. It's clear enough. He took a sudden step forward, and Lucy saw that his hands were out of his pockets now, and clenched to threatening fists. She said a quick, restraining hand upon his arm, saying faintly: "Jim. . . . don't. . . ."

"Oh, I'm not going to hit him—yet," he said.

Macklin made an effort to recover his composure. He realized that hysteria was a bad mistake.

"Why don't you?" he taunted, his eyes vicious. "Why don't you, as you hit that poor devil of a clerk? Probably because, like all bullies, you're a coward at heart. . . . A rotten, cowardly thief. . . ."

Suddenly he seemed to remember that Lucy was there. He broke off, looked quickly and shifty from one to the other, and then, losing his nerve again, suddenly turned and incontinently fled.

For a time Lee stood without moving; so still that he seemed as if he were a thing carved. Lucy, too, scarcely dared to move, and the beating of her heart sounded so loud to her that she wondered he did not hear it. Only when Macklin's figure had disappeared from their sight did Lee draw a deep breath, square his shoulders, let his hands relax and step back. Then he turned his face and found Lucy looking up at him. Their eyes met in a holding look; then:

"And they believed that cringing thing against me?" he said, the words breaking from him. "They took his evidence against mine, and condemned me on it."

She laid a quick hand on his arm. "I know . . . I know. . . ."

he said in a shaken voice. "It's incredible . . . utterly. . . . And yet it happened. . . . I know of how you feel."

He shook her hand from his arm and suddenly covered his face with his hands. She stood silently by. Some battle of emotions was raging within him. She realized it, and knew that it must rage itself out. After a while, he brought him out of the most, revivified past into a problem of the present.

CHAPTER IX

Lee and Ames

Meantime, Macklin had had time to reflect, and reflection had brought him to a point of cursing himself for his lamentable show of nerves when he found himself confronted by Warrington. He had, of course, known that Warrington would be free by now. He had, indeed, counted the days exactly as Jim had guessed just now. But as time went on and Warrington did nothing, he had begun to feel himself secure.

After a while he began soothing himself with the reflection that the situation, after all, was not different now from what it had been when Warrington was found guilty. It was still Hemp followed civilization westward. Before the Christian era the Indians, Arabians and Persians were cultivating hemp for cloth. They learned to extract from the plant. The Scythians took hemp with them to Europe 3,500 years ago. Hemp's drugs attracted North Africans to the plant and the strength of its fiber—hemp is the strongest of all fibers—brought it into wide use on the sailing vessels of the Mediterranean.

Hemp invaded the Western hemisphere in 1545 when some seeds from Spain reached Chile. North America began to cultivate hemp shortly after the Puritans settled in Massachusetts, but the southern colonies were more successful with their plantations. Laws promoting the hemp industry were passed by the early legislatures of colonial Virginia. Lancaster, Penn., was the center of a large hemp-producing region during the Revolution.

HEMP'S LARGE PART IN HUMAN HISTORY

Has Well-Merited Title of King of Fibers.

Hemp flashed into the pages of history more than 5,000 years ago, and for centuries was the king of fibers. Today, cheaper fibers are competing with hemp in the cordage factory. Hemp sails dropped out of sight with the manufacture of cotton sails and the development of marine engines; hemp rope met a bitter rival that unseated it when mariners discovered that abaca fiber, which is called Manila "hemp," was cheaper, would float, and did not require the application of tar; hemp cotton-bale wrapping bowed to Indian jute and waste cotton; and 20 years ago carpet manufacturers substituted cotton and jute warping for hemp.

Hemp is a cousin of the mulberry tree and a native of Asia. Since 2800 B. C., when a Chinese emperor taught his subjects to cultivate hemp and to make hemp cloth for clothing, hemp has frequently appeared in historic records. The Chinese also ate the seeds and extracted an oil from the plant.

DINKELSBUHL CELEBRATES

A Dinkelsbühl Parade.

(Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)—WNU Service.

DINKELSBUHL, quaint Bavarian town, is donning holiday attire. This summer it will celebrate the three hundredth anniversary of the raising of the siege of King Gustavus Adolphus' Swedish army, during the Thirty Years' war.

Dinkelsbühl is one of Bavaria's medieval gems. Visitors to Bavaria, however, have heeded the call of its larger sister communities—Nuremberg, Rothenburg and Nordlingen—but have passed Dinkelsbühl by. Approaching Dinkelsbühl from across the lovely valley through which the tiny Wörnitz carries its waters to the rushing Danube, the traveler beholds a living fairy-tale town—a vision from the long-gone Middle Ages. Crossing a bridge over the broad, lily-padded moat which was once the city's first line of defense and entering through one of the tower gates, it would occasion little surprise to be challenged brusquely by some ancient sentinel in helmet and coat of mail. However, once within the town, the traveler finds a fascinating picture of serenity.

The urge for speed has not reached Dinkelsbühl; streets still echo to the clatter and clump of horses and oxen. People live placidly, farming the fertile fields of the surrounding valley or conducting the same small enterprises which engaged the attention of generations of their forebears. There is no air of dilapidation about the place. Everything is incredibly old but extremely well preserved. Tradition is hallowed and kept alive here, and changes that would alter the medieval characteristics of the city are not tolerated. The council sees to it that when repairs have to be made on the houses they are carried out in such a manner as to preserve the original form, and no shrieking signs may be displayed.

The main streets of the city radiate toward the cardinal points from a central plaza and are lined with shops and with fine old patrician houses. Time-mellowed buildings, gabled and timbered, rest cozily against each other, while occasionally an architectural giant rears its steep-sided roof above the others, proclaiming to all comers its sturdy old age. Branching off from the main thoroughfare are narrow, winding lanes and side streets, which abound in treasures of medieval artistry. Exquisite examples of frame and stucco building, intricate, hand-forged iron rails and gratings, and beautiful, secluded courts and gardens await the explorer of these enchanting byways.

Old Trades Survive.

Trades that are dying out in other places still exist in Dinkelsbühl. Coopers make barrels by hand in the open air. Coopermiths hammer out pots and kettles, baking tins, and other utensils, for copper in the kitchen is still held in high esteem in the small cities and in country districts, and one of the few surviving powder molders still piles his trade here.

Everywhere, hanging over the doorways, are wonderfully executed wrought-iron signs indicative of the activities carried on within. One might infer that at some time in Dinkelsbühl's history the guild of smiths was a power within the town. At any rate, the signs lend to the streets over which they swing a note of peculiar interest. As in so many South German towns, the houses are for the most part gaily painted. The color combinations are perhaps a bit startling, but they are always effective.

And flowers vie for color supremacy with the brightly tinted houses. No nook or cranny where a plant might grow has been overlooked. Masses of vines cover the garden walls, while nearly every house has its window boxes filled with petunias, geraniums, and other gay blooms. Wells and fountains are ringed about with the same living colors.

Overshadowing the market place, as indeed it overshadows everything else in the city, is the Church of Saint George, built during the latter part of the fifteenth century, when Dinkelsbühl was at the height of its influence. To the 5,000 inhabitants it represents something more than a place of worship. It is an expression of all the elvish pride and aspirations of the sturdy old burghers who directed its erection. And right well they succeeded, for Saint George's is perhaps the finest late Gothic church in southern Germany. The design and execution of the structure were placed in the able hands of the master architect Nikolaus Eseler von Alzey. At the same time that he received this commission the city fathers of nearby Nordlingen engaged him to build their cathedral. But Nordlingers had just reason to complain of their bargain, for they saw little of the great artist. His heart was in the work at Dinkelsbühl, and there he spent most of his time. Saint George's was under construction for nearly half a century, and when the time came to build the great tower planned for it, funds were not available. The master's vision was never completely realized, but the stamp of his greatness abides in the interior with its soaring arched ceiling.

Dinkelsbühl was founded long before the Normans conquered England. More than a thousand years ago a group of Franconian peasant warriors had settled on an elevation in the Wörnitz valley. There, when not engaged in fighting for their existence against raiding Franks or Magyars, they raised grain. About the year 928, at the command of Emperor Heinrich the First, walls were erected around the tiny settlement, and there came into being a fortified city destined to withstand the strifes and intrigues of a millennium and to play an important role in the pages of history which those ten centuries were to unfold.

Origin of City's Name.

There is division of opinion as to the origin of the city's name. Some authorities claim the early Franconian settlement was on a low hill (buhel) belonging to a man named Dinko or Tinko. Thus Dinkelsbühl. Others assert that the chief crop of the locality gave the city its name, and that it means wheat (Dinkel) hill (buhel). However the city came by its name, it prospered. The location was a favored one, easy of defense, and on a much-frequented route from the old Roman empire into Germany. As a well fortified city, Dinkelsbühl offered safety for travelers and became a popular stopping place for those who traversed the Roman Road.

From the beginning it belonged to the Imperial Family, and its government passed by gift or grant or sale to various South German nobles. The famous Frederick Barbarossa intended at one time to give the city as a wedding present to his son Konrad, Duke of Rothenburg, but his plans miscarried, and nearly two centuries later, in 1351, Emperor Karl IV granted it as an hereditary fief to the prince of Oettingen. That same year the citizens bought the nobleman's rights from him in perpetuity and Dinkelsbühl began its career as a "free city."

Many of the emperors of the Holy Roman empire visited Dinkelsbühl and whenever one came there was a ceremonious reception on the market square, at which the council presented to the emperor and his entourage the "customary" gifts. What these amounted to is shown by a record in the municipal archives dealing with a visit of Emperor Maximilian II on June 12, 1570.

The Dinkelsbühlers have been known for centuries as "Die Blauleseder." The blue cookers. A favorite method of serving carp, trout, and certain other fish in Germany is "blue cooked"—that is, boiled in water to which a little vinegar has been added. The process is called "blauleseden," and those who do the "blue boiling" are "Blauleseder."

In the early Middle Ages the authorities of Dinkelsbühl succeeded in catching a robber and murderer who had been carrying on his gruesome occupation for a long time. A special session of the council was called on a hot summer afternoon to decide what punishment to mete out to him. One of the councilmen, who was a trifle deaf, went to sleep during the debate and dreamed that his cook was about to prepare a fine carp for him. When the time came for him to vote on the question before the council, a fellow member poked him in the ribs and asked:

"Hannes, what do you say we shall do with our robber?"

Hannes, rudely awakened from his dream, thought it was his cook asking about the carp.

"Blauleseden!" (Boil him blue), he answered.

GOLDEN TEXT—Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, coming down from the Father of lights.—James 1:17.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Bread from Heaven.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Bread from Heaven.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—God's Daily Gifts.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—God's Daily Gifts.

I. Lusting for the Fleshpots of Egypt (vv. 1-12).

1. Murmuring against Moses and Aaron (vv. 1-3). As they journeyed from Elim into the great wilderness, they became conscious of the scarcity of some of the things they had enjoyed even in Egyptian slavery. Only a few days before they were singing God's praises for their wondrous deliverance at the Red sea (Exod. 15). Many complain bitterly of their experience in the service of God, while at the same time they will endure all sorts of hardships uncomplainingly when pursuing their own selfish interests. Their complaints are not only displayed ingratitude but a deep-seated impiety. They went so far as to express the wish that they had died in Egypt with full stomachs rather than to be walking in the wilderness by faith. The very fact that God had gone to so much trouble to deliver them should have convinced them that he would not forsake them now.

2. God's answer to their murmurings (vv. 4-12).

(a) He promised to rain bread from heaven (vv. 4, 5). His purpose was to teach them that man liveth not by bread alone, but by every word that proceeded out of the mouth of the Lord (Deut. 8:3).

(b) He promised to give them a vision of his glory (vv. 6-10). This served as a warning and encouragement. Moses and Aaron told the children of Israel that the glory of the Lord should be seen in the morning as a reminder that their murmuring was against the Lord and not against themselves.

(c) He promised them flesh and bread (vv. 11, 12). "At even ye shall eat flesh, and in the morning ye shall be filled with bread."

II. Quails and Manna Given (vv. 13-15).

At the appointed time God gave the Israelites the promised food. He first allowed them to feel their need to show them that man's highest need is not physical food, but living faith and fellowship with God. He followed this with a display of his glory, showing them that he was able and willing to supply their need if they would but trust and obey him.

1. In the evening the quails came up (v. 13). Since they desired flesh, he gave them flesh to eat. God frequently caters to the desires of his people, knowing that the best way to teach them is to allow them to be filled with their own folly.

2. In the morning God gave the manna (vv. 14, 15). The Israelites did not know what it was. Moses told them it was the bread which the Lord had given them to eat.

III. The Responsibilities of the Israelites (vv. 16-31).

1. They must gather a certain portion daily (v. 16). They must look to God for their daily bread (Matt. 6:11). 2. Every man must gather for himself (v. 16). Every man must appropriate Christ for himself.

3. They must not gather in excess of one day's supply (v. 18-20). Those whose greed prompted them to do so realized their mistake when it became corrupt and bred worms. Christian grace and Bible truth must not be hoarded up—they are only good when put to use.

4. The manna must be gathered fresh every morning (v. 21). This was to be done early before the sun was up. So must we seek Christ, who is our manna, every day, and the first thing in the day (John 6:57). 5. The manna must be eaten to preserve life. They were in a wilderness, so could live only by the eating of the food which God gave. It is the flesh of the Son of Man and drink his blood, ye have no life in you" (John 6:58).

6. Due consideration should be given to the Sabbath day (vv. 23-31). A double portion was to be gathered the day before, so as to keep inviolate the Sabbath day.

IV. Manna Kept as a Memorial (vv. 32-36).

This was to be kept as a reminder of God's favor in feeding them in the wilderness, even for supplying them with bread for forty years until they reached the promised land.

IMPORTANCE OF BEING IMPORTANTMatter of Moment, as You Look at It.

"The importance of being important is, it seems to me, too disturbingly impressive to the people who would like to be, or, at any rate, seem to be, important," said Mr. Cato Ninetella. "If course, there are people who are undoubtedly important as of a combination of circumstances and their individual talents. That is to say, they are not important merely because they want to be important, but because of the natural order of things. There are other people who are not important, but who seem to be important. I don't know whether this is merely the result of chance or is brought about by good management. Which ever it is, it seems to require no great effort by them, and they undoubtedly fool a great many people. Sometimes I suspect that they even fool themselves. There are still too few of high ambition—or perhaps strong egotism—who notwithstanding their vast expenditure of effort, thought and imagination, are unable to make themselves seem important; and their persistence is a trial to their own nerves, and an irritation or, even worse, a bore to their acquaintances."

"Now, it seems to me that being important must be rather burdensome, and seeming to be important is even more so. On him who is important many things are loaded that, by rights, should be carried by other people, but with his peculiar talents I doubt that he finds oppressive a load that would crush most of the rest of us. Importance is his job in the world, and he is built to endure it. It is not likely that the burden of limitation importance—that is, that carried by the people who seem important—is nearly so heavy; added to the workday pack of him who is important it is probable that he would hardly be noticed; but for the carriers it is sometimes so great that close observation shows that they stagger under it for all their knack of maintaining misleading appearances. There is a hard life, but they like it because so many people think that they are important."

"My sympathy goes out to those who want to seem important, and can't. They strive so hard, and achieve so little. Nor do they ask much, for while they would undoubtedly like to be important, they would be fairly well content if they could just manage to seem important. Life with them must be a succession of disappointments, of trial and error, with error predominating. It seems to me that somebody whose owl flow and command of expression were that they do not know when they are well off, for not being important is one of the easiest—if not the easiest—of life's assignments. He who is important pays for it with hard work, however equal to the task he may be; he who seems to be important pays for it with worry, whatever the degree of tranquility he may present to the world; he who fails in his efforts to seem important must find a bitter tang in all life's savors; on the other hand, he who is willing to leave the job of being important, or seeming important, to others is relieved of many of life's most arduous requirements. His responsibilities are light and his obligations are lighter, for he does not, like the people who are important or who seem important, have to be all things to all men. It is his privilege to get out of the hurly burly for a contemplative period now and then, and thank his lucky stars that he has no aspirations that interfere with a quiet and comfortable life.

"What things do you regard as important nowadays?" I asked Buck. "How would I know?" he responded.

"Why shouldn't you know?"

"Only the historians of century hence will be able to tell what was important nowadays,"—Indianapolis News.

Old Customs Retained

The letters "L. S." on legal documents are the abbreviation of Latin "locus signilli," meaning place for the seal. The Romans used to take off their signet rings and imprint their seals on all documents, and the present legal practice is a survival of that custom.

"Her majesty said she had never seen anything like it before and promptly slapped my face."

"But when other people admired the light she was very fair about it. When someone wanted to introduce me later Queen Victoria waved him aside with the remark: 'This young man had the cheek to have his own way, and his own way happened to be right.'"

Slapped by "Her Majesty"

At the age of eighty-six a scientist and electrician won a fresh reputation by delivering one of the wittiest and most entertaining after-dinner speeches ever heard in the Savoy hotel, London, writes Henri Pickard in the Cincinnati Enquirer. This pioneer osteogenarist was Col. C. E. Crompton, the Faraday medalist of 1922, who was accorded a complimentary dinner by admirers, friends and colleagues.

In a voice that could easily be heard throughout the large hall, Colonel Crompton acknowledged the compliments paid him by telling some amusing stories of his early scientific days.

"I am about the only person who has ever been slapped by such a model of dignity as Queen Victoria," he declared. "That happened in '81 or '82, when I introduced into Windsor castle the type of lighting which

OBITUARY

Clara May Shull, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Shull, and the oldest of a family of four, was born in DeKalb County, Indiana, January 7, 1892.

At the age of ten she moved to Allen County, Indiana, returning again to DeKalb County at the age of fifteen.

At the age of eighteen she gave her heart to the Master and united with the Church of Christ at Coburn's Corners.

She attended the grade schools of Allen County and spent one year of her high school career at St. Joe, Indiana, and graduated from the Spencerville high school in 1910.

She received her college training at Angola, Indiana and taught two terms of school, the first being at Edgerton, Indiana and the following year at the home school, Coburn's Corners.

April 6, 1913 she was united in marriage to Guy Platter. This union was blessed with three children, Coral, Luella Beth and Bonnie Jean.

After her marriage she lived one year near St. Joe, on the Leighty farm, one year with her parents at Coburn's Corners, one year on the Hamilton farm and in 1916 moved to the farm where she resided at the time of her death.

She was very active in church, Sunday School and social work, being teacher of the Busy Bee class of the Newville U. B. Sunday School for several years. She was also vice president of the Ladies Aid Society, treasurer of the Rural Chautauqua and was a member of the Newville Township Home Bureau.

After an illness of four months, she departed this life June 24, 1932, aged 40 years, 5 months and 17 days, being preceded in death by two sisters and one brother. Surviving are the father, mother, husband and three children.

Obedying the Teacher

On the first day of school the little boys took their seats and waited until the teacher came down among them to get their names. The first one to whom she came replied that his name was St.

"No," the teacher corrected, "you mustn't say St. Say Silas."

Next she came to one who said his name was Tom.

"No," said the teacher impressively, "It's Thomas."

"And now, little boy," she inquired of a lad in the end row, "what's your name?"

"Jackass," responded the bright lad.

SCHOOLS OPEN TUES- DAY, SEPTEMBER 6

Plans are now completed for the teachers institute at Auburn, on August 30, 31 and September 1, with the following speakers:

L. A. Pittenger, of Muncie, president of Ball Teachers' College.

Dr. W. P. Dearing, of Oakland City, Ind., president of Oakland City College.

John E. Aubrey, of Tenafly, N. J., lecturer.

C. L. Murray, of Indianapolis, state school inspector.

On the day following the institute, Friday, September 2, the pupils of the district schools are to call at the school houses to get their book lists from their teachers. The formal opening of schools takes place Tuesday, September 6.

THIRD CHEESETOWN SCHOOL REUNION

The third Cheesetown School Reunion, held at the Cheesetown school house, Sunday, July 31, was well attended.

Old school mates thoroughly enjoyed the basket dinner, visiting program, and ice cream which followed.

Besides group singing led by Roscoe Coburn, the program consisted of an interesting early history of the school by Laney Gee, two character readings by Mrs. Lee O. Tustison, a splendid educational talk by Mrs. Eva Sheffer, a solo by Roscoe Coburn, and the reading of letter from J. E. Dermott, of Coldwater, Michigan.

Next year's officers will be president, Abner Tronstel; vice president, Mildred Curie; secretary-treasurer, Pluma Hamilton.

Some from away who attended the reunion were Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Benner and son Verle of Mt. Clemens, Mich., Leslie Gee of Kendallville, Lee Wilmot of Avilla, Warren and Roscoe Coburn and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Monroe of Ft. Wayne, Mrs. Lee O. Tustison of DeKalb and Merritt Maxwell and family of Auburn.

School supplies of every kind will be found at News office.

Good crowds, good music and a good time was had by everyone last Saturday night at the band concert, and this week will again show an increased interest in the concerts. Plan to be here in good time and enjoy the evening.

The April term of the DeKalb circuit court was recessed Saturday by Judge Endicott and no sessions will be held until the opening of the September term on September 6. During the last month, the court closed ten estates and also approved the current reports in two estates and four guardianships.

The Milo J. Thomas estate of Corunna was settled insolvent. After meeting expenses of administration, amounting to $661.39, and paying the widow, Vesta M. Thomas, $131 as her share of the sale of some real estate at Kendallville, the amount of $2,608.39 remained for distribution among the general creditors. The general claims totalled $33,668.60, including $30,000.00 allowed to the Auburn State Bank as receiver of the Thomas Exchange Bank at Corunna. The distribution by the administrator amounted to about 7 1/2 per cent.

Two Men Accidentally Killed

Sudden Deaths Shock Our Community -- Happened only a few days apart--Both die in Ohio

Merritt A. Hull

Merritt Arch Hull, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Hull, of St. Joe, was born at Auburn Junction, February 6, 1886, and departed this life at his home near Helena, Ohio, July 19, 1932, of accidental gun shot, age 46 years, 5 months and 13 days.

His boyhood days were spent in St. Joe, passing through the local school and became a member of the M. P. Church, while quite young. When he grew to young manhood he followed the barber trade and held positions in many of the best shops in Fort Wayne, Chicago and Detroit.

When the call for volunteers in the World War came, he enlisted at Fort Wayne on February 12, 1918, and when ready to sail for France, he was assigned to Company F, 5th Engineer Division, and in February 19, 1919 he was returned to the United States. For three months he was confined to Washington D. C. Hospital and returned to his home July 14, 1919, at St. Joe.

He again followed his profession for a while and then took work with the Ohio Power Co., as ground man. In November, 1926, he was married to Margaret E. Steinman of Forrest, Ohio. After their marriage, they drove to Florida and spent the winter. On their return they moved to farm home where they launched into the poultry business and were very successful.

Merritt was a member of the Knight Templar of Kendallville, and the Alzafar Lodge as a Shriner at San Antonio, Texas, and was made a 32nd degree Mason at Bay City, Michigan.

Before the body was returned to St. Joe for burial, an evening service was held at the country home conducted by Rev. D. D. Carl, U. B. Pastor of the community.

He leaves the widow, Margaret E. Hull, father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hull, one sister, Mrs. Lora E. Leighty, St. Joe, and many other relatives and friends who mourn his sudden departure.

Funeral services were held from the home of his parents in St. Joe, Thursday July 21, with burial on the family lot in the K. of P. cemetery. Rev. V. O. Harrold, local pastor, officiating. E. R. Kinsey assisted the Ohio undertakers, Sage & Son of Bradner, Ohio, with the burial.

BABY DIES WITH MENINGITIS

Barbara Juanita, the 8 months and 23 days old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Delta Keester, died Monday afternoon of spinal meningitis after an illness of some weeks, but developing serious on last Wednesday. The funeral was held on Wednesday morning, privately, with interment in Woodlawn cemetery at Auburn. Rev. Jos. Ferguson, of Auburn officiating.

Russel A. Wade

Russel Alger Wade met a tragic death last Friday afternoon at about 1:30 o'clock while working on a high tension electric power line at Gambier, Ohio. Although desperate attempts were made to revive him his comrades worked in vain.

Russel was born on April 20, 1904 at St. Joe and having been reared here he attended the public schools, graduating from the St. Joe High School in 1923. At the age of twelve he entered the Evangelical Lutheran Church and participated actively with the Sunday School orchestra and for several seasons played with the town band.

On August 15, 1923 he was united in marriage to Helen Lake. To this young couple were born three children, Bernadine, Ima Lee and Carroll.

In the employ of the Ohio Power Company of Canton, Ohio for eight years it was necessary for him and his family to move from city to city, remaining in Zanesville the longest which was a period of two years. Until January 26 of this year Russel was under the superintendency of W. S. Smith when he was transferred to superintendent Miller at Logan.

In the course of his duties as a lineman he attempted to remove the limb of a tree that had become lodged on the line. It is supposed in the endeavor to dislodge the branch by shaking with his hand the twenty-three hundred volt cable his spur became loose and sank into a telephone ground cable making a circuit causing almost instantaneous death. The desperate trail of comrades to resuscitate him was an evident manifestation of their good will toward their lost co-worker.

Besides his wife and children, he is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Wade, two brothers, Albert and George and a grandfather, Martin Engle, four uncles, five aunts, five nieces and nephews. There are also many friends left to mourn his departure.

The funeral services were held from the Lutheran Church, Monday afternoon, in charge of E. R. Kinsey. Rev. A. H. Fabianke was assisted by Rev. O. V. Harrold of the M. P. Church. Burial took place in the K. of P. cemetery.

The pall bearers and flower girls were selected from the graduating class of 1932.

Thirty-seven men of the Ohio Power force were in attendance at the funeral besides a number of their wives.

The church was filled to capacity, due to the large number of relatives and visiting friends.

Have your glasses fitted by Benj. F. Grist, Eyesight Specialist, Office in American Bldg., Hicksville, Ohio. 28tf.

The Christian Church will entertain the Wittenberg Brotherhood on Wednesday evening, August 10th.

Willard Maxwell and lady friend of Covington, Ky., are here as guests of his mother, Mrs. Cora Maxwell, for the week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Leighty of Washington, D. C., are expected to arrive at the Leighty Orchards today. They drove through from the Capitol.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Johnson and daughter, Hilda, of Elkhart, spent Sunday night at the home of Charles Morr and family, and Miss Dorothy O'Brien of Portland was a Sunday evening guest of Miss Cleota Morr.

Persons having glass cans to spare this season, may do well to loan them to the Boy Scouts here, as they are now in need of same. A record will be kept and same will be returned to owners when emptied. Notify Joe Woodcox or Mark Williams.

In conversation with W. B. Lucas at Spencerville last week, he recalled the panic of 1873 and said he sold eggs for 10 cents per dozen, hogs for 2 cents per pound, wheat 60 cents per bushel, oats at 10 cents per bushel and butter for 5 cents per pound.

The union Lutheran Sunday School had 140 in attendance and $5.74 collection.

At the Jersey cattle show at Butler last week, George Hart won a number of good places. Twenty-four classes were displayed.

If it is O. K. for Uncle Sam to sell printing, why not extend a good thing and insist that he add to his line and thus serve a much larger number of post office patrons? Why not add a grocer's apron to the printer's apron? Uncle Sam now wears? Why not sell breakfast foods, evaporated milk, butter, shoes, drugs, dry goods, clothing, etc., over the post office counter?

The DeKalb county board of review reconvened Tuesday upon instructions from the state board of tax commissioners to consider a suggested increase of 15 per cent in the valuation for taxation of the farm lands of the county. H. Lyle Shank, of Angola, a special representative of the state board, conferred with the board of review with reference to the problem. The board did not take immediate action, but the indications were that it would refuse to follow the state commission's suggestion. In that event, the state board will outbless order a horizontal raise on the farm lands and it is probable that the farm bureau will attack the order in court, seeking an injunction to prevent the application of the increase.

COLUMN OF COMMENT ON THE SPECIAL SESSION

Reprimand

The Democratic House of Representatives underwent a severe reprimand by Walter Meyers, Democrat, speaker, upon passage of the bill authorizing request of loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

"You have just taken the first step toward state socialism and communism," the speaker said. In extending his remarks the speaker said more legislation of this type would be necessary unless the House realized its responsibility and "buckled down" to pass some measures which would insure relief from the heavy tax burden.

Newspapermen and capitol observers contrasted the action of the Democratic House with that of the Republican Senate in commenting on Speaker Meyers' remarks. While the House has passed few measures leading to definite tax relief the Senate has passed and sent to the House a dozen bills which, if passed by the House, will be of aid to every taxpayer in the state of Indiana.

Tribute To Leadership

When a Republican sings the praises of Indiana's able senior U. S. Senator James E. Watson, that is not news. But when a Democrat extols the virtues of the Senator—and especially if that Democrat is floor leader in the lower house of the Legislature, that may be regarded as news.

When the home loan bank bill was up for passage in the House, a Republican Representative, Grimm, of Auburn, praised the efforts of President Hoover in initiating the federal legislation on home loan banks.

Whereupon Delph McKesson, Plymouth, Democratic floor leader, rose to reply, "Mr. Speaker, I wish to take issue with the gentleman from DeKalb. If it (the home loan bill passed by Congress) is to the credit of anyone, it is a credit to United States Senator James E. Watson, who is responsible for the passage of the home loan bill."

Grave Diggers

While the Democratic majority was in a snarl over some of its own measures, one of the majority members, Representative Cantley, of Cass county, saw the folly of internal party strife.

"Follow members of the House, we are digging our own political graves; there on that side of the House sit 26 of the happiest men you can find. While we are wrangling over details and incidentals and face a breakdown in a constructive program the Republican minority is sitting tight and will watch our downfall. We must get together and do some real work here."

The National Enquirer, prohibition weekly, has announced it will support President Hoover for reelection. The Enquirer, founded by J. Frank Hanley, former governor of Indiana, was published in Indianapolis until ten months ago, when it was moved to New York. The current issue marks its return to Indianapolis, Oliver W. Stewart and Norma C. Brown are editors.

Arthur Nelson, 55, brother of Frank and Stanley Nelson, of Auburn, died of injuries received a short distance out of Chicago in an auto accident at 10:30 Saturday night. Mr. Nelson had gone to Chicago to get his son Kenneth, a senior at Rush Medical College, and were enroute home, when a car coming out on a side road struck the Nelson car. Both were injured, but the father died at 2:30 in a Chicago hospital. The Auburn brothers left early Monday morning for Chicago. Another brother, Ray, resides in New York.

"Hot dogs for two..."

Certainly they're worth the price... .... but where do you get more for your money than in buying Electric Service?

A DELICIOUS roadside refreshment—you never think of the price. Quite right. But do you feel the same way about electricity? Perhaps it has never occurred to you to compare the two. Yet if you will consider how much electricity you can buy for the price of a "hot dog," then certainly you will realize that your electric service is very cheap.

CHAPTER IX—Continued

"Order my car round quick. I'm going to confront him," he said.

That was how it happened that when Jim and Lucy returned to the Royal hotel after lunch, they were told that Mr. Oliver Ames was waiting for them in their suite. They looked at the news without sign of being moved by it, but as they were going up in the lift, Lucy caught Lee's arm and whispered:

"You needn't see him."

"And by avoiding him let it seem that I am afraid of him?"

"Then you are going to see him?"

"Of course."

She drew a breath.

"I'm glad," she said; "it will be almost a relief to get it over."

As they went along the corridor to their rooms, she asked:

"What has made him come here, do you think?"

"I think very likely Macklin has told him who your husband is."

"Would he, though? Surely he'd be afraid to do that?"

"There's something in getting in with your own story before the other fellow gets in with his," he answered.

They stopped outside the door of their sitting room and for an instant looked at each other.

On an impulse, she put her hand quickly into his and gave it a tight little squeeze.

"I'm with you, Jim, whatever he has come for," she whispered.

His hand responded to hers for the flashing of the moment, then rather roughly shook it off and opened the door.

Ames was standing by the window. He swung round on hearing the opening of the door, and stood for a moment quite still, looking at Lee, eagerly, searchingly. Then:

"He was wrong," he broke out. "Thank God!" He came toward them a hand outstretched.

But Lee did not move to meet him; neither did Lucy. They stood still by the door. Then Lee turned and shut the door behind them; turned back and faced Ames squarely.

"Was he wrong?" he said, with an emphasis that suddenly stopped Ames' advance, and held him staring. "Look again."

In silence the two men faced each other, still, as if some strange power held them rooted. Then:

"No, by heavens! He was right," cried Ames. "Warrington! It is Warrington!"

"Yes," said Lee, unmoved. "It is Warrington." Ames fell back a step with an expression of very real horror in his eyes.

"Warrington!" he said again, as if he could scarcely believe it, and was expecting every minute to wake out of a dream, and find that it had not been real, after all. He even passed a hand over his eyes as if to brush the vision away. But it remained. He turned to Lucy.

"This is the man you have married!"

Lucy found her throat quaking and her lips trembling, as she answered with a nod:

"Yes, Oliver; this is the man I have married."

"And you know who he is? Do you know that he is a convicted thief?"

"Yes."

"That he has been in prison for a most despicable crime? That he has done time?"

"Three years' penal," she added, faltering slightly. "Yes, Oliver, I know all that. But I know something besides; and it is this: that my husband was not guilty of the crime he was imprisoned for."

"But, Lucy, the evidence against him was overwhelming."

"I have gone into the evidence, Oliver, and it does not seem so to me," she answered.

"Good heavens!" cried Ames almost beside himself. "Lucy, my dear, can't you see the truth? Can't you see that I and your father would never have allowed this to go so far if there had been the slightest doubt that he was guilty?"

"What did daddy do?" she retorted. "I don't mean that he was wilfully careless, but, Oliver, what exactly did he do?"

Lee's deep voice suddenly broke through.

"He went yachting. . . . That's what your father did, Lucy."

"Exactly," said Lucy, tears in her voice and in her eyes. "He went yachting. And you, Oliver; what did you do? You judged by the standards of reason. . . . And according to logic you judged fairly; impartially; trying to do your duty; trying to do the absolutely just thing. I am not suggesting for one single second that you did anything but what, to you, seemed perfectly square. But I maintain that you were mistaken. And that you opened the way for a terrible wrong to be done." She broke off, drawing a quick breath.

"Lucy, you don't know what you are saying!" cried Ames. "I tell you the evidence was overwhelming. . . . His defense went down at every point."

It was his bare word against. . . . Oh, a mass of damning stuff. . . . "No; against Macklin's bare word," she interrupted. "That is quite another thing. Macklin lied, Oliver."

"You are prejudiced against Macklin," he retorted. "God! What a tragedy!" he exclaimed after a moment.

"Lucy, let me speak to . . . your husband alone. . . . There is a lot I want to say to him. . . . I should not like to say before you. . . ."

Lucy looked at Lee, her eyes questioning him.

"Shall I go, Jim?" she asked after a moment.

"Yes," he said. "Let me hear what Mr. Ames has to say. And then perhaps Mr. Ames may be interested to hear what I have to say."

Lucy hesitated, as if she did not like the idea of leaving the two men alone. But Lee gave no sign of changing his mind about her going, so rather reluctantly she turned and went into her bedroom.

Ames swung round and faced Lee, all that he was feeling blazing in his eyes.

"To think of her being stolen from me by you of all men!" he cried out on a curious, low note of suffering. "You! A convicted thief!"

Lee looked at him with cold eyes.

"It is the thief's nature to steal," he said, immovably.

"What in Heaven's name made you do it?"

"Made me take her from you, do you mean?"

"Yes. What fiendish plan was there in this marriage of yours?"

"I knew that her father idolized her. I knew you loved her," said Lee slowly, letting the words fall very clearly. "You two men between you were the means of my disgrace. One does not go to prison for three whole years, Ames, and come out with one's heart overflowing with brotherly love for those who have sent one there."

"We did not send you there!" answered Ames hotly. "It was your own conduct that sent you there. We could only see that justice was done."

"I implored you to believe me when I swore that I was innocent, Ames. I implored, desperately implored, John Gresham to see me before it was too late to do anything for me. And you did you do? How did you listen to the prayer of a desperate man? You resolutely determined to disbelieve me. And old Gresham went yachting. . . . A man's future hung upon you two. And you refused to heed."

He stopped speaking abruptly and caught a breath.

"Why should I believe you, when it was so obvious that you were lying?" retorted Ames. "Why should I believe you, when judge and jury agreed that you were lying?"

"Your support, and the support of Sir John, might have made all the difference to me. If you had not been so prejudiced against me, you might have cleared your mind of the obvious features of the case, and looked for the subtler ones. Your evidence at my trial might have been of a different complexion."

"I see. So it was to revenge yourself upon us, upon Sir John and myself, that you have taken that girl away from us? To make our love for her a thing of torture to us? Skies above! What devil could have possessed you to work out your revenge upon her?"

"The devil of injustice," answered Lee, his voice very low, and shaken with the effort he was making to keep himself in control. "The devil of loneliness. The devil of prison. Of knowing that life is going by, outside those walls that keep you from sharing it. The devil of . . . three years' . . . hard. . . ."

"If I were caught out in a dirty crime like yours was, I think I should take what came to me as my due, and not work off my spite on an innocent girl, who knew absolutely nothing about the affair. . . ."

"G-d, I can't think. . . . How am I to tell Sir John?"

"Allow me to believe you of that painful duty," said Lee. "Allow me to tell Sir John."

But Ames scarcely heard. He was trying to think clearly; trying to get the appalling truth sorted out in his mind, and to realize its full significance and horror.

"Man alive, what exquisite refinement of cruelty made you think of her?" he asked again. "Did you in some rotten way of your own, care for her? Love her?"

Lee laughed suddenly; a short, unamused sound. "One does not come from prison a sentimentalist, Ames. My thoughts were tuned to hate rather than to love. . . ."

"So, cold-bloodedly, you set yourself to make her love you. Cold-bloodedly, you took her from me. . . ."

He broke off suddenly as a new thought struck him. "Where did the money come from, Warrington? Where did the money come from to enable you to cut the figure you have, since you came out of prison? The money that a great deal of the money that you stole from that poor devil of a clerk was never found. . . . Did you know where to put your hands on it when you were let out?"

Lee's hands closed to fists.

"I'm getting rather tired of this, Ames," he said, a quiet threat in the words. "There's a limit to my powers of endurance and you are getting perilously near to it. You had better go. I think. . . . And let me say that you can do exactly as you like, and in any way you like, about what you have learned today. . . . You cannot hurt me; nor alter my purpose."

"You don't need to give me that permission, Warrington," answered Ames, in much the same way. "Do you think I'll rest until I have found some way out of this appalling tragedy for that girl you have treated so abominably? If you do, you very much underestimate my love for her. . . . Do you understand? I love her as a man can only love once. . . . And I'll stop at nothing. . . . Give me your life for her if the expression in Lee's face, and the menace of those fists of his, that seemed suddenly to be ready to carry out the threat they suggested.

"Keep away from her. . . . do you hear?" Lee was saying in a voice of sheer, concentrated fury. "Keep away from her and keep your love from her, too. Keep it right out of her life."

Roll of Saints Keeping Watch Over "Poor Jack"

Saluting the quarterdeck, which consists of touching the cap as the officer or man steps on deck from the gangway or from below, is but a continuation of the act of homage of the medieval seaman to the Virgin and the saints. Their images were enshrined in the stern or poop, and toward them salutations were directed. To this day mariners trust to their aid in times of peril and to them make their vows and votive offerings. The Virgin is the patron of innumerable seaside shrines and temples, of which Notre Dame de la Garde at Marseilles and Notre Dame des Neiges at Le Havre come readily to mind.

St. Anthony, who preached to fishes and who specially guarded sailors when ashore; St. Christopher, who once rowed in a boat with Christ, and St. Nicholas, whose favors and intercessions for seamen were as frequent and efficacious in the Aegean as in the Baltic, were pre-eminently the chief maritime saints, but St. Peter, St. Clement, St. James, St. Mark and many others, as having shown special favors at sea, are invoked by sailors when in stress and danger.

The Saints Calendar of the early navigators was a long one, replacing by easy transitions the pagan gods of antiquity—Neptune, Amphitrite, Venus, Astarte, Odin, Freya and many lesser tutelary and household deities.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Eskimo's Impediments

A great deal of genuine interest was shown in an exhibition of Eskimo life, shown at Montreal. There were specimens of tools and weapons, ancient and modern, made use of in the Arctic regions. There were snow shovels made of wood with small slits for vision; curious drills which the Eskimo holds in his teeth while he presses the point into the ground or the ice; a leather belt with an ivory buckle; fine combs delicately carved out of ivory; ivory needles and toys; carved miniature of bears, walrus and seals; ivory rattles and draughts.

"Ain't" Mere Colloquialism

The word "ain't" has no standing, except as the colloquialism, though on account of common usage and convenience many persons would like to include it. Crowder's Dictionary of English Grammar calls it a vulgarism that is incorrect in any context, and not a true contraction of "am not, are not" or "is not." There is a temptation to use "ain't" in the interrogative first person singular because there is no proper contraction for "Am I not?" but "ain't" cannot be used properly, even in this case.

Town Clings to Old Method

In spite of the encroachment of the telephone and the telegraph, the inhabitants of Kungsberget, Sweden, have decided to retain the medieval "bid-stick" communication service.

The "bid-stick," a stick with a writ fastened around its center, is circulated among the inhabitants of the village, and every one who receives it has to carry it to his nearest neighbor after reading the message.

The Kungsberget villagers declare that its use is much more dependable than postcards or telephone calls. Since there is a fine of $21.75 for anyone who keeps the "bid-stick" too long or who neglects to forward it, the "stick" triumphs over the modern means of communication.—Baltimore Sun.

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS—DU-TIES TO GOD

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:1-11.
GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, with all thy soul and with all thy strength.—Deuteronomy 6:5.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Giving of the Ten Commandments.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Giving of the Ten Commandments.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Loving and Worshipping God.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Giving God First Place.

The Ten Commandments furnish us with the greatest moral code the world has ever seen. The law was not given to save sinners, nor to rule sinners, but to reveal sin (Rom. 3:19, 20), and to lead to Christ (Gal. 3:24).

1. The Preface to the Decalogue (vv. 1, 2).

The Ten Commandments are based upon the truth set forth in the preface. Two great thoughts underlie this preface: God is, and what he did. What he is, is embodied in the name Jehovah-Elohim. The name Jehovah sets forth three great truths.

1. His all-sufficiency. All that he is and does centers in himself.

2. His sovereignty. There is no being equal to him, nor above him. He is outside of and above every being in the universe. He is immanent and transcendent.

3. His unchangeableness. The "I am that I am" (Exod. 3:14) may be expanded into "I am what I was," "I will be what I am," "Jesus Christ the same yesterday and today and forever" (Heb. 13:8). The name Elohim signifies the strong and mighty One.

11. The First Commandment (v. 3). "Thou shalt have no other gods before me" means literally, "Thou shalt have no other gods before my face." This commandment requires single-hearted worship and adoration. Man was created a worshipping being. From the very deepest recesses of his being he demands a god. Furthermore, every man has his god. It is either the true God or a false god. The center around which our activities revolve is our God. This commandment may be broken:

1. By living for self. If one's activities gather around himself he worships himself, and is an idolater.

2. By making pleasure the goal of our lives, and spending our time and money for our sensual enjoyment.

3. By being covetous (Col. 3:5). Every man who is greedy for gold breaks this commandment.

111. The Second Commandment (vv. 4-6).

The first commandment is directed against false gods. The second is directed against the worship of the true God with false forms. This commandment may be broken:

1. By resorting to the use of crosses and images in our worship.

2. By putting the pope in the place of Christ, and following after priestcraft.

It should be observed that this commandment is accompanied with a warning and a promise. The warning is that idolatry will be visited upon the children even to the third and fourth generation. The most awful thing a man can do is to pass on a wrong conception of God to his children. The promise is that he will show mercy to thousands. This means that the workings of the same divine law will pass on God's mercy to thousands of generations.

IV. The Third Commandment (v. 7). The Hebrew word translated "vain" in this prohibition against taking the name of God in vain, means lying, deceptive, unreal. Therefore, to take the name of God in vain means to use the name of God in a lying and hypocritical way. This third commandment may be broken:

1. By profanity. 2. By perjury. 3. By levity and frivolity. 4. By hypocrisy, which is professing to live for God when living for self.

V. The Fourth Commandment (vv. 8-11).

The essential principle embodied in this commandment is work and rest. It enjoins work on six days and forbids work on the seventh. The commandment to work six days in just as binding as the rest on the seventh. The human being needs physical rest and spiritual refreshment. This commandment may be broken:

1. By living in idleness. 2. By working on the day set apart for the worship of God. 3. By making it a day of feasting. 4. By devoting it to pleasures and games.

Find Appropriate Stone for Bjornson Memorial

After searching for two years among the forests and rock-strewn valleys of southern Norway, Herr Sjur Fedje, an octogenarian member of the Storting (parliament), has found a natural megalith of granite suitable for erection as a "bauta" stone for the Bjornson centenary celebrations this summer. In Viking times these "bauta" stones were set up to commemorate the illustrious dead, often being dragged for weeks on end to the chosen site. The stone measures about 25 feet wide, 18 inches thick, 15 feet high, and weighs seven tons. A portrait of the famous Norwegian poet is to be carved on the face of the stone found by Herr Fedje, after which it will be taken to Bjornson's estate at Aulestad, and erected in the grounds.

Bjornson, massive and rugged in his person, as in his heart, could have desired no more fitting memorial.

Famous Author Outshone by His Son

A world-famous author who frankly admits his seventeen-year-old son outshines him is Hal G. Evans, shown here with his son, Hal G. Jr., as they sailed on the City of Los Angeles for the boy's graduation present—a four month trip to Hawaii, New Guinea and the Solomon Islands. The youngster graduated as student body president of Los Angeles high school; as a member of every honorary society; as an Ephebian society member; as having played in every quarter of every football game the school played; as a member of the senior council; with a grade of "A" in every subject; and as editor of the school paper.

New Soviet Ship Annoys Tars

Vessel Without Helm Arouses Wrath of Sailors.

London.—Salty old British sea dogs, descended from many generations of adventurous mariners and with sea water, rather than blood, in their veins, are disgusted.

The object of their loathing is the Soviet ship Neva, which arrived here recently with a consignment of Black sea butter. It is not because the Neva is a foreign ship, nor that she brought foreign produce in spite of the "Buy British" campaign. But the Russian builders of this new vessel have dared to violate all the notable traditions of the sea by designing a ship without the beloved steering wheel.

The forefathers of these old salts fought hard to retain sails, ropes, rigging, and wooden hulls, but gradually resigned themselves to steam, clear superstructure, and steel. Many of the present generation have even been converted from steam to motor power, but a ship without a steering wheel is regarded by most British seamen as the very last straw.

If this Russian innovation is universally accepted, the traditional warning, "Don't talk to the man at the wheel," will have to be changed to "Don't interfere with the helmsman's buttons," for steering on the Neva is done by a series of electric buttons.

It is almost impossible to imagine a picture of the typical rugged seaman, grim and determined, rain and sea water pouring from his oilskin coat and sou'wester, battling against the gale by tapping his fingers on little buttons set on the top of what looks like a steam radiator.

In order to port the helm, the helmsman merely presses the appropriate button and an indicator needle tells him if he has sufficient swing on the vessel. Should a sharper turn be necessary, other buttons may be pressed. There are similar buttons for putting the helm to starboard.

The Neva, which was built in one of the former imperial Russian naval yards, has a number of other devices, regarded by the old-time seamen as a positive nightmare.

Government Workers Now Travel by Air

Washington.—The average fare rate per mile on air passenger lines in the United States is 6.29 cents, according to the Commerce department.

This is 7 per cent lower than the fare in effect at the beginning of 1932, is only about half of the average rate in effect on January 1, 1930, and compares with an average railroad rate of about 8 cents per mile.

The rates announced by the department were computed on 50,000 miles of air routes in the United States.

Air travel rates have become so low that government employees, on official business, are now allowed to travel by air instead of rail.

Sight Restored After 20 Years, Changes Awe Him

New York.—"I don't know what to say or do," said Jacob Lieberman. "I couldn't be happier with millions." He had groped in darkness for 20 years—blind. At eighty-seven years old, it seemed that he would never see sunshine, trees, and faces again. Then surgeons operated on his eyes in the home of the New York Guild for the Jewish Blind. His eyes were bandaged for days. Finally they were uncovered. He blinked and smiled.

"I see!" he exclaimed. Years seemed to fall away from Jacob Lieberman after that. He looked younger, happier. Friends he had known only by their voices became visible. He looked at himself in the mirror and laughed. For the first time he saw his snow-white hair and beard. He was proud of his military carriage, still retained, a reminder of service in the Russian army.

For the first time in 20 years he lighted his own cigarette. Downstairs he walked unflatteringly and came out into a world he had not seen for a fifth of a century.

He smiled joyously at trees showing new leaves, but he was amazed at the traffic, the higher buildings, new-type cars, and transformed streets.

Back at home, he took a bath unaided and put on a new suit.

"I am richer than Rockefeller," he said.

Old Salt's Squatter's Rights Upheld by Court

Boston.—The squatter's rights of an old salt to live aboard his land bound ship have been upheld by Superior Judge Franklin T. Hammond. A realty company has sought a court order to force Capt. Devalden Lebaron Brown, eighty-three, to vacate the lugger which, stranded on Dorchester's mud flats, has been his home for a quarter century.

Hindu Ceremonies Cost Billion Yearly

Religious Body Wants Huge Expenses Reduced.

London.—That the Hindus in India spend something like $1,250,000,000 annually on ceremonial occasions, and that this national budget of the people needs economizing, is the main conclusion and recommendation made in a preliminary report by the Hindu religious committee to his holiness the shankaracharya, Doctor Kurukoti.

A small committee was appointed by his holiness at the end of last year to report on the condition of religious observances in India and their effect on the economic condition of the people. The following are the general conclusions drawn up by that committee in a preliminary report:

Leaving out the Moslems and the depressed classes for the moment, there are 200,000,000 Hindus in British India. These are grouped into about 40,000,000 families. There are about 4,000,000 deaths each year in these families.

Every death means religious ceremonies, lasting for 13 days, which are performed by Hindus of all castes. It has been estimated that 50 rupees per death ceremony would be a very moderate estimate. Thus 200,000,000 rupees per year is paid out by the Hindus in what the committee calls "death duties" surrendered to the Hindu society. Part of this is purely for ceremonies. Similarly there are about 5,000,000 births per year among the caste Hindus. The ceremonies in connection with births are much less complicated, as seemingly the passing of man from this life is of more importance than an arrival into the world, and the committee calculates that the total average cost does not exceed 10 rupees per head, including the ceremonies. This would add 50,000,000 rupees to the bill.

During the lifetime of a caste Hindu there are in all 16 ceremonies, including birth and death. In the case of the Brahmins, numbering more than 15,000,000, there are two ceremonies, the death and marriage ceremonies which are the most important.

Marriage is a ceremony of universal importance with Hindus of all castes. It has been estimated that there are in all about 30,000,000 Hindu families in India. The number of marriages per year is estimated at about 5,000,000. But taking into consideration that two families are concerned in the marriage, about 10,000,000 families are affected by it. At the lowest, it is estimated, each of these families spends about 150 rupees on the marriage, bringing the Hindu national marriage bill up to the huge sum of 1,500,000,000 rupees.

The thread ceremony among the Brahmins is the most important, as without it no person has the right to call himself a Brahmin. About 250,000 thread ceremonies take place every year, costing about 30,000,000 rupees.

There are numerous other ceremonies on all sorts of occasions, like the new year, the dasera, the festival of lights, etc. Added together, all these ceremonies represent an expenditure of 2,750,000,000 rupees, or $1,050,000,000.

The depressed classes, numbering about 50,000,000, have their annual ceremonial which costs them about 10 rupees per head, adding another 500,000,000 rupees, or $187,500,000 to the huge sum spent on ritual. The committee considers that this is an estimate for very lean years. For the average good year this estimate should be increased by 50 per cent.

Taking the present estimate as the best for the purpose of general consideration the committee thinks that at the present moment, when the government dues are being considered as excessive, an attempt should be made to reduce these religious charges. The government of India's annual revenue is round about $500,000,000. The Hindu spends more than 25 per cent on his religious rites and ceremonies alone. If the income of an Indian per head per year is taken at the official figure of $25, then the Hindu is spending more than 25 per cent of his income on religious ceremonies. After government and other taxes have been paid the Hindu has to live on about 15 cents per week.

The committee considers that a broader and more humane outlook must be taken of this problem of life for the Hindu. They feel that the question must be considered as a whole and that heads of the Hindu religion should be consulted throughout India, and that religious ceremonies should be reduced in costs so as to make it possible to undertake religious ceremonies without having to borrow from a money lender to do so.

Italian Stores Retail Gas Masks for Next War

Rome.—Gas attacks against civilian populations in the next war is one of Europe's worst terrors at the present time.

Retail stores in Italy are now displaying a type of gas mask in their shop windows the same as they would hot water bottles, goggles, or other types of rubber and chemical appliances. Two types of masks are to be seen in a store window for retail sale in Plebiscite street, just opposite Mussolini's office. No statistics on retail sales are available but the implication is that the public is to be encouraged to buy these masks and store them away for time of need.

Italian disarmament proposals at Geneva call for the discontinuance of gas warfare and the dismantling of all factories for the manufacture of toxic gases for war purposes. Meanwhile the manufacture of gas masks adds another staple to the rubber and chemical business for public consumption.

Paris Has Severe Laws Against Divorce Frauds

Paris.—A new law, just published in the Journal Officiel, provides for severe measures against divorce frauds in France, with a term of imprisonment varying from six months to two years, and a fine of from $5 to $500 in cases of bogus or fraudulent declarations, or of trickery in entering and serving notice of suits for divorce.

Here are PRICES that make first-choice tires real BARGAINS

THE best tire, regardless of price, is a Goodyear. Don't take our word for it. Take the public's. The public says Goodyears are best—by a lead of 2 to 1 over any other tire. And here are prices that prove that the best costs no more.

Every price buys Goodyear quality—a lifetime guaranteed Supertwist Cord tire—marked with the Goodyear house flag and Goodyear name.

Look them over, and ask yourself: "Why buy any second-choice tire when FIRST-CHOICE costs no more?"

SIX "PLIES"?
You can count six layers of cord here, but the first two under the tread in this tire (or in any so-called "six-ply" tire built this way) do not run from head to head. Some tire-makers count these as "plies," but they are really "breaker strips," so we call them that.

EVEN WILD ZULUS TAKE TO "TALKIES"

White Man's Genius Scores Another Triumph.

Zululand, still the abode of witch-doctors, evil spirits, and polygamy, is being tamed by the talkies. A South African film company, equipped with the latest type of sound apparatus, has acquired the right to "shoot" pictures in the heart of a vast native reserve into which the probing white fingers of civilization have scarcely penetrated.

The first sound-film of the Zululand was made last year when the impis of Solomon Dintzulu and other paramount chiefs assembled in force outside Eshowe to bid farewell to their beloved high commissioner, the earl of Athlone. For the first time in history townsmen heard the menace of the naked black feet marching across the veld. Then, to finish all the full-throated, never-to-be-forgotten "Ba-yets!" the royal salute shouted in honor of the Great White Chief.

Unlike most subject races the Zulu retains the characteristics we always associate with him. His stabbing assegai may have been beaten into a plowshare, but he still carries his cattle for wives, he still barters his cattle for wives, years a moochie, or abbreviated loaf, and has a physique any white man would envy—provided, that is, he has never left his native kraal to work in the towns.

The talkie era in Zululand has not dawned without incident. The camera man, used to taking pictures of "boys" in the mine compounds along the Reef, finds he has to adopt a different technique when he sets out to film raw Zululand.

He must have skilled interpreters for one thing, boundless patience for another. He must not attempt to take a film without first of all consulting the local oracle, in other words, the witch-doctor. If the spirit of M'kosi's great-grandmother decrees that the film must be taken in the middle of a thunderstorm, the white man will have to use all his persuasive powers to hear the verdict of another ancestor less ignorant of sound-photography. Even then the "movie" man has to overcome the aversion of all pure-bred Zululand to being photographed; he has to demonstrate that the "eye-that-speaks" is harmless.

Mr. Joseph Albrecht, one of the pioneers of South Africa film production, is looking for a Zulu "star." All he asks is—she must not be afraid of the camera.

To accustom Zululand to talkies, the first speaking film of themselves was shown recently at an open-air Indaba in Glenghlovu. Warriors and women from all parts of the territory came along to see what the white man's latest medicine was like. For the first five minutes there was deep silence, then a startled chorus of "O-ow's" and wild pandemonium.

The audiences took to their heels as one man—but they came back! Talkies had justified themselves.—London Tit-Bits.

Tell-Tale Invention

"Please arrest me" is in effect, the message conveyed by a new German invention designed to aid the police in capturing "hit-and-run" automobile drivers. The moment a car hits a person or another vehicle, the device, located under the chassis, is said to raise a white plate with a winking red light above the license plate, and also automatically to disconnect and lock the speedometer thus showing the rate of speed at which the car was traveling at the time of the accident.

The invention, of course, is valueless unless laws compelling its universal use are passed and unless the key is kept by the police to prevent unscrupulous motorists from tampering with the telltale mechanism.

Gold Digger

"Daughter," said her dad, "how does it come you go out with a different young man every night?" "Oh," she yawned, "most of my boy friends have had their salaries cut and they can't afford more than one date a week with me now."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

VOL. XLVI

ST. JOE, DEKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, THURSDAY, AUGUST 11, 1932

NUMBER 32

PARISH SCHOOL CAMP WAS SUCCESSFUL

About 32 young people attended the church school camp conducted by the Evangelical Lutheran Churches of Spencerville and St. Joe at Hamilton Lake August 1-6 inclusive. The camp schedule was arranged as a fourfold basis so that the mental, physical, spiritual, and moral phases of life each received proportionate share of time. And although all returned home tired from a week of active days from 6 o'clock in the morning until 9:30 at night there was much enthusiastic planning for a bigger camp next year.

The forenoons were devoted chiefly to the following classes: Church Year, Rev. Fabianske; Church Hymns, Rev. Woodcock; Bible Drama, Mrs. Fabianske; Memorization, Miss Minnie Walker; Prayer and Bible, Rev. Fabianske.

Each young person participated in the morning devotions, prayer at mealtime, and evening vespers which contributed to the devotional and spiritual life of the campers.

Morning dips, ball games, swimming, hiking, rest periods, boating, and setting up exercises were in charge of Paul Dean and Rev. Fabianske.

One camper said that she would not soon forget the wonderful eats or the "gangplanks and pitchforks" games played in the dining hall. Another camper was delighted at the end of the treasure hunt that sugar plums actually grow on maple trees.

Mrs. Lela Northrup, Miss Minnie Walker, Mrs. Paul Dean and several other women who worked part time contributed their time in preparing meals for the camp. Miss Jean Goodwin of St. Joe and Lee Chapman of Spencerville received the honors of "All Camp Girl" and "All Camp Boy" respectively. These honors go to the campers who score highest in participation and attitude toward the camp.

The following is a list of the young people who were enrolled in the camp:

Your Kodak films can be purchased at News office and you can also leave your order for prints here. Our customers are pleased and a trial will convince you. An enlargement free on first order.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Holipeter, Mr. Rush Holipeter and daughter, Miss Jane of Blytheville, Arkansas, Rev. and Mrs. William F. Cooley of Summerfield, North Carolina and Mr. and Mrs. Laney Gee were Sunday dinner and supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. H. Curie and family. Other supper and over night guests were Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Zimmerman and son, Lyle of Grant, Mich. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Curie and children, Lucille and Junior and Mrs. Jennie Sechler were evening visitors.

EX-POLICEMAN TO BE HERE SUNDAY AT SERVICES

Tom Rhodes, ex-policeman of Detroit, Mich., a gospel tenor soloist of nationwide prominence, will tell his life's story and render a program of his favorite solos on Sunday, August 14, at the Community Hall of Harlan at 10:15 A. M. and in the evening in another meeting to be held in the St. Joe High School Gymnasium at 7:00 central standard time. There are no admission charges.

Mr. Rhodes has a remarkable testimony. He has been featured in the largest churches of the land, singing in such churches as Moody Memorial of Chicago, First Baptist of Buffalo, N. Y., Church-hill Tabernacle of Buffalo. He has featured as soloist for leading pastors and Bible teachers of the land. He has also been heard by many as a gospel singer from WOWO and other radio stations.

Rhodes was born in England, has come through 8 years of police duty in Detroit, and has an unusual story concerning the crime and gang operations of England and America.

These services in Harlan and St. Joe are under the auspices of the Methodist Protestant Churches of the St. Joe and Concord Circuit. The general public is invited to attend.

OBITUARY

Etta A. Maxwell, daughter of Joseph and Sarah Maxwell, was born December 31, 1877 near Butler, Ind., and departed this life at her home near Waterloo, Indiana, August 4, 1932.

Death came so sudden and unexpected that we are again brought face to face with the fact of how insecure our hold on life is.

She was united in marriage to Gust Glawe, October 8, 1893. To this union were born four children, three sons and one daughter.

She united with the church many years ago and became a member of the Christian Church at Newville, Indiana, when the family moved near there. She loved the church and the work of the church. She was a faithful member until they sold their farm and moved from that locality. But her faith still remained the same.

She was a faithful wife, a kind mother, a good neighbor and highly respected by all who knew her. She will be greatly missed, not only among her family but in the community in which she lived. But our loss is her eternal gain.

She leaves to mourn her sudden departure, her husband, three sons, Fred of Spencerville, Ind., Justin of Newville, Ind., Paul, and a daughter Mabel at home. One sister, Mrs. Mary Helwig of near Agola, Ind., and one brother, James Maxwell, of Alberta, Canada. Also many relatives and friends.

Funeral services were held Sunday at 1:00 o'clock from the home. Rev. C. W. Moore officiating. Burial in Newville cemetery by E. R. Kinsey.

CARD OF THANKS

We desire in this manner to express to our many friends and neighbors who so kindly administered to us with their words and deeds of kindness in this our bereavement and also for the floral offerings.

Mr. Gust Glawe and Children.

Writing tablets and envelopes at News Office.

Walter Stewart and family spent Sunday in the Chas. Van Meter home, near Rockport, O.

Miss Priscilla Borthwick is spending the week in Vaughnsville, Ohio, the guest of friends.

Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Young were guests Monday evening in the Chas. Slaybaugh home at Fort Wayne.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Cox and son were Sunday guests in the Elmer Ebbinghouse home at North Manchester.

See the photo display in News office window. We can supply you with films, have them developed and give you an enlargement of any one of the pictures you wish.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kees, Leon Kees and John Smith were recent guests of friends in Peru, Ind., and attended the American Legion State Convention held at Kokomo. Mr. Leon Kees was a delegate from the Waterloo Post.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Thornton and family arrived home from Washington, D. C., Tuesday noon, over the B. & O. Mrs. Thornton has been employed in the census department. During their absence they maintained a deep interest in St. Joe, and on their return home, we say, welcome to our city.

The R. H. W. Club met at the home of Mrs. Abner Trostel Tuesday, August 2. Roll call was "Our Dumbest Thoughts." There were plenty of them. After a short business meeting the entertainment committee had charge. The hostess served delicious home made ice cream, cake and lemonade. The next meeting will be with Mrs. W. W. Wilder.

Auburn had a $10,000 fire Sunday morning, in which the Ashley Hat shop, Ferguson Furniture Co., suffered heavily in the loss, while damage from smoke and water reached the McBride Store. When discovered about 9 o'clock, the fire was burning fiercely and is thought to have originated in the rear of the furniture store. The entire block was threatened for hours.

Mr. Arlie Baughman, of Osseo, Mich., was in town Saturday looking after his property interests here, namely the Walter M. Covey property, recently vacated by Harry Shuff and family. The News will visit Mr. Baughman each week and keep him posted about the town. Harley Like and family are moving into the property from the Lawson property on Main Street.

Isaac Hoffman, 65, Ft. Wayne junk buyer, who was murdered Sunday night, was well known in St. Joe. He was found beaten and shot to death in his shack. Hoffman, a Russian Jew, came to America 34 years ago and located in Fort Wayne. His wife was in Chicago, visiting. It is thought he was murdered for his money, as no cash could be found in his purse of shack.

Elgin Curie, administrator of the Wm. Curie estate, is launching one of the largest stock reduction sales ever put on in St. Joe, during the history of the Curie store, starting August 15, and continuing until November 15. Practically every item in this store has been reduced in price, representing a great saving to the buyer. Large 18x24 hand bills were printed by The News for this sale are being distributed this week.

GREAT MUSICAL EVENT AT WINONA LAKE

Winona Lake, Ind.,—Outstanding among the musical events to be staged in Indiana this year will be the presentation of "The Messiah" in the "Billy Sunday" Tabernacle here on the evening of August 26. Practically every city and town in the north half of the state will be represented in the chorus of 1,000 or more voices. Groups of carefully selected singers have been practicing for weeks in their home towns under capable directors and all will be assembled for final rehearsals here prior to the public presentation on August 26. Dr. George L. Tenney, of Chicago, will direct the great chorus, which will include outstanding soloists among the students of the School of Sacred Music and individual singers from neighboring states. There will be an orchestra accompaniment.

The rendition of "The Messiah" will be the closing feature of the School of Sacred Music and Music Festival Week, founded here ten years ago by Homer Rodeheaver and operated ever since to afford intensive training for choir directors, singers, teachers and students. The school will open on August 12 and will close on August 26.

Charles W. Duagherty, personal representative of the School and Festival, who has been busy for several months enrolling singers for the Messiah chorus, says groups will come from Warsaw, Leesburg, North Webster, Syracuse, Milford, Atwood, Etna Green, Bourbon, Pierceton, South Whitley, North Manchester, Akron, Mentone, Burket, Claypool, Plymouth, Culver, Argos, Rochester, Peru, Indianapolis, Noblesville, Tipton, New Paris, Goshen, Ligonier, Washington Center, Columbia City, Huntington, Marion, Gas City, Jonesboro, Summitville, Swayzee, Converse, Fairmount, Alexandria, Anderson, Pendleton, Kokomo, Fortville, Elwood, Fort Wayne, Garrett, Auburn, Waterloo, Kendallville, Warren, Albion and individual singers from at least 15 other cities and towns. Many cities are holding weekly rehearsals with groups numbering as high as fifty. Two rehearsals a week are held in Marion with groups from Gas City, Jonesboro, Summitville, Fairmount, Swayzee and Converse taking part. The entire Lutheran Choral Society of Fort Wayne, numbering 100 or more and all trained in singing of "The Messiah," will take part here.

DEKALB COUNTY MAN HAS COLLECTION OF OLD MONEY

George B. Wilson, Aged Resident Of St. Joe, Also Owns Checks and Scrip Dating Back to 18th Century

Elkhart, Ind., August 10.—Some idea of the difficulties attendant on doing business in America during the early half of the 19th century may be gained from looking over a unique collection of old paper money, checks and scrip which Mrs. William L. Frank, 1327 South Main Street, now has at her home.

The collection is the property of George B. Wilson, aged resident of St. Joe, Ind., who is an old time friend of Mrs. Frank. While he was on a visit here recently, he left it with her for safe keeping.

The oldest item in the collection is a paper bill issued by the colony of Delaware in 1789. This bill, printed somewhat crudely on rough paper 8 by 4 inches, has a face value of 2 shillings. Bills of all the other original 13 American colonies are included. How currency standards varied in Revolutionary days is indicated by the following list of notes:

State of Massachusetts-Bay, one dollar, dated as payable in 1786; Connecticut, six pence, dated 1776; Rhode Island, one-twenty-fourth of a dollar, dated 1778; New York, two pounds, dated 1771; Pennsylvania, 15 shillings, dated 1773; Maryland, one dollar, dated 1774; New Jersey, 18 pence, dated 1776; Virginia, 15 pence, dated 1775; North Carolina, three pounds, dated 1771; South Carolina, 20 dollars, 1777.

Most of the states apparently were using the pound-shilling-pence system, as it was used in England, but the several bills quoting dollars show that the Spanish milled dollar was coming into favor as a money unit.

Another interesting bill in the Wilson collection is an example of the first United States money. On this note, the new-born country is called "The United Colonies," and the printing states that "This bill entitles the bearer to receive eight Spanish milled dollars or the value thereof in gold or silver."

There are also several samples of early "continental currency," which was issued by the colonial government without backing and which therefore gave rise to the expression "not worth a continental."

Most of the items in the collection, however, represent currency issued by the states, the banks or by private business concerns during the period from 1800 to 1870. Many are beautifully embellished with steel engravings and some of them resemble modern currency, but it is easily apparent that traders of that period must have had trouble in differentiating the good paper money from the bad.

Early day shortage of gold and silver resulted in the issuance of commercial scrip by various storekeepers, who promised to redeem the scrip in merchandise upon demand. Several examples of such notes, signed by Harmon A. Sheldon, Middlebury, Vt., merchant, are included in the collection.

There are quite a few checks some English and some American, calling for payment of sums as high as 1,000 pounds, which would be more than 4,000 American dollars at the current rate of exchange. And one might wonder what drama might be revealed in the history of a large Bank of England note which bears, stamped heavily upon its face, the word "forged."

The early day equivalent of a modern automobile license is represented in a "certificate of duty" showing that one Jonathan Hagar, had paid a fee of two dollars on a "two-wheeled carriage, known as a chaise" in 1816.

The collection includes numerous examples of currency issued by the Confederate states during the Civil War. Practically none of this money had gold or silver behind it and it was consequently valueless. There are also samples of paper money issued by Argentina, Brazil, France, the Ottoman empire, China and Japan.

The notes, checks and certificates of various kinds are pasted in a scrap book and nearly all of them are well preserved.

Neither Mrs. Frank nor Mr. Wilson has any idea what the collection is worth, but if it could be cashed in for the face value of the money and checks it might be a small fortune.

THE WORLD IS GOING TO KEEP RIGHT ON ROLLING

In Trinidad recently, a bearded Spanish prophet came down from his cave in the mountains to announce to the villagers that within six months the world would come to an end.

There have been such prophets before. In fact, there are not a few in America today. But they are all wrong.

What do you think? How are you acting? Are you waiting with folded hands for the end? Or do you figure that this old earth is going to keep right on rolling for awhile, and that a growing savings account in a good bank will be mighty useful in the years ahead?

America is going to belong to the people who believe in the future, and in themselves.

CHAPTER X

Lee Confesses His Love

Her tears ceased presently, and she rose, bathed her face and spent some time before the mirror, doing everything she knew to efface the blotchy effect of them. Life seemed very dark and hopeless. She felt that she had done everything, tried everything, in her power to put things right, and that it had been utterly unavailing. Well, she had better do as he had said, and go. And yet she was sure that he was so near to loving her. Last night during the storm, how gentle and dear he had been. Very gentle, too, to hold her close in his arms and press his somber face caressingly to her gold hair. Surely he had loved her then? Surely it had been love that had made him unable to hear the torments of jealousy that Jocelyn's lies had aroused; had made him abandon plans and engagements, and get into his powerful car and come post haste to her here, to learn the truth for himself? And yet, if it were love, he was utterly unwilling to own it. What was left for her to do? Just to do as he had said, she supposed, and leave him. . . . Should she? Now? Right away? And let him find her gone when he got back? The idea held away for a while, but somehow she couldn't bring herself to act upon it. She knew it was hopeless and yet she must just see him again before she went; must let him know that she was going. . . . But he seemed in no hurry to get back to her. She waited till six and dinner till nearly nine. Still he didn't come. So dinner was a lonely meal that evening, that seemed to be threatening to choke her with each mouthful. Then the thought struck her that he did not intend to come back. No, that could not very well be, because he had taken none of his things. Oh, well, whether he came back or not, she would go tomorrow morning; first thing. Back to her father, confessing that failure she had told Jim she would not confess. . . .

She went to her room and began gathering her belongings, ready for packing in the morning. Packing some of them now; feeling wretchedly unhappy; her heart aching as it never had ached before.

She was engaged in this way, when suddenly she heard him return. She straightened up and stood rigidly still at the sound of his steps. He came straight to her door and opened it without preliminaries of any sort, shut it behind him and leaned back against it. She was startled at sight of his face, for she had never seen him look just as he was looking now.

"What are you doing?" he demanded, his voice strained and queer.

"Packing," she answered. "I'm going."

"To leave me?"

"Yes. You told me to."

Their eyes met in a look that held.

Suddenly he came toward her; caught her arms, looked down into her face with burning eyes, and said:

"You're not. Do you understand? And don't ever shut me out again; as you did this afternoon. Don't. . . . D'you hear?" The words were shaking from his lips as if the emotion that prompted him were threatening to rend him.

"You've beaten me, Lucy. I was lying to you when I said that I didn't love you. . . . I'm mad with longing for you. . . . You've worked your woman-power on me and beaten me. . . . I love you. . . . Love you."

The repetition came with an emphasis that made the words sound curiously desperate, as if it were indeed a surrender of all his strength.

"Jim! Is this true?" she asked, and her heart was knocking hard in her breast.

"True?" He laughed, oddly. "True? When I'm so mad for you that I can't think of anything else? . . . When your face comes between me and everything I try to do? When I'm giddy. . . . drunk with the sweetness of you. . . . True?" He laughed again in the same way and the strength of his hands around her arms was so great that it was painful. Suddenly he pulled her close. . . . "Love you? . . . Do I love you. . . . ?" he cried in a low, broken voice. "I'll show you how I love you. . . . I'll show you how true it is. . . . His arms went wholly round her and he crushed her up to him, so that she could scarcely breathe. Then she found his face close upon her, and his kisses on her hair, on her cheeks, on her throat. . . .

"Jim. . . . Jim. . . ." she faltered out.

"Love you? Do I love you. . . . ?"

Words fell from his lips in a torrent of passion, and then went to silence as his lips closed down upon hers.

A timeless moment passed, while she stood there crushed in his arms; unable to move; almost unable to breathe for the passionate strength of him. She was lost in the ecstasy of his kisses; lost in the heaven of his love; her heart beat out sheer rapture in her breast.

He raised his head presently, a queer, triumphant laugh breaking from him; then looked down into her face, trying to see her eyes. But she kept them lowered, until, with a hand beneath her chin, he forced her to look up at him.

"You asked me whether it was true. . . . he said, unsteadily. "Is it, Lucy?"

"Yes," she whispered. "It is true. . . ."

"Are you satisfied now that I love you?" he went on.

"Yes, Jim. You love me. It is true this time. . . . Real. . . . I have no doubts. . . ."

"This time?" he questioned.

"It was not true or real before. When you made me love you, right at the beginning. . . . When you held me in your arms. . . . Kissed me. . . . It was not real then, Jim. . . . But now. . . . This. . . . Oh, yes it's real this time. . . ."

She breathed a little sigh and, leaning her head upon his breast again, his arms tightened round her again, roughly; savagely almost. And his voice was queer and harsh as he said:

"I think it's always been true. . . . Always been real. . . . I think I've always loved you, Lucy. Anyway, you've always tormented me; madened me; it's been sheer torture to be near you. Torture to be within arm's reach of you. . . . To long for you so. . . ."

"Always, Jim?" She twisted her face upwards as she asked the question. "Even that night. . . . that night of our wedding day. . . . When you told me that you hated me?"

"Oh, I don't know!" he cried. "There no precise moment, or hour, or day for these things. They just happen. Take you unaware. Steal upon you to destroy your peace. . . . To weaken your resolutions. . . . Perhaps hate is love, when it is like that. . . . Burning. . . . Torturing. . . . Don't question, Lucy. . . . Take my love. . . . Give me yours. . . . Forget everything that has been. . . . Bury the past. . . . Let the future go hang. . . . Look at me. . . . Give me your lips. . . . Just love me as I love you. . . . Ah, darling, if you knew how I have longed for you. . . . Longed to take you in my arms. . . . Longed to kiss your lips. . . . It's purgatory to want anything as I have wanted you." He was punctuating his words with kisses that fell on her hair, on her cheeks and lips and throat. . . .

"Jim—Jim—" She faltered out.

"Jim. . . . Jim. . . ." she faltered out breathlessly, amazed, almost afraid, of the wildness of his passion.

"Lucy, I'm mad tonight, I think. . . . Mad with longing for you. . . . Mad with the sweetness and the beauty of you. . . . Do you know how lovely you are? Do you know what magic there is in your eyes? And on your lips. . . . ? And they are mine now, aren't they, Lucy? Aren't they mine now?"

"I am all yours, Jim. . . . You know that. . . . I always have been, ever since the first day I saw you. . . . Jim, you know that, don't you? There's never been anyone else for me. . . ."

"Ames?" The question shot out from between his lips and hers, as he moved the fraction of an inch from a kiss.

"Never, do you doubt it? I liked him. . . . was fond of him as I might be of a brother. . . . But I never have loved any man but you. . . ."

"He says that he is going to make you leave me. . . . He can't, can he?"

"Only one person can make me leave you, Jim; you, yourself. . . ."

"Then you'll never leave me now, Lucy. I'll never let you out of my sight again! Do you know what it is to long for anything as I have been longing for you? I don't believe you do. . . . I don't believe anyone could. . . ."

"Jim," she answered, lifting her lips to his. "I love you, too. . . . Don't you think that I must know something about it? I've loved you all the time you have been saying that you hated me. . . . All the time I thought you were in love with Jocelyn. . . . Don't you think that perhaps I know something of what the longing of love can be? You have at least always known that I love you. . . . while I have had to think that you hated me. . . . He crushed that off her lips with his own.

"Ah, don't!" he cried. "Girl, it's been such hell. . . . But you haven't thought lately that I hated you. . . ."

You have known that I loved you! Haven't you? Isn't that what you meant yesterday? Isn't that what you tried to make me confess? Well, you've done it. You have got it from me. Beaten me. I'm done. . . . Can't hold out against you any longer. I told you I was only a man, Lucy. Nothing more; nothing less. And you have known what it means, have you? You have known the torment of it, too? Then you know what it is to me now to hold you in my arms. . . . To kiss your lips. . . . To know that at last you are mine. Mine. All the sweetness of you. . . . All the beauty. . . ."

He pushed her away suddenly, until she was at arms' length from him, and looked her up and down with hungry eyes. "You're some sort of miracle, aren't you, Lucy?" he added shakily.

"Can anything so lovely be real?"

She laughed, rather tremulously; immensely happy at his admiration, and drew herself away from him further yet, until his clinging hands left her face, and she stood at a slight distance, looking at him with exquisite eyes, a smile on her lips.

"You're rather nice to look at yourself," she said, softly. "Hasn't anyone ever told you about it before?" There was a touch of shy humor in her voice, and, as he came toward her she backed away, half-teasing; half, really shy. He started after her, hands outstretched, eyes lit.

"Don't play with me, Lucy," he said, a curious tone almost like a warning in his voice. "Don't play the fool with me. I can't stand it. . . ."

"Why, darling?" she cried softly, melting to a wonderful tenderness.

"I'm not playing with you. . . . I'm just trying to realize it. Just trying to believe that it isn't a dream, and that I shan't wake up in a moment and find things. . . . as they were. . . ."

She caught a breath.

"Then if you are not playing with me, come here and show me that you love me. . . . Prove it to me. . . ."

He demanded. She moved toward him again, that sweet, young shyness still in her eyes, and on her lips. Then held out her hands and finished the short journey at a little run. He remained unmoving, letting her arms bang at his sides, letting her stand close before him. . . .

"Show me that you love me," he said again. She raised her hands and slid them up round his neck; pulled down his head, and laid her lips to his.

"Jim. . . . Jim. . . . I love you. . . ."

He whispered between soft little meetings of their lips. "Love you with all my heart and soul. . . . Love you so much that I don't see how I could love you more. . . . And I want your love just as much as you want mine. . . . I've longed for it, just as you have. . . . And I'm yours. . . . Wholly. . . . Absolutely yours. . . . Dear, believe it; because it is the truth. . . . At that his arms were round her again, and reality was once more sent spinning into space. . . ."

"Jim," she sighed, presently, "I think I'm the happiest girl alive. . . ."

"If conquest is the height of a woman's happiness, you ought to be," he answered, still holding her close, as if he were afraid to let her go. "For never was there a man more abjectly beaten by a woman than I am beaten by you. . . ."

And right at the very height of this wonderful new happiness of hers, she had a sudden feeling of chill fear.

"That is a. . . a queer way to put it, Jim," she said, not quite steadily.

"Is it being beaten to win what you want? To get the love you have been longing for?"

"Being beaten," he answered slowly, "is finding that you are weaker than the force you have been fighting, and surrendering to it. . . . Giving up the fight. . . . Owning up that you can't stand against it any longer. . . ."

"That is being beaten, Lucy. . . ."

She tried to draw away the little feat in her eyes now. But he held her fast and would not let her move.

Common Plant Credited With Odd Propensities

Volumes of human history, forgotten hopes, faith, superstition, love of beauty, rise in the mind of the herb-ist as he comes upon the common St. Johnswort, Hypericum Perforatum, of Europe, standing beside a dusty American roadway. It nods its head of upper branches terminating in clusters of five-parted yellow-golden flowers with long yellow stamens in the wind made by passing automobiles. Ages ago it nodded thus as witches passed in the dusk, riding on broomsticks. Neolithic women, perhaps, discovered the mystic plant had curative properties. When Christianity came in it already was known as a worker of white magic. Pagans, adopting the new religion, still put a string of St. Johnswort over the door to ward off evil spirits, keep away disease, scare the devils. In Colonial times in America teas were made of it for face washes. Our own grandmothers spent hours picking the tiny golden petals to put into bottles of alcohol to make a lotion for chapped hands, wrinkled faces. Its stem, one to two feet tall, is crowded with short branches with little oval, stiff leaves. Like modern witches the plant is lovely to look at. It brightens the dooryard of the poor, —J. Otis Swift in the New York World-Telegram.

Early English Proverb

"You can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear" is an early English proverb, and the first use of it appears to be in "The Pigeon of Colgrave" (1738). It appears also in Swift's "Polite Conversation" (1748) and again in Richardson's "Clarissa" (1750) and repeatedly thereafter.

Love and Life

People in the life longer, and better, Dr. Josiah Oldfield, noted London physician, told the audience at the annual meeting of the Lady Margaret hospital.

And the other extreme, nagging, is "furo murder," the doctor said. "Furrowed assets of being in love, according to Doctor Oldfield, are: Better digestion. Glossier skin and shiner hair. Food tastes better.

"When a woman starts nagging her husband," he said, "she is committing slow murder and at the same time taking the first step toward becoming haggard, ugly and old. When a woman goes green with jealousy she is straining her hepatic duct."

BABY "WENT TO ALMOST NOTHING"

Then Eagle Brand saved the day!

"WE ARE sending you a picture of our daughter, Alice Ann," writes Mrs. Joel Buttgerreit, 132 Arch St., Verona, Penn., "to show you what Eagle Brand has done for our baby when three other baby foods failed.

"Our baby weighed 9 pounds at birth and went to almost nothing. Then we tried Eagle Brand, and with her first feeding, she seemed satisfied. She started to pick up right away and at eight months weighed 26 pounds and had 8 teeth.

"Writing could never express our gratitude for what Eagle Brand has done for our baby."

If your baby is not thriving on his present food we suggest that you and your doctor consider Eagle Brand. Send for free booklet. The new and complete edition of "Baby's Welfare" contains practical feeding information and suggestions for supplementary foods—orange juice, cereals, cod-liver oil, etc.—advised by doctors.

Every picture and letter published by The Borden Company is voluntarily sent us by a grateful parent or other relative.

Before and After Six o'Clock Modes

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

TO SUM it up briefly, modish cottons tell the major part of fashion's story for summer. And what "fash" they are putting on now that the smart set is arraying itself in fine cottons for the very most formal before and after six o'clock occasions on the social calendar.

The costumes pictured herewith "speak louder than words" as to how cottons are carrying on in the environs of high society at the present moment. It would be difficult to conceive of anything smarter to wear for dining, dancing and calling during the afternoon hours than the swaggar outfit illustrated to the right. No, my dear, the stunning little frock is not a printed silk as one might naturally suppose it to be, but guess what! It is a printed pique, if you please. Now, "ain't that summin' worth 'thinkin' through" when it comes to planning what to wear to the next smart afternoon affair dated in your engagement book?

It is interesting to note that the pique used for this good-looking dress is the fine-rib kind, for it is as stylish as are the wide-wide types. A striking black rambling design is imprinted on a background in light beige. A charming scalloped-all-around little jacquette of black transparent velvet accords the note of elegance which pervades every detail of this ensemble. Right through the summer style program we are being made to feel that life in the world of fashion is largely a matter of just one cunning little velvet jacket after another. The model pictured is really one of the most youthful and flattering types brought out this season.

As to the color scheme of this costume, it is faultless. The hat tones in most artfully, being a beige straw, with a red flower motif at the front just to give a splash of vivid color. By the way, had you heard that it's the latest to pose a flower or bouquet of flowers at the front of the crown—over so now and chic looking and it is the style.

There is really no limit as to how formal pique may be. Leading couturiers are making some of their latest evening gowns of monotone pique, with such distinctive details as the new shoulder butterfly effects via ruching of self-fabric or in some instances bands of flowers formed of the material, with perhaps a full ruching outlining the hemline of the skirt.

As to organdies, and similar sheers also note and lace cotton meehes, they are flourishing in the evening festivities as never before.

Those who sense the last word in fashion express no end of enthusiasm for mousseline de soie, because of it's being so exquisitely sheer and dainty. The delightful crenon shown to the left is Vera Boren's (Countess de Reggoli), who belongs to the younger school of French designers. It is Mme. Boren herself who posed for this photograph. Note how prettily the hemline of this very full skirt flatters rows of delicately wrought shirings. The bodice is likewise daintily shirred. The jacquet, which is made of charming transparent velvet, also makes shirring a decorative theme, in that its collar and short puff sleeves show this treatment.

SMART SPORTS TOGS SUGGEST MILITARY

There are still no fashions that have endeared themselves to all Paris as much as those which suggest the military. Coats with shoulders like the epaulettes of an officer's uniform, caps in the dull pale blue worn by the French army, gold buttons and anchors and other insignia that suggest the navy—all these are still favorite fashions of young people in Paris.

Sports clothes, especially, take frequently the military line and color. There is much blue and bright red, many combinations of red, white and blue, and many brass buttons about the suits and coats and dresses that are designed for golf, for yachting, for the beach and for general country wear.

Velvet Is Latest Entry in Midsummer Fashion

The arrival of velvet as a midsummer fashion was one of the surprises of the recent group of fashion collections shown by the Paris dressmakers to foreign buyers and members of the press. Lightweight velvet, woven in new textures as fine as other silk materials, was used to make dresses designed to wear even in the warmest summer months.

Velvet raincoats were shown by some houses. Velvet jackets for daytime town wear, long traveling coats of velveteen and many evening costumes were among the velvet fashions introduced during the collections.

The newer velvets are of two varieties—those which are firm and stiff, and those which are soft and supple and fall in deep folds. Mirande shows an evening cape, knee length, made of the stiff velvet.

Smart Handbag Fiber Cover Can Be Washed

One of the most practical as well as smart handbags seen recently has a fabric cover that can be removed for washing. The cover is of plaid or linen and comes in most any color you like. Of course, it solves the problem of keeping the white handbag clean.

WHITE HAT VOGUE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

It does not matter whether you wear a light frock or a dark one, Paris says to top it with an all-white hat. Quite recently the best modistes are turning to fabrics for inspiration. The model pictured is a white ribbed transparent velvet beret-like turban. It has a rolled brim coming down low on the right side. A chic bow of self-material trims it.

Newest Frocks Are Cut on Bias With Few Seams

The triangle line is more and more in evidence in the new dresses. Bias cutting—so important in getting soft, smooth surfaces with as few seams as possible—marks a big majority of all frocks that are not in the tailleur class.

The double bias line, which ends by forming a triangle, appears to be the distinguishing feature of many of the new afternoon dresses.

Lines Coats

Top coats of heavy linen tailored with all the precise attention to details that mark coats of woolen fabrics are worn by the smartest young persons with linen or cotton dresses.

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS—DUTIES TO MAN

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:12-21.
GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.—Leviticus 19:18.
PRIMARY TOPIC—The Ten Commandments.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Ten Commandments.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Loving and Helping Others.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Christian Interpretation of the Commandments.

The first table of the law sets forth the duties Godward, the second toward. The fifth commandment is the centerpiece of the Decalogue, key-stone of the Sinaiic arch.

I. The Fifth Commandment (v. 12). This commandment rests upon the fundamental basis of fact that parents stand with their children in the place of God.

1. How this commandment may be broken.

(a) By showing disrespect to parents. Disrespect is shown to parents: (1) By speaking of them as "the old man" and "the old woman." (2) By living such lives as cast reproach upon them. (3) By being ashamed to be seen in their company.

(b) By disobedience. It is right that the child should obey its parents and it is the responsibility of the parent to see that obedience is rendered.

(c) By not supporting them in old age. When parents are no longer able to care for themselves it is the children's duty to care for them.

2. Promises annexed to this commandment.

(a) "That it may be well with thee" (Eph. 6:3). (b) That thou mayest live long upon the earth.

II. The Sixth Commandment (v. 17). The Scriptures show man's life to be sacred. Man was created in God's image. Every attempt to take human life is a thrust at God. This commandment may be broken:

By sinful anger (Matt. 5:22). By hatred (1 John 3:15). By immoderate use of meats and drinks. By immoderate recreation. By selling adulterated foods and diseased meats. By employers having unsafe surroundings, thereby causing the death of their employees. By failing to provide proper food and clothing for wives and children. By sending children to toll in shops and factories. By suicide.

By infanticide. By wars.

III. The Seventh Commandment (v. 14).

This is a bulwark thrown around the home. The home is not only the oldest of God's institutions, but the foundation of them all. This commandment may be broken:

By unclean thoughts, affections, purposes, and imaginations (Matt. 5:27, 28; 15:19). By unchaste conversation. By wanton looks (1sa. 3:16; 2 Pet. 2:14). By immodest apparel. One's clothing is a strong factor in revealing character. By actual adultery. By divorce.

IV. The Eighth Commandment (v. 15).

This commandment strikes at the sin of theft. Many things are legally right which are morally wrong. This commandment may be broken:

By taking that which belongs to another. By using false weights and measures. By selling adulterated foods and inferior goods. By extortion. By employers defrauding employees, and employees failing to do honest work or to put in full time. By borrowing and not returning. By going into debt. By usury. By graft. By lying advertisements. By making assignments to escape payment of debts. By gambling. By strong nations oppressing weaker ones.

V. The Ninth Commandment (v. 16).

The sin aimed at by this commandment is most deadly—slandering of living. This commandment may be broken:

By actual lying. By perjury—swearing to falsehoods by the name of God. By slander—speaking against another falsely with a purpose to injure. By tale-bearing (Lev. 19:16). This is commonly done by repeating a report without investigating its truthfulness. By creating a false impression (Exod. 23:1).

By a breach of promise. By withholding the truth. By perverting the meaning of a statement. By exaggeration. By flattery. By recommending for a position of honor and trust a man who is unfitted for it. By granting a church letter to a man who is unworthy.

VI. The Tenth Commandment (v. 17).

This commandment strikes at the desire for that which is unlawful for one to have. The sin does not lie in the desire to possess things but in the desire to possess that which belongs to another.

After 4,000 Years

A great cemetery has been discovered by an expedition working at Tepe Hissar, near Damghan, Persia. Scores of graves have been opened, revealing the remains of a people some 4,000 years old. Their racial origin is unknown, but it is possible that they form a connecting link between India and Mesopotamia. "It is an awe-inspiring sight," says Doctor Schmidt, the leader of the expedition, "to look upon the remains of a hundred people, dead ages ago, exposed with their mortuary equipment to the sunlight in one great necropolis. Thus we found them in the main mound at Tepe Hissar."

One More

"Wonderful, the things that are invented—horseless cars, wireless telegraph, power without smoke—" "One thing more is needed." "What is that?" "Dowry without a bride."—Vancouver Province.

Liked Sound of Bell

Earl Tillotson, Woodland (Calif.) service station operator, had every reason to believe the depression was all over. When he opened the station the other morning the cash register showed that $2,102,000 in sales had been made during the night. Then he discovered that a pet kinkajou, kept in the building, had escaped from his cage and that the cash register, with its clanging bell, offered the chief amusement.

A kitchen as bright and cheerful as a SUNROOM

Wouldn't you like to have your kitchen so light and free from shadows that work seems to hurry itself along? You can quickly have such a kitchen. Securing it is neither difficult nor expensive. Simply put a new 150-watt Edison Mazda Daylight lamp in the central ceiling fixture (which should be of the totally enclosing type) and a 60-watt Edison Mazda lamp in the shaded fixture above the sink and in the one above the range.

If you haven't these fixtures, ask us to tell you how little it will cost to have them installed.

Now even washing dishes will be easier and less tiresome. For now you can see clearly, quickly and easily. What's that? You'd like to try it? Well, we're ready.

MRS. WILSON SANDERS DIES SUDDENLY

Mrs. Wilson Sanders, 83, died suddenly at her home here, Tuesday evening at about 11 o'clock, of heart trouble. Mrs. Eva Sheffer had gone in to make an evening visit, and Mrs. Sanders, not feeling well asked her to stay all night, which she consented to do. At 11 o'clock Mrs. Sheffer called Mrs. Ruth Davis, next door neighbor, and in a few minutes Mrs. Sanders was dead.

Since her sick spell in the spring she has not been in the best of health, although she stayed alone and did her work. She was about town each week and her friends little thought that her condition was such that she would be called away so suddenly.

She has a step son, Ellsworth, at Mount Rose, Calif.; a sister, Mrs. Carrie Smith at Evanston, Ill., and another sister, Besie residing in Oklahoma.

No arrangements for funeral can be given as it will depend upon arrival of relatives.

COLLISION ON ROAD 6 INJURES MARTIN WHITE

A person's life or safety cannot be guaranteed for any length of time, as we are constantly in danger, but how little we think of it.

Martin White became the victim of a terrible accident, Monday as he drove on Road 6, two miles west of Butler, and collided with a Chevrolet coupe, being driven by Mrs. Paul Metz of Albany, N. Y., who was driving east. Mr. White was knocked through the windshield of his car and received skull injuries, rendering him unconscious for many hours. Mr. White had spent several days with his sister, Mrs. Ella Gill, and Monday started home, when the accident happened.

After the accident Mrs. Metz, who was alone at the time of the crash, went to Auburn and reported the matter at the office of County Sheriff John Hoff. She was uninjured.

Allen Phelps ambulance of Garrett, took Mr. White to Garrett hospital. It will be remembered that Gene White and wife were killed in a similar accident about a year ago. Martin White was 73 years old, but in good physical condition.

Later: Mr. White died Tuesday night about 9 o'clock and was taken to Butler. The funeral arrangements are not made public as yet.

OLD FRIENDS SPEND PLEASANT EVENING

A number of former residents of this place in company with some of the old pals from here met at the beautiful country home of Merritt Sechler in a fellowship meeting on Saturday evening, August 13th.

At 6 o'clock a bounteous carry in dinner was served to the 25 persons present. The following were present: Mrs. Bessie Tustison, Mr. and Mrs. John Kuhns and daughter, Nancy and Chase Patterson of Springfield, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Patterson of Fort Wayne; Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Leighty of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Queen Abel of Garrett; Mrs. Reta Hathaway and Mrs. Rushia Langley of Auburn; Mrs. Jennie Patterson and son, George of Hicksville, Ohio; Dr. and Mrs. C. B. Hathaway and son Billy of Butler; Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Buckingham, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Currie and son, Frank Jr., Mrs. Jennie Sechler and Mrs. Grace Dilley of this place and the host, Merritt Sechler.

At a late hour the good-byes were said and all left, feeling it a most joyous meeting and one long to be remembered.

kle; two daughters, Mrs. A. G. Stanley of Waterloo and Mrs. H. F. Kelsey of Fort Wayne; one son, Coy Dunkle of Butler; eight grandchildren; two sisters, Miss Ella Rahe and Mrs. H. S. Weigmann, both of Fort Wayne; two brothers, William H. Rahe of Fort Wayne, and Frank H. Rahe of Hartford, Conn. Funeral services will be held at the home at 1:30 P. M. (C.S.T.) Thursday, with burial in Lindenwood cemetery at Fort Wayne.

For many years the Dunkle family resided in St. Joe, and they have many friends here who extend their sympathy to the family.

HOW LONG CAN YOU KEEP A SECRET?

One person might get by indefinitely, two persons only a short time and when more than two are in on it, there is danger ahead, it's liable to get out at an unexpected moment.

Just how Lloyd Currie and Lucile Smith kept their marriage secret for over a year, is more than one can tell, and besides there were friends who were in on the secret. However, last week it was revealed somehow last week and Lloyd and his wife gave their word as to its truthfulness.

They were married in July, 1931, at Marion, Indiana, with a girl friend from Fort Wayne in attendance. Mrs. Currie was then in her third year of high school here, and in January, 1932, her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Coburn, with whom she made home, moved to Fort Wayne, and she finished her school term there.

The young couple will probably make their home in St. Joe, and their many friends here wish them success and happiness.

Walter Gee spent over Tuesday night with Mr. and Mrs. W. Z. Byers of Butler.

A birthday surprise party was tendered Miss Isa Krise, Monday evening, at the Ben Markins home. The immediate relatives were present. Cantaloupes and home made ice cream were served.

Ellsworth Eakright, a former trustee of Wilmington township, died at his home Saturday morning from tuberculosis, after four years illness. He taught school for a number of years. He would have been 62 years old next month. He is survived by the widow and two children, Mrs. Geo. Fuller, Jr., of Butler and Wm. D. Eakright of New York City. The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon from the U. B. Church at Butler, with burial in Woodlawn cemetery at Auburn.

MRS. H. L. DUNKLE PASSES AT HAMILTON

Mrs. Emma Dunkle, 55, of Waterloo, died at her summer home at Hamilton Lake Monday afternoon at 8 o'clock of heart disease. She formerly resided in Fort Wayne. Mrs. Dunkle was a member of the Miriam White Shrine and Waterloo chapter of the Order of Eastern Star. Surviving are her husband, Hiram L. Dunkle.

WITTENBERG BROTHERHOOD HERE LAST WEEK

The Christian Church entertained the Wittenberg Brotherhood at their August meeting last Wednesday evening. Rev. J. O. Rose had charge of the devotions.

The program consisted of a piano solo by Clare Elm; vocal solo, Joe Woodcox; readings Mrs. Thelma, Bialock; vocal solos, Miss Doris Beams and a men's trio.

The DeKalb county men's chorus of the Churches of Christ sang. Luther Knisley and Jerry Barbar, two eighty year old members, sang "Whispering Hope," accompanied by the men of the chorus.

The meeting was then turned over to the speaker, E. L. Turner, DeKalb county highway superintendent. He talked of his experience as a highway superintendent. He said DeKalb county has some of the best roads in the state and the state some of the best in the union. He declared that the cost of building and maintaining roads has been decreasing in recent years.

Four men then joined the brotherhood, Charles Hamble, Ruben Koch, F. E. Johnson and Leon Kees. The men's chorus sang the concluding number and Rev. J. N. Scholes dismissed the meeting with prayer.

The men then retired to the basement to a wonderful supper, served by the Ladies Aid of the church.

TOWN BOARD MAKES TAX RATE FOR 1932

The attention of St. Joe residents is called to the proposed tax levy as made by the town board, and which as the notice says, will be discussed and passed at their next meeting on September 6th. This year the valuation of St. Joe property has been lowered a total of $50,000, leaving a net taxable property of $306,700. With this loss of property it was found necessary to raise the light rate from 23c to 30c on the hundred dollars, and take off 7c on the road tax, leaving it 10c on the hundred, and the total rate of 50c on the hundred dollars as last year.

By comparison of the levies it will be discovered that the board has lowered the street levy 20c in the last two years, and that this fund is still sufficient to keep our streets in A-1 condition. The light rate each year is sufficient only to take care of the actual consumption of current, based on the yearly contract, and the corporation fund is to take care of salaries, and expense of administration.

Mrs. Foster Gee, three children, Walter, Gerald and Kathaleen and Walter Cook were Fort Wayne shoppers Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Zimmerman of Grant, Mich., were Friday evening supper guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Armstrong.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. F. Abel and Mr. and Mrs. Laney Gee went to Waterloo Wednesday afternoon and called at the H. L. Dunkle home.

The Misses Lucille and Marjorie Gee, Carroll and Katherine Miller of Fort Wayne are spending the week with their grandmother, Mrs. Flora Gee.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hadsell, and baby of Portland are here for the week, spending their vacation with Mrs. Inez Hadsell. They all spent Wednesday at Lagrange with relatives.

See the photo display in News office window. We can supply you with films, have them developed and give you an enlargement of any one of the pictures you wish.

The Monroe family will hold their thirteenth annual reunion at Eckhart Park, Auburn on Sunday, September 4. Officers are, Mrs. Diadem Bone, president and D. R. Monroe, secretary and treasurer.

Mrs. Howard Love of Milford and Mrs. Coe Haver of Kimmell were Tuesday guests in the L. D. Young home. Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Young and son of Deshler were from Sunday until Tuesday guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Reade Nelson, Mrs. Frances Nelson and daughter, Ruth and granddaughter, Wanda of Antwerp were supper guests Tuesday with Mrs. Flora Gee, celebrating Mrs. Nelson's 74th birthday.

The care of the B. & O. pumping station has been taken from Floyd Ridgway, as section foreman, and given to L. D. Young, as station agent, and of course, without extra pay. His duties began Tuesday. This will require about two hours daily.

Persons having glass cans to spare this season, may do well to loan them to the Boy Scouts here, as they are now in need of same. A record will be kept and same will be returned to owners when emptied. The Scouts are also wanting vegetables of all kinds for canning and drying. Notify Joe Woodcox or Mark Williams.

People forget that space in a newspaper is all it has to sell, and is the same to us as groceries on the shelf is to the proprietor or hardware or furniture or paint is to the merchant.

Mr. and Mrs. Laney Gee, accompanied by their guests, Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Zimmerman and son, Lya, of Grant, Mich., drove to Union City, Ind., last Thursday and visited Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Adelsperger and family and Mrs. Hettie Zimmerman. They called on Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hadsell enroute.

Friday they were at Butler, Edgerton, Hicksville and St. Joe vicinity. Saturday morning early they drove to Grant, Mich., remaining until Monday when the Gees returned home. A family dinner was given Sunday by Mr. and Mrs. Zimmerman in honor of the Gees and in the afternoon three car loads went sightseeing, the chief points of interest being the Hardy and Croton Dams in Newaygo County and an observation derrick on the highest point in Kent County, being over 1,000 feet above sea level.

In Trinidad recently, a bearded Spanish prophet came down from his cave in the mountains to announce to the villagers that within six months the world would come to an end.

There have been such prophets before. In fact, there are not a few in America today. But they are all wrong.

What do you think? How are you acting? Are you waiting with folded hands for the end? Or do you figure that this old earth is going to keep right on rolling for awhile, and that a growing savings account in a good bank will be mighty useful in the years ahead?

America is going to belong to the people who believe in the future, and in themselves.

CHAPTER X—Continued

She moved away from him, until she was leaning against the end of her bed, breathing quickly, a hand pressed against her breast to still the beating of her heart. For a time she was silent, then:

"Jim," she said, and had to bite her lip to steady it. "Jim, what of your schemes for revenge against my father? Against Gresham's?"

His answer was a short laugh.

"They are gone . . . forgotten . . ."

he said.

The fear in her eyes lifted slightly. "Is that true?" she asked, eagerly.

"True that you no longer care for revenge? Jim, is this love of yours so real and true, that it has had the power to cast the hate from your heart?"

"There is nothing in my heart to-night except the madness of my love for you. . . . I've been fighting it all day, Lucy. . . . Trying to gather strength against it. But it has beaten me. You have worked your woman-magic upon me, and won. . . . To-night, there is only you in all the world for me. . . ."

She looked at him with very serious eyes.

"That is not love, Jim. That is something. . . . Oh! something far less pretty. . . . Tonight, you say. But what of tomorrow?"

"I am not thinking of tomorrow. I am thinking of you. . . ."

he answered, and came nearer to her, his face tense with the strength of his feeling.

She fended him off with a little gesture of the hand which he did not want to obey, but nevertheless did.

"Don't play the fool with me, Lucy," he said again, in a low voice. "I tell you I can't stand it. . . . You have given me your lips. . . . Let me hold you in my arms. . . . I want these things again. I tell you, I want them again. . . ."

"Yes, Jim," she said clearly. "When you love me, truly. When you come to me with something more than madness in your heart. . . . When you can tell me that love has cast out revenge and hate. . . ."

"I tell you I'm willing to give up everything I've ever thought of, or schemed for! Just for your love, Lucy!" he cried, coming nearer still. Looking up, she saw that his eyes were dangerous, but she still fended him off with an upraised hand.

"You are offering to give up your schemes for my love. To barter your revenge for it. To sell your hate for it. Is the madness that is in your heart, that is making you say that you do not care for what happens to your schemes, if only you can have my love. . . . But when this madness is passed. . . . What then, Jim? Will the revenge be really gone?"

"I am willing to swear that I'll never do another thing against you or yours, Lucy. . . . Don't torture me, darling. . . . Have mercy on a poor devil who's crazy for you. . . ."

"That is a bargain I cannot make, Jim," she said quietly. "And if you were not so crazed for me, you would not ask me to make it."

"You shan't turn me down now!" he cried out suddenly; and caught her shoulders with a strength that was painful. "Lucy! I love you so. . . . Don't you understand? And you have made me love you. Deliberately made me. . . . Haven't you done everything in your power to make me confess it? Haven't you tried everything you knew to make me succumb to the magic of you? Haven't you tempted me with the knowledge of your love for me? His eyes were blazing down into hers; his hands were trembling upon her shoulders.

"No, Jim," she said, meeting his eyes squarely. "I have tried to make love wipe the revenge from your heart. . . . Tried to make it seem a strength, not a weakness. Tried to make it come to you, not as a surrender, but as a conquest. . . . But I have only succeeded in arousing this. . . . this. . . . madness. . . ."

Her voice faltered slightly, and there was a sad bitterness in her words. He caught her to him.

"But I swear I'll never do another thing against you, Lucy. . . . I'll give up Linforth. . . . Do anything you say. . . ."

His words stumbled out desperately, anxious of losing her in his voice. She struggled and freed herself.

"You are asking me to make a bargain that shames me, Jim," she said, shakily. "Do you think that I would use my love for you like that? To lure you into a promise that you will change merely your plans, when what I have been praying is that my love might change your heart? Jim, I don't believe that I have deserved this soond cruelty at your hands. . . ."

She seemed near to tears then, but no tears fell. Lee was beside himself. Utterly baffled by her; torn to shreds with a passion for her that was giving him no peace. . . . He caught her in his arms again; was pleading, angry, violent. . . . But she would not weaken. He flung her away from him.

"You say you love me!" he cried. "put how can that be true when you can deny me so easily?"

She faced him, pale with the strain of it all.

"If you could see into my heart, Jim, you would not speak of this being . . . easy to me. . . ."

She turned away, swallowed hard to keep the tears from falling.

He was silent for some time; then, with a change of tone: "Well, what now?" he asked, drawing a breath and passing an unsteady hand over his hair. . . . "What now, Lucy?"

She faced him again.

"I said just now that there was only one person who could make me leave you, Jim," she said as smoothly as she could. "Well, you've done it. I'm going to leave you."

She half expected a renewal of his protestations of love. But he only stood quite still for a moment; then said:

"When?"

"Tomorrow. I'd go tonight, if it were not too late. . . ."

Her voice shook away to nothing.

"Very well," he said. He turned and went toward his room.

She followed him and, as he went through the doorway he saw that her hand went quickly to the key. He stopped and faced her, his eyes blazing again.

"Don't lock me out," he said furiously. "If you do, I'll smash the door down. . . ."

She looked at him, sharply.

"And if I don't?" she asked, slowly.

"I'll keep to my side of it. . . ."

For a moment the look between them held, then:

"Very well," she said, briefly, and taking the key from the lock, she held it out to him. He took it; held it a moment so tight that the knuckles of his hand stood out white; then shut the door sharply, leaving her standing there. . . .

It seemed to Lucy that it was a stranger who faced her across the breakfast table next morning; a stranger who wore the outward aspect of her husband, but who made her think of a volcano; quiet, superficially, raging within. She knew a pang of sharpest fear as she looked at him. She had hoped that during the night he might have thought things out, and that peace might have come to his revenge-driven spirit. But this morning he was like a man possessed. She did not quite know how she arrived at that; he was perfectly quiet. Too quiet; perhaps that was it. His actions were slow and measured, and yet she felt that there was a turbulence underlying the smallest movement of his hand, that was all the

Few Corpulent Bad Men in Life or Literature

Doctors say that the man of middle age and beyond who is overweight has a better chance to live out the year than the man who has too much poundage. Doctors look askance at the individual of large girth and excess weight. His days are likely to be fewer in number than are those of the skinny man with a natural site for a belt.

A medical officer at a Japanese prison has been studying the physical aspects of his charges and he gives his approval to fat men. They are not lawbreakers or if they are they avoid the expected results of a lawless life. They do not go to prison.

Wilkie Collins apparently did not know that fat men are not criminals.

Fighting Locust Plague

In countries where visitations from locust hordes are to be feared, research bureaus have been set up, and it is now possible by various methods to keep a certain check on them. time threatening to break out. He did not speak, but he looked at Lee with the time, and she felt that underlying something in his eyes too. She was terribly worried; and felt responsible. Yet what had she done last night that she would not do again, given the same circumstances? How could she use her love for him as a bribe to make him relinquish his hate of Gresham's? And even if he should relinquish all active manifestations of that hate in order to gain her love, the hate itself would still remain. She could not have done otherwise; could not have used his love in such a way; and was hurt to the deep of her heart that he should have asked it of her.

She left shortly after ten, and he said no single word of farewell. But just as she was going out of the room, he said, in a tone she had never heard from him before:

"I don't know what may happen now. . . . But you will be responsible for it, whatever it may be. . . . Do you understand me?"

She raised a hand to her lips, to steady them, but could not speak, and in silence, left him.

CHAPTER XI

Lee's Moment of Triumph

After Lucy had gone, Lee stood for a time quite still, his hands deep into his pockets, his eyes dark and stormy. A call to the telephone aroused him and when he answered it, he found that it was from the inquiry agents he had sent out to the mystery of Brady's cottage.

He was asked to go round to the office at once, as the man who had been watching the place, had come back with an interesting story. He went immediately, and the story proved interesting indeed.

As a result of it, and when he had mastered all the details of it, Lee went out to Gresham's, and without waiting for anyone's leave, went straight up to Ames' office. There he found Ames, seated at his desk, and Macklin sitting by him, both evidently talking earnestly.

Lee shut the door and planted himself with his back to it, and the two men at the desk looked up sharply. Macklin half rose, uttering an exclamation, but sank back into his chair again, as Ames motioned him to keep still.

"What do you want, Warrington?" asked Ames quietly.

"I'll tell you," answered Jim, just as quietly, but with that turmoil Lucy had sensed beneath the quietness. "Yesterday, Macklin came to you with a story. Today, I have brought you one."

"I do not wish to hear anything from you, Warrington," said Ames.

"But you are going to hear it none the less," retorted Jim. As he spoke, his hand found the key and turned it in the lock. Macklin moved up again at that, but Ames remained still and perfectly cool. Lee found himself admiring his enemy for that coolness. Ames knew exactly how much Lee hated him. But he did not turn a hair.

"Does it strike you that Mr. Macklin is not altogether easy at seeing me here?" went on Lee, coming nearer as he spoke.

Ames shot a quick look at Macklin; was silent a moment, then said:

"Well, what have you to tell me, Warrington?"

"Has something in Mr. Macklin's face made you think that perhaps you had better hear it?" countered Jim with a sneer.

Ames made no answer. But he waited.

Jim launched his story.

"At precisely twenty-six minutes past eleven last night, Macklin went to the big elm that has been struck by lightning, down by Brady's cottage, and looked for something in a big, rotten hole down by its roots. He found what he was looking for; a note. The damage the tree had suffered had not touched it. He spread it out and by the very small glimmer of a pocket torch, he read what was written in it. What he read, made him go into the coze and sit, hidden by the darkness, on the fallen trunk of a tree. At precisely twelve o'clock—and he looked at his watch to be sure that it was twelve o'clock—he let himself in with the key, which he found hanging in the ivy over the door. He waited five minutes, and then he was joined by another man." Macklin suddenly started to his feet, crying out:

"Don't listen to him! Don't listen to him! He's lying! You can't believe the word of a thief. . . . Don't listen to him!"

"Sit down, Macklin," said Ames, in a sudden tone of command. "If these are lies that he is telling, you need fear nothing. His story will not be accepted without test. . . . Go on, Warrington."

Jim broke his story to say:

"My name is Lee, please, Ames."

For a moment their eyes met. Then Ames said:

"Very well, Lee. Will you continue?"

"This other man," said Jim, "was very tall, very big altogether. In fact, just the build to make it easy for anyone to mistake him, for any other very big man. Myself, for instance. A clerk, attacked by this man, might very easily think that I had attacked him. . . . Doesn't that describe the friend you met at Brady's cottage last night, Macklin?" The question came on a sharp, merciless note that made Macklin suddenly clench his hands in an effort to keep his taut nerves from betraying him.

"But perhaps this big man is no real friend of Macklin's," Lee went on. "Perhaps Macklin only used him, for some purpose, and has found since that this man is not so easy as he seemed. Has that been it, Macklin?"

And having done your dirty work for you, does he now hold his knowledge over you, and make you pay for his silence? And has he been in the habit of leaving notes of appointment for you in the hollow of that tree? And have you been in the habit of interviewing him in the cottage? And leaving your hush-money under the loose board in the floor, on the left-hand side of the fireplace in the kitchen? Has that been the practice between you and this big man, who

The scene that followed was one that Ames never afterwards forgot. Jim's mighty, towering figure; his blazing eyes; that great flat of his that held Macklin, small, weak, terrified, helpless; dangling idly, an inch or two from the floor, all made Ames feel that he had suddenly been jarred sheer out of life as he knew it. Into a scene that was incredible, utterly unreal. Certainly Macklin had a look of having suddenly shrunk to a thing of sawdust. His small rat-like eyes were rolling wildly; his thin lips were trembling, and he was blubbering out inarticulate sounds. His normally sleek hair was plastered in damp strands over his forehead, and his hands were clawing feebly in the air and managing to grasp nothing. It was the wrath of a giant against a pigmy, and Ames knew suddenly that the wrath of the giant was justified.

All his perfectly genuine belief in the guilt of Lee was shattered by the behavior of Macklin, and he realized at last that a ghastly injustice had been done and that Lee had paid the terrible price of it. Macklin was making the truth more and more obvious with every passing minute. His fear; his cringing; the fiendish malevolence of his terror-stricken eyes, were signs that were easy enough to read. Shocked to the soul, by the sudden realization of the truth, Ames sat at his desk trying for a moment to take things in and finding it difficult. . . . Macklin guilty. . . . Lee innocent. . . . Then Lucy had been right, after all, in her distrust of the man. . . . And he had been so sure that no evidence had been overlooked. . . . He had done everything to ensure a fair trial for Lee. . . . But here was the truth. . . . This was evidence beyond dispute. . . . His mind cleared after a moment and he realized that this that was going on before him, was not only the truth, but might easily be dangerous, and lead to things worse than anything that had yet happened. Lee was a man in whom the spirit of revenge had been storing up energy through three terrible years. . . . His wrath now was like the breaking forth of a volcano. . . . He was in no mood to care what he might do; in no mood to out any man upon his overwhelming temper. . . . He was shaking Macklin as if the wretched little man weighed no more than a kitten, and Macklin was crying out:

"For God's sake let me go! You're choking me! You dirty murderer! You're killing me. . . ."

Lesson for August 21.

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 23.

GOLDEN TEXT—And the Lord spake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend.—Exodus 23:11.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Tent of Meeting.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Tent of Meeting.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Talking With God.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Becoming Aware of God.

I. The Divine Command to Possess the Land (vv. 1-6).

1. The abiding purpose (v. 1). They were to go up and possess the land despite the fact that the cult-worship had broken the bond between them and their God. God spoke of them as the people whom Moses brought up out of Egypt, not as his own people. They had not shown any true penitence for their awful sin. Therefore God could not claim them as his own.

2. Divine aid promised (v. 2). Though their sins made it impossible for God to go with them, still he agrees to help them by sending an angel before them to drive out their enemies.

3. The threatened withdrawal of the divine presence (vv. 3, 5). God said, "I will not go up in the midst of thee, for thou art a stiff-necked people, lest I consume thee in the way." The presence of God in the midst of a sinning and impudent people would mean death unto them. The mercy of God is often strikingly shown by his withdrawal from his people.

4. The effect upon the people (vv. 4, 6).

a. "When the people heard these evil tidings they mourned." They knew that no angel could make up for the great loss of the personal presence of God. They called it "evil tidings." Surely no tidings are so evil as those which tell of the withdrawal of the divine presence.

b. They stripped themselves of their ornaments, showing that the articles which indicated gladness and joy could not be consistently worn when God had departed. We must be stripped of all that pertains to self and carnal pleasures if we would be clothed with the divine blessing.

II. The Tent of Meeting (vv. 7-11).

1. It was pitched outside of the camp (v. 7). As a token of the severed fellowship, the symbol of God's dwelling place, the tent of meeting was placed without the camp.

2. Moses in communion with God (vv. 8-10). Because Moses had not transgressed God's law, he still had fellowship with God. The visible sign to the people that God honored Moses was the descent of the "cloudy pillar" as Moses entered the tent of meeting.

3. Moses the friend of God (v. 11). This is one of the most beautiful expressions of personal fellowship to be found in all the Bible, if not in all literature. Friendship implies mutual confidence and sympathy, a disposition to share each other's secrets.

4. Joshua at home in the Tabernacle (v. 11). Joshua was not involved in the rebellion of the people. Because of his fidelity and in recognition of his unbroken fellowship, he was privileged to abide in the tent.

III. Moses' Prayer (vv. 12-23).

Moses' mind was somewhat perplexed, therefore he came to the Lord for the solution of his problem. God had said that he would send an angel to carry out his covenant obligation concerning the people in the possession of the land. Moses desired fuller knowledge of this angel so that he might act intelligently with reference to the matter. He asked for three things—

1. Fuller knowledge (vv. 12-14). In order to lead the people, he needed to know more fully his God. Intelligent and acceptable service is only possible as one knows God. God graciously responded to this request. "My presence shall go with thee, and I will give thee rest."

2. "If thy presence go not with me, carry us up thence" (vv. 15-17). Moses was convinced that no substitute could take God's place even though that one were an angel. He argued that it would be better to perish in the wilderness than attempt to go into Canaan without God. God's presence today is necessary in order to convince the world that he has called us.

3. "Show me thy glory" (vv. 18-23). Moses wanted a new vision of God for his new task. To this request God responded by giving assurance that he would make his goodness to pass by Moses. God's supreme glory is his goodness.

SOME WISE SAYINGS

Where pride abides deceit derides.

Prayer and self-sufficiency never join hands.

The Christian life is not camping, but journeying.

Any man who steps out to do a real and definite work for God will be opposed—the devil will see to that.

Gardening Gossip

Correspondent writes: "A few more tulips came up today—thanks, to Fido."

The home garden is a place to cultivate patience," says a nature writer. Personally we never had much success with that crop.

Compliment

"I wish I had come to this hotel a month ago."

"Ah, you flatter my place."

"What I mean is that I would rather have eaten these eggs than than now."

Down to Bedrock

"How are things over in Podunk?"

"Well," drawled the native, "if the old woman who lived in a shoe were to come and hunt for a home, she might find one—but it wouldn't have any floor in it."

POTOMAC RIVER IN HISTORY

Canoeing on the Potomac River.

(Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)—WNU Service.

W HILE Washington has been host to many thousands of visitors during the celebration of the George Washington bicentennial, the historic Potomac river, gateway to the National Capital from the sea, also has enjoyed the spotlight.

Interest in the Potomac is on the march instantly one realizes that it is the river of Washington; of Washington the man, the greatest figure of our national history, and of Washington the city, the capital of the nation, the focus of our national administration, and the city of our history in the making.

And our interest is accelerated as we realize that the old river presents other great names of celebrities who lived on the plantations along its shores: the Lords Baltimore, who planted the first settlement of Maryland, near the river's mouth; the Calverts, the Lees, the Carters, the Hansons, the Stones, the Fitzhughs, the Masons, the Mercers and the Fairfaxes.

There seem to be several Potomacs. There is fresh-water and there is tidewater Potomac. The former is all that water coming down from the mountains and over the falls above Washington city. That river is soon lost in the brine of tidewater Potomac, which extends from the point of mingling to the mouth of the river, at Chesapeake bay. Here strong tides rise and fall, sometimes three feet above the wharves of Washington. Here, too, the water is briny. It is so impregnated with the salt of the sea that, even at the head of tidewater, steamer captains dare not introduce it into the boilers of their ships. This briny reach is really not a river; it is an arm of the Chesapeake.

Then there is the surface Potomac and a secret river hidden in its depths. The surface waters express themselves in broad reaches between banks of engaging loveliness. They vary in width from one to seven miles. The hidden river is often only a few hundred feet wide, and unseen it serpentine its way back and forth from one shore to the other in a way that tenses and often wrecks the inexperienced mariner. It is called "the channel." Up it ocean-going vessels of considerable size come to the docks of Washington city.

How to See the River.

It is in Tidewater Potomac that one finds the river of the greater interest, the Potomac of history, of the landings, of the old plantations, of the celebrities who have made it one of the most distinguished rivers in America.

Curiously, the better way to see this river is not to start where it appears to begin, and so float down on its currents to where it ends in merging with the bay; but rather to start where it ends and be carried up by its tides and by that interesting tide of its history which entered here, at its mouth, three hundred years ago.

The story of this trip up the broad reaches of Tidewater Potomac is actually a composite of many trips, by many kinds of land and water craft, but here, for brevity's sake, reduced to its simplest terms without the inconvenience of delays, whether of boat schedules or motor trails, with the disappointments of weather or of the many futile side trips which anyone must make in order to find out where are the points of genuine interest and how to reach them.

Approaching the mouth of the river, one speculates on such questions as: Who was the first white man who ever came into it, where did the river get its name, and where in it is the dividing line between Maryland and Virginia?

The last question troubled the dwellers on both shores for more than 250 years. Then, in 1877, a commission of arbitration finally placed the waters of the river wholly within the boundary of Maryland.

The name Potomac is Indian. The first explorers found a tribe of that name living on the river's shores; but one cannot be quite sure whether the tribe took its name from the river or the river took its name from the tribe. It is now generally accepted that Potomac is the Indian word for "Traders"; hence the Potomac river means the River of the Traders.

Who First Entered It?

Who was the first white man to enter the river is a question less easily answered. At one time a claim was set up, based on "a runic inscription" said to have been found below the falls, for "an Icelandic widow buried here in 1601." Rather more credence has been given to the claim that Spanish explorers, known to have come into the Chesapeake between 1585 and 1570, sailed up the Potomac as far as Occoquan. The contention is based largely on the appearance of the place named Azacan in the Spanish chronicles and its assumed identity with Occoquan.

There is better evidence that an English explorer may have been in the river before 1585, for its existence at least was known at that date, as revealed by a map published in London in that year, on which Tidewater Potomac, though unnamed, was sketched in with recognizable lines. But how did the map-maker get his sketch—at first hand, on a visit to the river, or at second hand, from description from the Indians?

Sailing into the mouth of the river, one is reminded of the first white man definitely known to have sailed into these waters. On the left, the south lip of the mouth of the Potomac, is Smiths Point, named for the original authenticated white pioneer here, the gallant explorer, Capt. John Smith.

Founding of Maryland.

A few years after Smith, in 1634, there came into the river two other ships, the Ark and the Dove, with Lord Baltimore's colonists to found Maryland, on the north side of the Potomac. Even now one can feel these pioneers' cautious apprehension in an unknown wilderness inhabited by savages. They did not at first trust themselves to the mainland; they sailed up the river for 81 miles, until they came to a small island, now called Blackstone Island, where an attacking enemy might at least be seen.

Here Lord Baltimore's brother, Leonard Calvert, left the Ark, and in the Dove and another boat, procured in Virginia, sailed up into the narrower reaches, where, at Piscataway, just opposite the hilly banks where later rose Mount Vernon, he found the Indian emperor, with whom he wished to discuss a site for his colony's capital.

Calvert found only Indians on the river. Their occasional towns were indicated by the clearings in the forests, where they raised their corn and tobacco. In one such town dwelt those Potomac Indians who gave their name to the river or perhaps took it from the river.

It is not known precisely what that imperial party said to Calvert, but obviously it was something so poisonous that the newcomer couldn't settle far enough from that Indian. He returned to his ships and sailed them into the last inlet on the northern side of the river, just ten miles above its mouth.

This beautiful body of water he called St. Marys River, and there he began to build his capital, which he called St. Marys City. Within 35 years St. Marys City was laid out with streets and a square, and in addition to its frame and log structures, it had more than 90 brick buildings, which included the statehouse, the governor's mansion, churches, public offices, private dwellings, and commercial buildings.

St. Marys Has Disappeared.

Today not one of the buildings of old St. Marys survives. The visitor finds grain and tobacco fields, a few green pastures, and a graveyard where the first Maryland lawmakers sat in the midst of the sprightly colonial life of their capital city.

Where the plow has turned over the soil, or where a well or cellar has been dug, a few bricks have come to the surface, the only physical vestige of the brick capital of 300 years ago. Those from Maryland's first statehouse have been used in building little Trinity church on a part of the site of the vanished city.

Westmoreland county, Virginia, on the Potomac, has the distinction of being rivaled by any other in America, for it was the birthplace of three Presidents of the United States—the first, the fourth and the fifth—George Washington, James Madison, and James Monroe.

Here, in their many ramifications, and over a period of more than 250 years, lived the great Carters, Lees and Washington families. Here, though few survive, were some of the finest mansions of colonial America. The distinction of social and intellectual life in Westmoreland before the Revolution earned it the title of Athens of Virginia.

Every ship tells its tale as it passes the Mount Vernon mansion with the eight slender columns, surrounded by its village of minor domestic buildings, high on the Virginia bank, for it is the home and last resting place of George Washington, his and our Mount Vernon.

LIFE'S LITTLE JESTS

REALLY SIMPLE

A look of recognition came over the diner's face as the newcomer entered the restaurant.

"Pardon me, sir," he said. "I think we met here a fortnight ago."

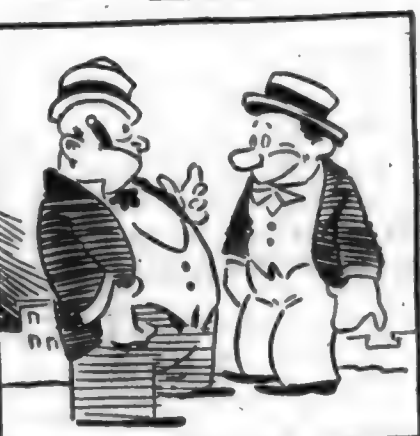

The newcomer shook his head. "Sorry," he replied politely enough, "but I do not know you."

"Maybe not—but I recognized your umbrella."

"That's impossible, sir," went on the newcomer. "A fortnight ago I hadn't an umbrella."

"No, but I had," came the other's retort.

POLITICAL WISDOM

Friend—You seem to talk quite freely for publication, without actually saying anything.

Politician—That's the art of it. A man should always avoid letting his views get mixed into his interviews.

Cupid's Victim?

Aunt Jane gasped as she listened to the confession of her soldier nephew.

"What!" she cried; "you were engaged to four girls at once?"

"Four of 'em," said the young man. "But, dearie, I went on, 'however can you explain such conduct?'"

"Dunno," replied the nephew with a hopeless shrug of his shoulders. "I expect old Cupid shot at me with a machine gun."

Too Many Deaths

Little Billy G. recently came rushing up to a neighbor with an excited air.

"Why, Billie, what on earth are you so excited about?" she asked.

"Gee! Mrs. L.," he replied, "our dog just died, and he was pretty old, and our old cat's died, and our old bird died, and I guess my dad is going to die soon because he's getting pretty old."

Ready for Service

Little Boy—How many kinds of milk are there?

Father—Why, there are condensed milk, evaporated milk, sweet milk, and sour milk. Why do you ask?

Boy—I'm going to draw a cow, and I want to know how many spigots to put on.

DIES IN SERIES

"My office boy has a bargain counter grandmother."

"What do you mean by that?"

"She always dies on the days that they have double-hungers at the baseball grounds."

Unannounced

"My son is going to Paris to finish his musical studies."

"A government grant?"

"No, public subscription of the neighbors."—Gutteres, Madrid.

Proof in His Success

The local reporter was interviewing a prosperous soap manufacturer.

"It is a well-known fact," he said, "that you made your fortune out of soap, Mr. Lather. Now, to what do you attribute your success?"

"To clean living, my friend—to clean living," was the reply.—Pearson's.

Promising Youth

"I hear you have been engaged to eight girls in the past few months."

"Yes, he's a very promising young man."

Always Rising

"So that distinguished looking gentleman in the tall hat is your lending citizen, eh? Has he received many degrees from the college?"

"Has he? Why he has received so many degrees we call him the 'Human Thermometer.'"

And in His Bare Feet

Lady—Your father thinks a lot of your new brother, doesn't he?

Bobbie—Yes, he gets up in the middle of the night to take the darned kid for a walk.

IN EARLY HISTORY OF MODERN WORLD

All Continents United, Is Theory.

The Pacific ocean resembles a great pond, while the Atlantic ocean resembles a great river. This is one of the interesting pieces of evidence brought forward to support the Wegener hypothesis—the theory that all the continents were once united into a single continent.

Dr. Harlow Shapley, famous Harvard astronomer, has suggested sinking a three-mile shaft into the earth as a means of testing the Wegener hypothesis.

The evidence for the theory is summed up by Edwin Tenny Brewster in his interesting book, "This Puzzling Planet."

"Contrast the Atlantic ocean with the Pacific," he writes. "There are marked and curious differences between the two, though these are a good deal obscured by our ordinary maps and are best to be looked for on a globe."

"The Pacific is a round basin, a sort of gigantic pond, but the Atlantic is a sort of gigantic river that winds from the top of the earth to the bottom, always of about the same width."

"In fact," Brewster continues, "it is better for the shape of the coast on the two sides of the Atlantic one might well say that South America has cracked off from Africa, the eastern extension of Brazil once occupying the gulf of Guinea, the western end of the Sahara belonging to the Caribbean region, Greenland jammed up against the west coast of Norway and Newfoundland one of the British Isles."

"If one could push the two American continents eastward and a little north, so that Greenland lay against Canada on one side and Norway on the other, with Newfoundland and the British Isles pushed into the North sea, the fit would be surprising."

"There really is not a little reason for thinking that the uniform width of the Atlantic and the remarkable fit between its two sides is something more than accident. There is a good deal of evidence to show that during most of geologic time, and up to what for a geologist is rather a recent date, North and South America actually were parts of Europe-Asia-Africa but cracked loose and floated off."

The horse and the elephant are two good examples which support the theory of land bridges or an original united continent, David Dietz comments, in the New York World-Telegram. Fossil remains of the horse are found in certain rock layers slightly older in Europe.

"The fossil elephant appears first in Africa and later in North America. Brewster believes the evidence is better for the Wegener hypothesis. The coal points very much to this theory," he writes. "The coal of Pennsylvania, New England and Nova Scotia is of the same age as that of the British Isles, France, Germany and Spain, and is altogether very like it."

"Moreover, throughout these two coal districts, through the entire length of the Appalachian mountains on our side of the ocean and in Scandinavia on the other, the mountain ridges run northeast and southwest, as if they were all parts of the same system, and in various ways the rocks match surprisingly."

Human Side of Apes

Apes display several human passions. The gorilla will fly into a fearful rage. The orang is wonderfully affectionate to its young. Gibbons have a sense of humor. They delight in mischievous play and, being tall, will, when they have the chance, pull other monkey's tails as a great joke. Chimpanzees have a gift which dogs have never been known to display—they can see a picture of themselves as a picture. They will recognize their own portraits, or grow excited if shown a study of a bunch of bananas. Among the gifts or powers which man possesses and apes lack it is remarkable that man can weep, but apes cannot.

Altogether Out of It

"Does his wife still play second fiddle to that other woman?"

"She's not even in the orchestra."

Good manners consist, first, in not being fidgety or loud.

78.4% The University of Wisconsin conducted an extensive survey throughout the state to determine what departments of, and to what extent, country weekly newspapers were read. The investigation disclosed by a house-to-house canvass that advertising in these papers was read by 78.4% of the people in the homes, the papers entered. The figures by classes of readers were: for men on the farm 83.3%; for women on the farm 78.3%; for men in the towns 69.6%; for women in the towns 82.6%.

FOURTY-SECOND GATHERING FOR SECHLERS

The forty-second annual reunion of the Sechler family was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Baltz at Spencerville, Ind., August 14, at which there were about sixty of the "Sechler descendants."

After all had filled their stomachs "to the capacity," a short time was devoted to the history of the Sechler Reunion, presided by Frank Baltz, president. It was recalled, by the older people there, that the Sechler family had had thirteen different meetings at their homes on Thanksgiving Day, before they organized a reunion. Interesting experiences were recalled which happened at the reunions in the past 42 years; for instance, a few years ago at a reunion a cow ate the young lady's secretary book and the deeds of the family vanished.

The secretary report of 1931 was read and accepted. The reunion will be held next year at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Vern Monroe. The officers elected were: Agnes Monroe, president; Frank Baltz, vice president; Lucille Curie, secretary and Sam Mumaw, treasurer.

The program was in charge of Cora Curie. A "Diary of the Bible" was given by Lucille Curie. Rev. and Mrs. Fabianske spent the day with the folks and each gave a very interesting talk, after which, all present bowed their heads for a prayer, led by Rollie Moffet, in the memory of Henry Sechler, who passed away last fall. Billy Monroe sang "Springtime in the Rockies," which was followed by a solo by Jesse Adams. Betty and Everett Mavis played piano solos.

It was late in the afternoon when folks left for their homes, and everybody decided they had had a real good time.

The fight to lower the assessment on real estate, has practically been defeated, when the state tax board ordered a horizontal increase of 15 per cent in the assessed valuation of all land outside cities and towns in DeKalb county. Action was taken by the state board as a result of the refusal of the DeKalb county board of review to make the increase.

Similar increases were ordered in 22 other counties of the state. As in DeKalb county the orders were issued after the boards of review in these counties had failed to comply with the recommendations for increases issued recently by the state board. Other counties where similar increases were recommended by the state board had complied. Regardless of the orders, given, the fact remains, that the assessment is too high, and that a raise should not be made.

Willard Hurni has been bedfast for a few days with an attack of the flu.

BOY DIES FROM INJURIES RECEIVED IN BOXING

Wilson R. Adams, 21, of Brushy Prairie, on Road 20, near Lagrange, died at 5 A. M. Monday at the Dr. Harry Erwin hospital in Lagrange as a result of a blow on the abdomen while boxing and playing with companions at his home Friday evening.

"Accidental death by a blow on the abdomen," has been the verdict of County Coroner John P. Caton.

The boy was taken to the hospital Sunday evening when he became violently ill. An operation was performed at midnight in an effort to save his life. Dr. Erwin reported that the youth's intestines had been ruptured.

The boy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Will R. Adams, have asked county authorities and friends to withhold names of those who were in the fatal scuffle with their boy. The boy's father said that they had been "boxing only in fun."

The boy was born in Hicksville, O., February 25, 1911. Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock in Auburn at the home of an aunt, Mrs. L. H. White. Burial at the Auburn cemetery.

Surviving besides the parents are one sister, Virginia Adams at home; a grandmother, Mrs. Ella Adams, of Lagrange, and a grandfather, George Wilson of St. Joe. Mrs. Adams, the mother, will be remembered by St. Joe folk as Grace Fales, and the family has the sympathy of their St. Joe and Spencerville friends.

OBERHOLTZER REUNION

The thirty-fifth annual reunion of the Oberholtzer family was held at the home of Mrs. Matilda Oberholtzer, of near Harlan, on Sunday, August 21, 1932.

The program was opened by the welcome address followed by prayer by Rev. A. K. Mumma. Then came that part of the program in which every person present had a part, the basket dinner.

After the dinner and social hour the old officers were reelected, as follows: Wm. Oberholtzer, of Butler, president, and Gaylon Markle of Spencerville, secretary and treasurer. Games and contests then furnished amusement for all, prizes being awarded the winners. Following the contests the crowd was treated to ice cream to which every one did ample justice.

One hundred and fifty-six were present and at a late hour all departed hoping to meet together again next year.

Those present were: George Oberholtzer and son Ray of Angola; Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Oberholtzer of Three Rivers, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Knisely and family, Quincy, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. E. M. James, Coldwater, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Oberholtzer Delores Ginder and Jake Ginder all of Butler; Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Horn and daughter, Lucille, Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Bookmyer and son Ronald, Mr. and Mrs. Theo. ### NO CHARGES FILED AGAINST FARMER

McClellan Hart, a Melon Grower in Spencer Township, Admits Shooting Harley Mann

No steps have so far been taken by Harley Mann of near Pleasant Lake, to file charges against McClellan Hart of Spencer township, who fired a shotgun at him and Mrs. Edith Walter of Auburn, Sunday night.

Mr. Mann told the officers that he didn't know whether he would prosecute Hart or not. Hart admits doing the shooting, but he claims he does not understand why.

Hart, who is sixty-five years of age and a well respected farmer, has a patch of twelve acres of melons and he and his son, George were guarding the melons Sunday night. A large number of melons had been stolen on previous nights.

Mr. Mann was unable to cross the narrow Dills bridge because of an automobile approaching from the opposite direction. McClellan Hart accosted him and demanded to know what he was doing there. Mr. Mann responded that it was none of his business. Hart declared he was "going to look you over," ostensibly meaning to inspect Mr. Mann's car to see if it contained stolen melons.

Mr. Mann defied him and was proceeding when a charge of shot entered the rear window of the car. Mrs. Walter had seen Hart raise his shotgun and dodged, but part of the shot lodged in Mr. Mann's neck and right ear.

Mr. Mann drove on to Spencerville and had his wounds treated by Dr. Shook. His condition is not serious.

It was learned afterward that the car coming from the opposite direction and forced Mr. Mann to halt at the bridge was driven by Geo. Hart, Sheriff John P. Hoff went to see the Haris Monday and they told him their side of the story.—Star.

By action of the annual conference Monday, Rev. Harold was returned to the St. Joe M. P. Circuit for another year.

Harley Likes and family moved Monday from the Lawson property to the Covey property north of the railroad. Mr. Donahue moved Tuesday in the Lawson property, recently purchased.

Mrs. Viena Rude and two children attended the ninth Farner reunion held at Eckhart Park, Sunday. They spent a couple days last week in Butler visiting Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Miller and son. Mr. and Mrs. Earl Wyatt and Mrs. Mary Wilson, of Auburn spent Friday and Friday evening with the latter's daughter, Mrs. Chas. Morr, and family. Mrs. Sarah Widney and daughter, Ida, were Sunday dinner guests in the same home.

Allen and DeKalb counties placed first in enrollment of club boys, girls and leaders at the annual Northern Indiana District 4-H club camp which ended at Blackman's Lake, Saturday. Allen, 82; DeKalb, 82; Elkhart, 54; Whitley, 28; Steuben, 16; Lagrange, 11; Kosciusko, 10.

Dr. Crates S. Johnson, of Pittsburgh, enroute home from annual conference at Marion, last week, stopped to call on St. Joe friends Sunday, taking supper in the Dr. Price home. He went to Hicksville and on to Detroit to visit his daughter, Josephine, and her family, in whose home a son recently arrived.

The evening primrose seems to be coming into its own and is receiving much publicity throughout this section. The latest one being that owned by Henry Buesching at Fort Wayne, which has from 20 to 25 blossoms and opens during 7:30 and 8:30. No other one which blooms during the entire evening and is very fragrant.

Ed W. Hicks, prominent Auburn business man, died Thursday morning at his Lake Wawasee cottage of indigestion and heart trouble. He had taken his usual exercise and had eaten hearty when the attack came. Ray Dilgard and C. M. Brown and their wives were present for a few days' outing. Mr. Hicks was in business at Albion in 1902 and located at Auburn in 1910. Burial was made at Albion Saturday afternoon.

THE WORLD IS GOING TO KEEP RIGHT ON ROLLING

In Trinidad recently, a bearded Spanish prophet came down from his cave in the mountains to announce to the villagers that within six months the world would come to an end.

There have been such prophets before. In fact, there are not a few in America today. But they are all wrong.

What do you think? How are you acting? Are you waiting with folded hands for the end? Or do you figure that this old earth is going to keep right on rolling for awhile, and that a growing savings account in a good bank will be mighty useful in the years ahead?

America is going to belong to the people who believe in the future, and in themselves.

CHAPTER XI—Continued

"Killing's too good for scum like you, you treacherous little beast," answered Jim, a tone in his voice that suggested that the volcano had not really begun to show its full strength. A tone, too, that awoke Ames thoroughly out of his stunned surprise. His mind cleared, and he sat forward, alert for the next move whatever it might be. He made no effort to interfere in any active way. That, he realized, would be fatal. It would simply lead to a general scrap all round. He saw that his part now must be to keep a clear head, and see that Lee did Macklin no real, serious damage. Beyond that he must leave the settling of the score to Lee. And he saw just what a mighty big score it was.

What would come afterwards he couldn't tell. Perhaps it would be his turn to feel the strength of that mighty fist, and to look into the revengeful fire of those blazing eyes. . . . But that, if it should happen, was for hereafter. Now, his job plainly was to keep a cool head and a steady nerve and be ready for anything. So he sat still; outwardly calm; in reality, all keyed up and tensely watchful.

"Killing's too good for you, you little beast," Lee was saying again, and his free flat drew back menacingly. Macklin shrieked to Ames.

"Are you going to sit still and let me killed? He's lying! I don't know anything about the theft! Aren't you going to help me?"

"No," said Ames, and his voice fell with a curious, telling coldness into the fury of the scene. "I am not going to help you, Macklin. I can see that he is not lying. Your guilt is as clear to me now as if it were written in words on your forehead. Lee owes you a good deal. I'm going to let him pay it."

Lee's fist drew back further, and the menace of it became more and more acute. . . . Macklin saw that if he landed, he almost felt the smash of it on his flesh. . . . He suddenly gave out a piercing shriek, and again Ames' voice fell, cool and clear, through the fear and horror and fury.

"Don't hit him, Lee; he's too small." It was quietly said, but with a tone of authority that made Jim hesitate. That hesitation probably saved Macklin, if not his life, at least whatever claim he had to good looks. And it saved Jim from a good deal more. It gave him time to realize the difference in size between him and his enemy. It gave him time to realize what that difference might mean. It gave him time to remember that, no matter what his enemy had done to him, he might hit a fellow his own size, but not a little, cringing worm of a thing like Macklin. There could be no fighting this question out. To fight would be simply to kill. It would be as Macklin had called it—murder.

His fist, trembling with the desire to do its work, nevertheless fell to his side and his hold of Macklin relaxed.

"You needn't kick up such a row, Macklin. I'm not going to smash you. Not yet, at any rate. There's quite a lot for you to do first. Do you understand?" His voice was harsh and menacing. Ames nodded his agreement.

"I'm ready to take down anything that Macklin says, Lee," he said quietly. Jim turned towards him quickly, furiously.

"You mean to say, then?" he said roughly. "You realize that you were not so almighty infallible when you had me jailed?"

"Lee," said Ames, looking him full in the face, "I realize it." He drew a breath. "What can I say?" he added after a moment.

"I don't want you to say anything," returned Lee in the same rough way. "Your turn is coming next. I'm only waiting to clear my account with Macklin. Your turn's coming, all right, Ames."

"I am quite ready," answered Ames. Jim turned back to Macklin.

"Now then, you little beast—talk. . . . D'you understand? Talk. . . . He let go altogether of Macklin's coat, now, and the miserable man sank to the floor with a groan. Jim dragged him up again, threatening him with that terrible fist.

"I will. . . . I will. . . ." cried Macklin, sobbing now in his abject terror.

"You didn't mind letting me take your punishment for you. You watched that happen; made it happen, and remained as good as dead. . . . Now stand up, you—stand up, and take it yourself. . . . It's been a long time coming to you. . . . But that doesn't mean that it's going to overlook you forever. . . . Stand up and take it!"

Jim was thundering out the words, and Macklin shrank down again, crying over and over again: "I will. . . . Warrington, I will. . . . I will!"

"I'm ready," said Ames, placing a writing-pad before him and taking the top of a fountain pen. . . . "Talk Macklin."

Shaking, crying, tears running down his face, Macklin made his confession. He had found the wallet Jim had lost, and the idea to disgrace him had arisen out of that. He had paid half-witted Billy Brady to do the actual robbery for him. He had thought that this foolish creature would not have the wit to know what he had done, nor to place the blame where it was really due. But he had proved to be not nearly so lacking in intelligence, of a sort, as people had always thought. And he had been ruthlessly blackmailing Macklin in hiding the stolen notes from him, but by means of a letter left in the roots of the now stricken elm, the half-wit had always been able to make Macklin keep any appointment he chose to make. And although he could never find out where the money was hidden, he could always get what he wanted. Macklin was too much afraid of him to refuse him anything he asked. In a pause in the wretched story, Ames asked:

"What spite had you against Warrington that you should have done this to him?"

Macklin hesitated. The thought that he might make up some convincing lie even now and so make it seem that he really had had a serious grievance against Lee passed through his mind. But Ames said sternly:

"The truth, please, Macklin."

And the truth came. "He was getting on too fast. . . . Threatening to get in my way. . . . I meant to be manager and I saw that he meant to do me out of the job. . . . The whining voice said, and Ames faithfully wrote it all down. When the last word of the confession had been spoken, Ames handed the pen to Macklin.

"Your name, please, Macklin," he said, and with a hand that trembled so that the signature only just got written, Macklin signed the infamous story and collapsed into a heap on the floor.

His overwrought nerves had taken their revenge, and gone suddenly to pieces. That effectively put him out of reach of Jim's violence, for it was obvious that he was a case for a doctor now. He was lying on the floor, to all intents and purposes, dead. But Ames, going to him quickly, found that his heart was beating and that his breathing was tolerably even. He picked the little man up and sat him in his chair again.

"Ring the bell, and unlock the door," he said to Jim, and Jim obeyed. Less than twenty minutes later, a doctor had seen Macklin, brought him to life again, and had him taken to a hospital. Ames had given brief but sufficient explanations, and having seen the doctor off in charge of Macklin, came back to his office and faced Jim.

"Well?" he said, standing by the door and looking very straight at him. "It will be your turn next," said Jim, slowly.

"I'm prepared for that," answered Ames. "But, Lee may I say. . . . May I apologize. . . . Apologize! Good G—d, words are so inadequate! But listen, man, I wouldn't have let this happen for anything in the world. . . . If I had not honestly believed that there was a man who did that rotten thing. . . . I wouldn't have let it happen. . . . His coolness was deserting him now, and the words were falling unevenly from his lips. Lee stood straight and still. His face was unmoved save for the quiver of his lips as he said:

"For all that, it did happen. For all that, I lived three years in—Hell."

"I know there is nothing that one can say. . . . I'm bowled over by it. . . . I am, indeed. . . . That I should have allowed such a thing. . . . That I should have helped it to happen. . . . There's nothing I can say for myself, except that I acted in all good faith. . . ."

"That doesn't do much to undo those three years, does it, Ames?" said Jim, with a bitter sneer in the words. "No, My G—d, it's terrible! What can I do to make amends?"

"You can't do anything except the obvious things that are to be done to clear me in the eyes of the world. That is all you can do, and all that I'll ever ask of you. For the rest. . . . Well, I'm doing the rest, Ames. I'm doing the rest. Such amends as are to be made, will be made. You may rest assured of that. . . ."

"You are still bent on revenge?" "Still! It is a greater thing than ever it was. . . . Why, a whole three years of planning are only just beginning to bear fruit. . . . There was the cruellest sort of exultation in that Ames was suddenly afraid as he had not been during all Jim's fury. He was silent for a long moment, then: "If it would be the smallest satisfaction to you, Lee. . . . If it would work this thing off a bit. . . . You may take me out into the yard and smash me. . . . The offer was made very quietly and quite seriously. "I'll smash you all right," answered Jim. "But not that way. That way's too easy for one of my strength. As you said of Macklin just now. . . . You're too small. . . . But I'll smash you all right. I'm Linforth. Understand?"

He twisted away and slammed out of the room.

He remained in Newchester long enough to be sure that Macklin was out of danger, and that Ames had put things in train to have him exonerated in the eyes of the law and of the world in general. Then, with the memory of that last night with Lucy, of his own surrender to his passion for her, and the torment of her baffling resistance of him, lashing brain and heart and soul of him to a tempest of driving emotion, he returned to town and to Lucy.

She, he found, was at her father's; had been there since she had left Newchester. Tempest-driven, he went to find her there. He was shown into the library, the room where they had met on her party night. When she came into the room and looked up at him, speaking a quiet greeting, half diffident, as if she were not sure what had brought him, he found his heart knocking hard, and his eyes were averted at sight of her.

He returned her greeting without making any move nearer to her. His eyes, devouring her face, saw that she looked white and fagged. "Macklin has confessed," he said abruptly.

"I'm glad, Jim. Awfully glad," she answered warmly. "This is real proof!"

"Even your cousin, Oliver Ames, has been good enough to express himself convinced of my innocence," he said, his tone grew more and more earnest. "I always knew the truth must come out. . . . It's wonderful, Jim." She looked up at him a little wistfully, as if she were mutely asking him to take the blessings of justice, even though it had come late, and to let the old injustice be a thing of the past. But the expression of those smoldering eyes held out no hope.

"It was Billy Brady who knocked the clerk out—under orders from Macklin. Billy's chief madness is a passion for silver money. Every time he blackmailed money out of Macklin, he got it changed into silver and then buried it in the wood. He never seems to have gone back for it. They've found more than thirty little bags, and they're still looking. He's under restraint, of course, and will be for the rest of his life." He told her this story quite expressionlessly.

"I knew he wasn't safe," she said. "I'm glad they've got him; he really was a menace, wasn't he?" If she

Word "Grimace" Matter for Scholarly Dispute

"Grimace" is a word with which our scholars have loved to play. One of them derived it from grim. Menage claimed for it grimmer, a land surveyor. Thomson looked to the Italian grimmace, and if that be reliable, then it may come from the Spanish grimo, monkey, in Latin grimo, but it should not be forgotten that grimmers were formerly a company of artists whose duty was to carve the fantastic heads used in architecture, such as are frequently to be seen in our gargoyles, and Randle Cotgrave draws attention to this fact. But, in Old Saxon we have grima, a mask, whence hergrima, a war-mask, including the visor of a helmet that concealed the warrior's face.

Despite this explanation, modern scholars claim that its origin is unknown. Undoubtedly it came into our speech from the French, and the French trace it to the Spanish grima, an extraordinary position in a picture. Diets drew it from the Anglo-Saxon grima, a mask, a phantom, yet it may come from the Italian grimo, wrinkle.—Literary Digest.

What, No Whittlers? What has become of the old-time whittlers, and why has disappeared a half-century ago almost every man carried a good pocket knife and when he stopped on any occasion he took his knife from his pocket and began whittling. At that time many men carried a pocket stick of wood known as a whittling stick. It was some soft wood, soft pine and white walnut being favorite timbers for whittling. The early settlers greatly enjoyed whittling for pastime, and many of them were real artists with a pocket knife. It is now a lost art.—Milan Republican.

Mighty Volumes The silent influence of books is a mighty power in the world; and there is a joy in reading them known only to those who read them with desire and enthusiasm. Silent, passive, and harmless though they be, they yet are in action countless multitudes, and change the order of nations.—Gleanings.

Not the College Motto

The guard escorting a number of Temple University students on a tour of the Eastern "Pen" stopped to point out the coat-of-arms of Pennsylvania above one of the arches leading to the cell blocks.

"That was painted by one of the boys," he said, and after a pause, "the only thing wrong with it is that these three words—'Virtue, Liberty and Independence' seem a little out of place."—Philadelphia Record.

GIFTS FOR BUILDING THE TABERNACLE

GOLDEN TEXT—Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the first fruits of all thine increase.
LESSON TEXT—Exodus 25:4-26:7.
PRIMARY TOPIC—The Meeting Place That Love Built.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Meeting Place That Love Built.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Giving Our Best to God.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Giving in Church Life.

1. The Plan of the Tabernacle (Exod. 25-27).

It was a rectangular structure thirty cubits long, ten cubits wide and ten cubits high. It was divided into two rooms: the Holy Place, and the Holy of Holies. These rooms were separated by the veil. The tabernacle was within a court one hundred cubits long and fifty cubits wide. Within the court, before the door of the tabernacle, was situated the brazen altar; between the altar of sacrifice and the door was the laver; inside the Holy Place the candlestick and table of shewbread; directly in front of the veil the altar of incense which was closely connected with the brazen altar in the contact of fire and blood. In the Holy of Holies was found the Ark of the Covenant, the most sacred object of the entire tabernacle.

II. The Meaning of the Tabernacle (Exod. 28-30).

The tabernacle was the symbol of God's dwelling place. The bond of union affording a medium of communion was the priesthood. The priest was the mediator between God and the people. The tabernacle typified the incarnation of God in Christ (John 1:14). The furniture of the tabernacle, beginning with the brazen altar, symbolized the spiritual history of the worshiper, making clear the sinner's method of approach unto God. The position of the brazen altar at the door of the tabernacle indicated that no one could draw nigh unto God except by way of that altar. The question of sin must be settled before man dare approach God. The laver typifies the sanctification of the believer. Sanctification was effected by the washing at the laver, prefiguring the influences of God's Word. The candlestick with its central shaft and its extending branches indicated the unity and diversity of God's people. The table of shewbread, the table of the presence, symbolized the spiritual history of the worshiper, making clear the sinner's method of approach unto God. The position of the brazen altar at the door of the tabernacle indicated that no one could draw nigh unto God except by way of that altar. The dredges are the most powerful and largest on inland waters. They are 214 feet long, weigh 1,500 tons and were built at a cost of $452,000 each.

ROAD BUILDING FIRST AID TO IDLE

Emergency Relief Act Provides Highway Funds.

Washington.—The emergency relief and construction act recently signed by President Hoover insures some measure of early unemployment relief through road construction, declared T. H. Cutler, president of the American Road Builders' association, in discussing road building activities.

"While the $136,000,000 appropriation for highways is only a small part of the $2,122,000,000 relief measure, it is probable that road building will be the first work undertaken," stated Mr. Cutler. "Many states have plans ready so that a number of the projects can be begun immediately."

The highway funds provided in the total of $136,000,000 are: $120,000,000 for emergency construction on the federal aid highway system; $5,000,000 for national forest highways; $5,000,000 for improvements of national parks; $3,000,000 for national park roads; and $2,000,000 for roads through public lands.

States May Borrow.
In addition to the direct highway appropriation, $300,000,000 is made available for relief and work relief, including highway and street work. This money will be loaned to states, counties and cities by the Reconstruction Finance corporation on request of governors of states. Since highway and street work is a popular and effective method of providing immediate work relief, a considerable part of this money may be requested by municipalities and counties, Mr. Cutler believes.

"Only a beginning in meeting unemployment conditions can be made with the funds available," declared Mr. Cutler, "but such relief will be widely distributed throughout the country. The provision permitting cities to use the relief funds for street work, and the fact that the relief funds do not have to be matched with local money assures considerable municipal highway work. Restrictions as to the amount of federal participation per mile also have been removed."

Employment benefits will not be confined to the workers on the roads. It will be extended to those working in factories, plants and mines producing road equipment and materials and also on transportation lines conveying them to the construction sites. "Because no part of the emergency highway funds must be matched by an equal amount from the states, regular state funds are released for new projects. The emergency federal-aid money will be used in lieu of state money to match regular federal aid in a number of states. Additional new work will be created through the releasing of federal-aid allotments in states that lack the necessary state funds to cover regular federal-aid promptly."

The emergency highway appropriation will be distributed to the states in accordance with the regular federal-aid requirements on the basis of population, area and mileage of post roads.

The amount of money each state will receive, as computed for the congressional hearings, is as follows:

"As a result of the enactment of the relief bill, federal-aid participation in highway building is maintained on a par with 1931, and material and immediate assistance to the unemployed will be given," Mr. Cutler concluded.

Cuba Decorates Its Tile With National Heroes

Havana.—Spanish and Cuban heroes of history and fiction are being made to live again in a new medium as Cuba's rapidly developing industry, the manufacture of glazed tile, is perfected.

Builders in the New world, who for centuries turned to the old country for the tiles that are such an integral part of the intricate architecture of the Spanish Americas, now look to their own artisans. Eleven small factories in Havana are developing a guild of craftsmen.

The exploits of Christopher Columbus on his voyages of discovery to the New world form one of the most popular themes for portrayal by Cuban tile makers.

SPIES KEEP BUSY ACROSS SEAS

Fear and Distrust Cause of Wholesale Espionage.

Washington.—Although the United States abolished its cryptical bureau in Washington three years ago, doing away with the practice of spying into the secrets of foreign governments, there is every reason to believe that other countries are not so scrupulous about the secrets of Uncle Sam and that spies are swarming thicker than the silent wave of fear and distrust. Nations are afraid of war—afraid of being attacked—and are trying to be forewarned by being forewarned.

The beautiful Mail Harl, executed just outside the walls of Paris and dramatized in American movies, has the counterpart many times over at this moment in this country, in Europe, and in the Far East.

Mme. Todorja Majewska, one of the loveliest dancers in the theaters and cabarets of Poland, has just been sentenced to life imprisonment for espionage against her own country, and her two accomplices, a former army officer and another government official, were shot.

Mme. de Litzke, a spy in the employ of Poland, has just bought her own life back from Hungary by unearthing a plot against that country, her officer lover trying first to kill her, then blowing out his own brains when he discovered her true character. Mussolini recently fired an entire embassy staff in one of the principal capitals of Europe because a clever woman had succeeded in getting hold of the Italian code book and selling its contents to France and Yugoslavia.

Captain Nakamura, whose tragic death was the excuse of Japan's war against China, was, according to the Chinese, merely a dangerous spy masquerading under the guise of a harmless "scholar" engaged in the study of geography first hand in Chinese territory.

Mud of North Sea Used in Treatment of Sick

Wilhelmshaven.—Employment of mud from the bottom of the Jade bay of the North sea for the treatment of rheumatism, gout, lechias, neuralgia and kindred diseases, which was initiated in a modest way a few years ago, has proved so successful that the number of patients who seek relief is increasing. Scientists have established the presence in this mud of all the biologically important healing substances, such as carbonate of lime, sulphate of iron and soluble salts.

Halo Long Employed

There is evidence that aureoles or halos were in use in earliest times as an attribute to the deities. Aureoles have been found with the pictures of the gods on some of the coins of the Indian kings Kanishka, Huvishka and Yandeva, 50 B. C. to A. D. 41. They are also found in the depiction of Egyptian deities, from which their use spread to the Greeks and Romans.

YOU GET

YOU GET GOODYEAR QUALITY!

Why pay good money for any second-choice tire when
FIRST-CHOICE costs no more?

You don't have to take anybody's word for the fact that this tire's low priced. Here's what it costs, in big, black type.

You don't have to take anybody's word for the quality these prices buy. Look at the tire.
It's a genuine Goodyear. Built in the world's largest tire factories. Guaranteed for life. Full oversize. Bodied with Goodyear Supertwist Cord. Goodyear Speedway by name.

You bet this is a bargain. Goodyear never built a better tire at such prices as these—and millions of motorists know, Goodyear builds the best tires on the road.

Why buy any second-choice tire when FIRST-CHOICE sells at the same low price?

Boys Switch Homes; Mixed Up as Babies

Gladbach, Germany.—Heinrich Beuth, twelve, packed his clothing, left the home he has known since his birth, and went over to the home of Frau Marie Donk. Wilhelm Donk, also twelve, went through the same procedure and will live at the home of Frau Matilda Beuth.

The two boys, born on the same day twelve years ago in a maternity clinic here, were exchanged by their mothers after investigators, medical and scientific, and a court of law had upheld the claim of Frau Donk that the clinic had inadvertently exchanged the boys at birth.

Dated August 23, 1932.

O. K. SHULL, Trustee,
Concord Township.

Last year 110 cans of baby fish were received from the federal government for the Steuben county lakes, and this year but 17 cans has been received by the Chamber of Commerce at Angola.

The proposed tax levies of the taxing units are being watched with interest this year. In most cases the taxes are materially reduced by the slash in the assessment. DeKalb county will be $30,000 less.

Verbal notice has been served on a number of barbers in Kendallville who operate shops in the residential district, to the effect they must cease operations. In 1929 a city ordinance was passed prohibiting this form of business.

The R. H. C. met with Dora Wilder Tuesday afternoon, August 16. Eleven members and nine guests responded to the roll call by describing or displaying their wedding gowns. The club adjourned to meet in two weeks with Leona Mason. The hostess served sandwiches, celery, cake and ice cream with strawberries and ice tea.

BAND CONCERT DRAWS HUGE CROWD

A large crowd thronged the streets of Spencer, on last Thursday night to hear the News-Sentinel Band, under the direction of John VerWier, of the General Electric Band organization. People who had become convinced that the radio had depopularized the old fashioned band concert, were reminded that seeing is still a large part of believing and hearing.

Early in the evening the cars flocked in to get good parking space and by sundown the town was alive with automobiles. Adjacent streets were roped off to supply room for parking and the old town took on the appearance of the olden golden days of yesterday—days when people came to town to see neighbor Jones.

The News-Sentinel organization was composed of about 45 musicians and gave a program of one hour and a half in length.

Any band organization easily demonstrates the fact that any town can have a band if they have the ambition to maintain one. As long as you can remember Spencer, Concor, Coburntown and St. Joe communities, cooperatively have had people who have been interested in band music, and yet have that same interest, that they give of their time to keep alive an organization of this kind in this community.

REUNION OF THE CURIE FAMILY

An enjoyable gathering of the Curie family was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Beams at Spencer, Sunday, August 28. At the noon hour a bounteous pot-luck dinner was served which all enjoyed to the fullest extent.

During the afternoon much merriment was caused by the games and contests. Little Miss Nancy Skilling, of Baltimore, Md., entertained with several songs and little Miss Marjorie Hoffman, of Garrett rendered some pleasing dances.

It was decided at this time to establish a permanent organization of the Christian-Catherine Curie family. Mrs. Amanda Klopfenstein was elected president, and Doris Beams, secretary-treasurer for the ensuing year.

Those attending were: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Curie and daughters, Lucille, Grace, Mary Jane and Ruth, and son, Frank, Jr.; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Koch and sons Stanley and Joseph; Mrs. DeLora Curie; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Curie and children, Harold and Joan, all of St. Joe; Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Klopfenstein, of Grabbill; Mr. and Mrs. Perry Jump and daughter, June Elizabeth, of Woodburn; Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Skilling and granddaughter, Nancy Ann Skilling, of Baltimore, Md.; and niece, Marjorie Hoffman, of Garrett; Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Beams and daughters, Mary and Ann, of Detroit, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Beams and daughter, Doris and son, Ralph. Late in the day all departed to their homes desirous of meeting again in August, 1933.

MRS. SAMANTHA GILLINGHAM HAM ILL ONLY THREE DAYS

The death of Mrs. Samantha Gillingham, wife of Daniel Gillingham, a carpenter residing in Garrett, took place Saturday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock at Sacred Heart hospital.

Mrs. Gillingham, who was forty-nine years of age, took sick last Thursday and that night submitted to an operation at the hospital. Death was due to gall duct trouble. She was born January 5, 1883, at St. Joe and she and Mr. Gillingham were married August 3, 1900. All their five children are dead.

Surviving besides the husband are the father and stepmother, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel S. Kees, of St. Joe; one half-brother, George Kees of St. Joe; two step-brothers, Daniel Myers of St. Joe and Wm. Beam of Lakeville, Ind.; one sister, Mrs. Chas. Murphy of Concor, and a step-sister, Mrs. John Hart of Fort Wayne.

Mrs. Gillingham was a member of the Christian Church at St. Joe. She and Mr. Gillingham had lived in Garrett most of the time for the last twenty-three years.

The body was prepared at the Geo. W. Iler undertaking parlors and was removed Sunday to the father's home at St. Joe. The funeral was held there Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, daylight saving time, the Rev. J. O. Rose, of Angola, officiating. Interment was made in Riverside cemetery.

OBITUARY

Mary, daughter of Frederick and Susan Knisey, was born on the old homestead southeast of Spencer, Indiana, on April 14, 1849. When she was eleven years old the family moved to Spencer, Indiana. She had three brothers and five sisters.

At an early age she united with the Lutheran Church in Spencer, Indiana, and continued her membership there until she transferred it to the Lutheran Church in St. Joe, Indiana.

On January 17, 1872 she united in marriage with Wilson H. Sanders, who passed away on June 15, 1925. Mrs. Sanders passed away at her home in St. Joe on August 16, 1932. She leaves a step-son, Ellsworth Sanders of Montreat, California; three grandchildren, two sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth Thomas and Mrs. Caroline Smith of Evanston, Illinois; and nieces, nephews and cousins.

The body was held at the Kinsey funeral home until August 26, for the arrival of the son, Ellsworth, when the funeral was held from the home, conducted by Rev. A. K. Mumma, of Harlan, and assisted by the local pastor, Rev. A. H. Fabianske, with burial at Spencer, Indiana.

Thousands of people in 1929 were more than three-fourths of the way around to the goal they had set for themselves—financial independence. The financial upheaval caught them unprepared and they were out—much of the money they had variously invested.

Courage and persistence are required to regain, through saving, all the ground lost. Yet this is the only sure way. And to many the lessons of the past thirty months may have been worth much of what they cost.

After all, there are few investments which equal a steadily built savings account in a good bank. This bank invites you to build your reserves here.

HOME BUREAU

A jolly crowd of Concord Township Home Bureau ladies, was entertained at the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. John Engle at Auburn, August 19th. At the noon hour the large table in the dining room was spread with all the good things of the season.

At 1:30 the president called the meeting to order, 17 members responding to roll call by giving the place of their marriage and a description of their wedding gown. Household helps and short cuts in house work were well given by Mrs. Pluma Hamilton, this was followed by a reading by Miss Beatrice Woodcox. Mrs. Carrie Wade and Mrs. Arline Koch conducted a body contest. A round below the Theatre, on Wednesday also conducted "an effort" contest which proved to be very amusing.

Five guests were present, Mrs. C. R. Price, Mr. and Mrs. Hoyt Thomas, Miss Beatrice Woodcox, and Violet Baker. Late in the afternoon the meeting was adjourned. They will hold their September meeting with Mrs. Pearl Simanton.

WHAT IS JUSTICE?

It is not justice to overload or cruelly beat man's faithful servant, the horse. It is not justice to abandon or misuse man's loyal friend, the dog. It is not justice to cause or to be indifferent to any unnecessary suffering on the part of any living creature.

A CANNING KITCHEN THAT'S BEING PATRONIZED

Perhaps there is no institution in America today, that is endeavoring to take the drudgery out of canning, more than the modern canning kitchen, and St. Joe feels extremely proud of its canning kitchen, operated by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Guilford.

It is true that the season has been backward and slow, due to different causes, but the St. Joe Canning Kitchen is extremely busy now. Canning fruits and vegetables of all kinds is their daily program.

Mr. and Mrs. Guilford give their entire time and attention in packing your goods, and no other business is run in this connection.

They are experts in the canning business, Mr. Guilford being connected with the first custom cannery in DeKalb County some years ago, and he has been continually at this business all these years hence there is no guess work in his canning.

In most any line of business, a persons years of experience has much to do with their success and to is an indication that his service has been satisfactory to his patrons and this is as important in the canning business as any other.

With this canning factory closely supervised by the owners there is less chance or likelihood of the vegetables being mishandled, and being carefully marked, you are assured of your own goods in return and all goods are packed the same day brought to the factory.

All orders are packed with utmost care, whether you have one can or five hundred, and with their day and night service no orders remain in their kitchen more than the day it was brought in.

People from the Allen county territory served by the Community Progress, are coming to the St. Joe Canning Kitchen every week for service, and Mr. Guilford wishes for this paper to state to its readers that the corn is all hand cut, no cob, and full pack guaranteed. No flies about the kitchen insures a clean and sanitary product in return.

Mr. Guilford says: "Another of the attractive features for this year is the reduction in prices, which has come to us in the way of materials and we in turn give our customers this saving. After all, we are anxious that our customers be made to feel that we are trying to serve them, and we guarantee everything we pack for you, and when friends are made in this way, they are lasting friends and will return when in need of canning the next season."

Give the St. Joe Canning Kitchen a chance to prove all the statements made when you have canning to be done.

SCHOOL SAFETY CAMPAIGN STARTED FOR CHILDREN USING HIGHWAYS.

"Protect the children." That is the rallying cry in a special safety campaign launched by Secretary of State Frank Mayr, Jr., and Chief Grover C. Garrott of the Indiana state police to protect children as they go to and from school.

With the schools opening all over the state within the next week or two, the state police are asking co-operation of mayors, town boards, chiefs of police, sheriffs, town marshals, school officials, the safety division of the secretary of state's office, the state highway commission, trustees and school bus drivers and citizens generally in the movement.

All occupants of cars stopped by state police will be cautioned and urged to "watch out for the children, stop for school busses and observe school zones." This activity will be started in a general auto checkover to be held by state police in cooperation with local officers from September 10 to 17, inclusive. This caution will be continued, Chief Garrott said, as a regular part of the state police program.

As a special feature of their work to protect school children this year, the state police will on request check over all school busses for safety appliances. Chief Garrott is sending out a letter to all county school superintendents offering this service.

School bus drivers, safety patrols and citizens generally are being urged by Chief Garrott to get accurately the license numbers of persons violating the laws requiring automobiles to stop for school busses which have halted to take on or let off children. Warning cards again will be sent the chief announced, in less serious violations of this law. Assistance will be given local school and police authorities, where necessary, in prosecuting serious offenders. Bad road conditions which imperil school children will be reported by state police. Motor cycle escort will be provided for busses for limited periods where conditions get out of hand.

Chas. Thayer, of Hicksville was in town Tuesday.

STUDENTS LEFT FOR BLOOMINGTON

Eloise Bowman, of St. Joe is among the 185 Indiana University coeds who have been appointed junior advisers for girls who will enter the state university for the first time this fall.

The junior advisers have been appointed to aid the new coeds in matriculating in the university and to help each new student become better acquainted with her fellow students and the university in general. Each junior adviser has been assigned one or two new women students whom she will meet on their arrival in Bloomington this week and will act as adviser to them in all matters of academic and social character.

Miss Bowman went to Bloomington Tuesday to act in this capacity and will then return home the last of the week.

DuWayne Kinsey entered his second term and Virginia Gintner enters her third year's work. All the above young people made the trip together Tuesday.

CENTRAL STANDARD TIME NOW PREVAILS

Central Standard Time is now the vogue in St. Joe, changing last Saturday night, to conform with other towns.

The citizens were extremely courteous in their support of the Daylight Saving plan this year, and now that the fall season is here, they equally as obedient fall into line.

Many regret that a change is made at this time of year, but to conform to our surroundings, it is necessary.

SCHOOL OPENS WITH SPLENDID ATTENDANCE

The local school is reported as having a splendid enrollment for this year with the opening week, with a possibility of more scholars in a few weeks as is usually the case. To date we are able to report for the St. Joe consolidated school a total of 243 scholars, and divided as follows:

Grade 1	11
Grade 2	26
Grade 3	28
Grade 4	20
Grade 5	20
Grade 6	15
Grade 7	14
Grade 8	26
Grade 9	33
Grade 10	22
Grade 11	16
Grade 12	14
Total, all grades	243

Of this number there are pupils from Newville, Stafford, Wilkeson and Jackson townships. W. B. Cox, Principal, Social Studies.

R. Gordon Noffsinger, Science and English.

Helen Dittmars, Home Economist.

Priscilla Borthwick, Mathemat-Opal Poland, of North Manchester, Commercial.

C. A. Woodcox, Music.
Martha Maser, Grades 1-2.
Harriett Oberlin, Grades 3-4.
Cleota Morr, Grades 5-6.

CHILD HEALTH CONTEST

If you wish to enter your child in the "Child Health Contest" to be held during Fair Week on October 6th and 8th, send in its name and address between the dates of September 22nd and October 1st. The first forty children from the age of one to two, and the first forty from two to three years of age will be accepted. So send in your child's name at an early date. Miss Yarian, at the County Agent's Office will keep a record of letters sent. Mothers may write, phone (189) or apply in person.

Dr. Teal, assisted by Miss Gibbs, R. N., from the Indiana State Department of Health, Division of Child Hygiene, will make the Health Examination.

The points to be considered will be as follows:

1. Eyes and ears normal.
2. Teeth sound and well kept.
3. Nose and throat in healthy condition.
4. Weight considered correct for height and age. (N. B. Not judging by average weight alone.)
5. Eyes bright, cheeks rosy, muscles firm, posture erect.
6. Good habits of eating, sleeping, bathing, elimination and self control.

Ribbons will be given to children scoring the highest. An extra ribbon will be presented by the DeKalb County Red Cross Chapter to any Mother who has had her child immunized against Diphtheria or vaccinated for Smallpox protection.

AGE POLITICAL CORRUPTION? DOES PROHIBITION ENCOURAGE?

By Dr. Thomas N. Carver
If so, corrupt politicians might be expected to know it. They are generally credited with knowing exactly what they want and how to get it. If prohibition encourages political corruption, every corrupt politician would be for it.

What are the facts? Are notorious grafters for or against prohibition? With remarkable unanimity they are against it. Are corrupt political machines wet or dry? Without exception they are wet. Are the corrupt governments of our great cities wet or dry? They are all wet. They are elected by wet votes and they are kept in by wet votes and they are kept in by wet votes.

This is not saying that all wet politicians are corrupt. It is saying that all corrupt politicians are wet. There are many honest and sincere wets, in politics and out. They are in bad company. They should know that the success of their cause will play into the hands of the corrupt politician—that is, unless the corrupt politicians are so stupid as not to know on which side their bread is buttered.

TO RESURFACE NINE MILES OF DEKALB COUNTY ROAD

The county commissioners Tuesday awarded to Day & Son, of Hamilton, a contract for resurfacing the former Toledo-Chicago pike from Waterloo west to the Noble county line, a distance of nine miles.

The successful bidder will haul and spread the gravel, take care of the waste in the pit and furnish the insurance for 26.3 cents a cubic yard. It is estimated that 5,500 to 6,000 cubic yards of gravel will be required.

The county will furnish the material from the Wilson gravel pit a mile and a half west of Cornuna and from the Dillard pit a mile and a half northwest of Waterloo.

It is expected the work will be started within two weeks.

The Ladies Aid Society of the M. P. Church will meet Thursday afternoon with Mrs. DeLora Currie at 2 o'clock.

CAUGHT OFF THIRD BASE

Thousands of people in 1929 were more than three-fourths of the way around to the goal they had set for themselves—financial independence. The financial upheaval caught them unprepared and they were out—much of the money they had variously invested.

Courage and persistence are required to regain, through saving, all the ground lost. Yet this is the only sure way. And to many the lessons of the past thirty months may have been worth much of what they cost.

CHAPTER XI—Continued

Sir John was game enough, but his illness had pulled him down badly, and weeks of anxiety were visibly beginning to tell on him. He was beginning to look old, haggard, and there was a new touch of feebleness about him, that tore at Lucy's heart. She was pretty nearly distracted as one business disaster after another was reported to her. She did not know what to do and the only thing she could think of, shamed her through and through. . . . But, driven to desperation, she finally did it. She went one evening after dinner, to the flat, and as she had expected, found Jim at home. She still had her key, and let herself in, and was standing in the drawing room doorway, looking at him, before he had had time to realize that she was there. He rose rather quickly at sight of her and stood challenging her with his dark, burning eyes. She closed the door, and without coming further into the room, said quietly:

"Jim, if I give you the love you once asked for, will you stop your fight against Gresham?" It cost a world of pluck and resolution to say that, and the color came richly into her face as she spoke.

But he looked at her steadily, and all he said was:

"So Gresham's are beginning to go under?"

"No firm could stand the attack you are making against it, Jim," she answered.

"Why do you come to me about it? I warned you of what I meant to do."

"I know, and I did what I could."

"You . . . persuade me."

"It's my father, Jim. He has been ill. This is . . . breaking him up."

Her voice shook.

"What is that to me?" he asked harshly.

She hesitated slightly, then said:

"You once offered to . . . to give your revenge for . . . for . . ."

"Your love!" he broke in with a short laugh. "But you hung the bargain back into my face, if you remember."

"Why should you think that I would be willing to . . .?" She interrupted him.

"I have only myself to offer, Jim."

He stood for a little while still and silent. Then, the words coming very slowly: "If it were not for your father. . . ."

The color flashed up into her cheeks again.

"I'd sooner than say what I have said this evening."

He colored at that, too, and his eyes seemed to go yet darker.

"You are too late," he said, some emotion shaking his voice in spite of his efforts to control it. "I wanted your love once. But the bargain no longer has any attraction for me. . . . I warned you of this, he broke out with sudden fire. "I told you when you turned me down as if I were something that was loathsome to you . . . that whatever came after, you would be responsible for it. . . . Well, it's come, and you are shrinking. . . . But you can't turn me down and pick me up again, just whenever it suits you. I asked for your love once and you refused me. . . . Now I don't want it. . . . You have come to me too late. . . . He stopped, drawing a breath, and she saw that he was shaking slightly.

She turned away.

"I understand, Jim," she said, and left him. It seemed to her that humiliation could go very little deeper than the humiliation she felt now. . . .

CHAPTER XII

The Ashes of Revenge

It was clear now that Linforth were out to kill Gresham's; but Gresham's did not intend to be killed easily. There was no standing against the revengeful tactics Lee opposed to them, but they fought pluckily and well, and were not too stiff-necked to endeavor to come to terms before real ruin stared them in the face.

Thus it was that one very bleak day in midwinter, Lee received a formal note asking him to meet the head of Gresham's, with a view to discussing the situation.

"They are on their knees to me at last!" he thought, and triumph swept him till he felt almost physically giddy with it. He accepted the truce, and arranged a day for the head of Gresham's to call upon him.

When the day came, he was rather surprised to find Ames and Lucy with Sir John. But he eyed them both coldly, and betrayed no emotion whatever. With punctilious politeness he ushered them all into his study; triumph in his eyes, in his voice, in every least action of his hand.

Once settled, his visitors around a table, himself at his big desk, he looked at them slowly; insolently rather, one after the other. Sir John was thin, slightly stooped; an indefinable air of frailness had touched his handsome old face, and his hands had an invalid delicacy they had not had before. Lee's sense of triumph rose higher still. To this had he brought the man who had gone yachting when he was in danger of imprisonment. . . . Well, there was justice in that. His eyes went to Ames; smooth and sleekly groomed as ever, but showing the traces of worry very clearly, none the less. There was an anxious look in his eyes that had not been there before. . . . Lines beside the mouth, too. . . . Justice again! This was the man who would not listen to the truth. . . . Lucy next. . . . and at sight of her he felt that triumph must burst his heart, it swelled so high. . . . Pale, she was, and tired looking. . . . Her eyes were shadowed and seemed full of sorrow. . . . Triumph rose so high that it seemed to hurt. . . .

"Well, now," he said abruptly. "Your business?"

Sir John answered him.

"To throw ourselves on your mercy, Jim," he said frankly.

"Gresham's are finished, then?"

The old man shook his head.

"Not yet. But we cannot hold out much longer. Your resources are bigger than ours. . . . And you do not mind what you do. . . . We cannot fight such an opponent. . . . Jim, I have said all that I can, in an endeavor to make you understand my deep grief for what you have suffered. . . . Can't we come to some sort of terms? Is this sort of thing worth it in the long run? I know how bitterly you feel. . . . But is life long enough for this?"

He pleaded very sincerely, but Lee's face did not soften.

"My terms," he said through his teeth, "are quite easily stated. You can keep up the fight or you can—get out of business. . . . I should advise you to get out of business."

He was cruelly advised.

"Then you are thoroughly determined to ruin us?" said Sir John.

"Determined with a determination that it took three years of prison to build," answered Lee.

There was a silence. Then Ames took up the pleading for Gresham's.

He used every argument that he could think of, and he spoke eloquently and well. But it still left Lee unmoved. He only stated his terms again, and yet again.

Lucy stood silently by her father's chair; her eyes, wide and tragic in her pale face, were turned upon Jim all the time. But if she had any hope of seeing relenting there she was disappointed. Sir John rose presently and stood leaning on his stick.

"Then you must kill us if you will, Jim," he said. "We cannot stand out much longer."

Lee rose, too. Here was the very height of his triumph. Now was his whole debt paid. Here was his enemy asking for mercy and here was himself denying that mercy. Here was his triumph indeed!

Dead silence reigned while he stood looking at those three faces again. This was the crowning moment of his life. This was the moment for which he had planned and worked during the three most awful years of his life. Out of the torture of his body and soul had this moment sprung. . . . He had prayed for it; longed for it; and here it was. . . . Now he would taste the full flavor of the fruits of his revenge. . . .

He drew a breath; passionate, triumphant words clanking on his lips. But suddenly Lucy spoke:

"Goodbye, then, Jim."

Three words, scarcely audible; but they silenced the clamor on his own lips before he could get it spoken. All that he had been so ready to say, died in a tangle of unspoken triumph. And the very triumph itself came tumbling suddenly to his feet. He stood dazed by the suddenness of it. It was like the fall of a mighty edifice which he had built stone by stone with his own shame and agony. . . .

He stood looking round almost blankly now. . . . Feeling as if something cold had caught at his heart. . . . Where was the station, the glorious, savage joy of this supreme moment of his? Where was the triumph that had risen so awfully in his heart only a moment ago. . . . ?

They were gone. His victory seemed suddenly to have divided to nothing more splendid than this broken, rather frail-looking, old man. . . . And to this small, pale, tragic-eyed girl, who had said goodbye. . . .

He stood for a moment, fighting to bring back the rousing sense of triumph. But he failed; and the fruits of revenge were as ashes in his mouth. . . .

Against those three words of Lucy's, nothing counted.

"Goodbye, then, Jim. . . . Some magic in those words that he had not reckoned with. . . . Some destructive power in her pale face and sorrowful eyes, that he had not counted on. . . . Well, he had played his game out to its final throw, and it meant—just nothing. . . .

Quite suddenly, he dropped back into his chair, uttering a queer little smothered cry, stretched his arms out on the desk before him, and bowed his head on them. . . .

He was drawing great, deep breaths, that shook his shoulders, which was near, perhaps, as a man such as he was, could ever come to the blessed relief of tears. Lucy started toward him crying his name, but a gesture of his hand waved her off, even before his voice came to her, saying brokenly: "Leave me alone. . . . Leave me alone. . . ."

She stood hesitating, but

"Jim, I don't know what to say. . . . I don't believe it was true to you to do that dastardly thing to my girl. . . . I don't believe it. . . . It was a madness of revenge. . . . But my God! to think of her. . . . He stopped short and after a moment went on more quietly. . . . "What are we to do? What is there to be done?"

"Oh, I don't know! You can do as you like with me. . . . I'm ruined. . . . I thought that I had you in my hand, to do with you just as I liked. . . . But I don't seem to care enough now. . . . It doesn't seem to matter. . . . You can take Linforth. . . . You can take the capital I've put into the business. . . . Amalgamate it with Gresham's. . . . I'm going to clear out. . . . Go clear away, and I'm not coming back. . . ."

Lee, with a curious sort of weary violence, "But what of Lucy? That doesn't settle her problems, Jim. Linforth is not going to compensate her for all that you have put her through. . . . Linforth is not going to mean a rap to me, while I know that she has been used as you have used her. . . . Lee swung round suddenly and faced Lucy's father.

"I'll set her free," he said shortly. "I'll give her back to you. . . . A marriage case as ours. . . . I mean, there are circumstances in which it isn't difficult to break the tie. . . ."

"You mean that you will give her to divorcee?" Lee's face grew now so grimly. "And for her sake, how would it be?"

"Oh, she's young," broke in Lee. "She'll have a lifetime to forget him. . . ."

"Suppose it takes a lifetime?"

Jim was silent, thinking; remembering Lucy's voice, remembering the look in her eyes, as she had said that, if it had not been for her father's sake, she would have died before she offered him her love. . . .

"I think," he said slowly, "that she is pretty well cured already. She has been through to endure, in all conscience. . . . Oh, I don't think you need worry about that. . . . I fancy she has lost whatever affection she ever had for me. . . ."

"That does not sound like Lucy," said Sir John, triumphantly. "And for yourself, Jim," he went on. "Have you any feeling for her? Don't you want to see her?"

"No," cried Jim sharply. "For God's sake keep her away from me. Tell her I'll do anything she wants me to do. . . . But don't make me see her. . . ."

"That's the end," said Sir John slowly. "At any rate for the time. We must think things over. . . . One thing, Jim: Don't let me lose sight of you. . . . Keep me informed of your whereabouts. . . ."

"Naturally," answered Jim. "I have still a lot to do. . . . Oh, I shan't complicate things by turning tail and bolting. . . ."

"I believe you won't. . . . Goodbye," Sir John moved to the door. Then, he turned back and said slowly:

"Forgive us our trespasses. . . . as we forgive them. . . ."

He paused; Lee stood silent, not quite looking at him. . . . "We've a lot to forgive each other, boy. . . . Can you, do you think?" he asked solemnly.

"Oh, I suppose so. . . . When we've forgiven ourselves," answered Jim, with a dull laugh.

"Yes, you're right," said Sir John quickly. After a moment's silence, he turned and went out of the room with nothing more said.

Lee stopped in the tragic story. And once again, his hand was on the bowed shoulders. Lee shook it off and sprang to his feet.

"I don't know what's happened. . . . I worked for this triumph. . . . And meant to enjoy it to the full. . . . But I can't. . . . Something's all wrong somewhere. . . . Something's all gone wrong. . . ."

"Or right, perhaps," said Sir John quietly.

Jim turned from him restlessly.

"I don't think I can't think. . . . It doesn't seem a triumph any more. . . . It doesn't give me the pleasure I meant it to. . . . It doesn't mean anything to me, except more ghastliness and horror. . . . He caught a sharp breath.

"You may as well know it all. . . ."

He added after a moment, "I married Lucy with only loathing in my heart. . . . Just to be revenged. Just to take her from you and from Ames. . . . You can forgive yourself more easily now. . . ."

He laughed brokenly.

"You married her for that?"

"Goodbye, then, Jim. . . . Some magic in those words that he had not reckoned with. . . . Some destructive power in her pale face and sorrowful eyes, that he had not counted on. . . . Well, he had played his game out to its final throw, and it meant—just nothing. . . ."

Quite suddenly, he dropped back into his chair, uttering a queer little smothered cry, stretched his arms out on the desk before him, and bowed his head on them. . . .

He was drawing great, deep breaths, that shook his shoulders, which was near, perhaps, as a man such as he was, could ever come to the blessed relief of tears. Lucy started toward him crying his name, but a gesture of his hand waved her off, even before his voice came to her, saying brokenly: "Leave me alone. . . . Leave me alone. . . ."

She stood hesitating, but

"Oh, I don't know! You can do as you like with me. . . . I'm ruined. . . . I thought that I had you in my hand, to do with you just as I liked. . . . But I don't seem to care enough now. . . . It doesn't seem to matter. . . . You can take Linforth. . . . You can take the capital I've put into the business. . . . Amalgamate it with Gresham's. . . . I'm going to clear out. . . . Go clear away, and I'm not coming back. . . ."

Lee, with a curious sort of weary violence, "But what of Lucy? That doesn't settle her problems, Jim. Linforth is not going to compensate her for all that you have put her through. . . . Linforth is not going to mean a rap to me, while I know that she has been used as you have used her. . . . Lee swung round suddenly and faced Lucy's father.

"I'll set her free," he said shortly. "I'll give her back to you. . . . A marriage case as ours. . . . I mean, there are circumstances in which it isn't difficult to break the tie. . . ."

"You mean that you will give her to divorcee?" Lee's face grew now so grimly. "And for her sake, how would it be?"

"Oh, she's young," broke in Lee. "She'll have a lifetime to forget him. . . ."

"Suppose it takes a lifetime?"

Jim was silent, thinking; remembering Lucy's voice, remembering the look in her eyes, as she had said that, if it had not been for her father's sake, she would have died before she offered him her love. . . .

"I think," he said slowly, "that she is pretty well cured already. She has been through to endure, in all conscience. . . . Oh, I don't think you need worry about that. . . . I fancy she has lost whatever affection she ever had for me. . . ."

"That does not sound like Lucy," said Sir John, triumphantly. "And for yourself, Jim," he went on. "Have you any feeling for her? Don't you want to see her?"

"No," cried Jim sharply. "For God's sake keep her away from me. Tell her I'll do anything she wants me to do. . . . But don't make me see her. . . ."

"That's the end," said Sir John slowly. "At any rate for the time. We must think things over. . . . One thing, Jim: Don't let me lose sight of you. . . . Keep me informed of your whereabouts. . . ."

"Naturally," answered Jim. "I have still a lot to do. . . . Oh, I shan't complicate things by turning tail and bolting. . . ."

"I believe you won't. . . . Goodbye," Sir John moved to the door. Then, he turned back and said slowly:

"Forgive us our trespasses. . . . as we forgive them. . . ."

He paused; Lee stood silent, not quite looking at him. . . . "We've a lot to forgive each other, boy. . . . Can you, do you think?" he asked solemnly.

"Oh, I suppose so. . . . When we've forgiven ourselves," answered Jim, with a dull laugh.

TRACE SOYBEAN TO ORIGIN IN ORIENT

Plant's Beginning Goes Back Thousands of Years.

The soybean, now a common crop on hundreds of farms, was discovered as a slender, twining vine thousands of years ago in eastern Asia, according to E. P. Reed, specialist in soils and farm crops for the agricultural extension service at the Ohio State university, who says that for centuries the farmers of Asia and parts of Europe have profited from domesticating and growing this humble plant as a crop.

Just as the wheat fields of ancient Babylon and Egypt made possible the rise of great civilizations with their contributions to world progress, so the soybean, long an outcast on American farms, had its birth in the remote days when history for the first time trod the stage of rich eastern empires.

In oriental countries, Reed states, soybeans have been and are still utilized largely for human consumption, because they contain a relatively high percentage of protein, which makes them an excellent substitute for meat.

Soybeans are utilized for many purposes. The threshed bean furnishes a valuable protein supplement in the grain ration for live stock. The hay is a splendid substitute for alfalfa and the clovers. There is an increasing demand for the extracted vegetable oil, the residue or pressed cake is used in mixed feeds. They also are grown with corn for silage. And, in addition, when the whole plant is plowed under as a green manure, they furnish a material rich in nitrogen that can be used to improve the soil.

Train-Speeds

The fastest time ever made by a railroad train depends upon how performance is reckoned. The fastest train run on record was made over the Plant system between Fleming and Jacksonville, Fla., in 1901, when a train covered five miles at an average of 120 miles per hour. The London-Cheltenham flyer of the Great Western railway in England recently covered the 7 1/4 miles between Swindon and Paddington in 56 minutes and 47 seconds, from start to stop, averaging 81.6 miles per hour. The highest speed reached was 92 miles per hour. This is claimed as a world mark for speed on a start to stop computation.

CURRENCY IN DAYS OF NATION'S YOUTH

Revolutionary Paper Money of Little Worth.

The recently arranged exhibition at the Newark museum of types of paper and metal money and objects of barter used as a basis for exchange in this country during the lifetime of Washington furnishes an interesting sidelight from the past on the gold standard and the problems of a stable currency in a period of chaotic economies.

Certainly the early American currency was nothing if not varied. In the early Colonial days barter was a common method of exchange—fur, tobacco and Indian wampum being used because of the shortage of coins in the Colonies. What coins there were consisted principally of English gold pieces and Spanish gold pieces from the Spanish main—these latter due to the rich trade carried on in the Caribbean and to the roving freebooters and pirates who not infrequently visited the English settlements on the Atlantic.

Coins were struck off in what is said to have been the first American mint, in Massachusetts, the material coming from melted-down foreign currency. This mint, opened under authority of the Colonial legislature, was later closed by the crown. Some attempt to relieve the shortage of currency was made through royal grant to private individuals. One of these, William Wood, undertook to make copper tokens for both Ireland and America, and when the Irish received them coldly all were eventually sent to the American Colonies.

Both congress and the individual Colonies experimented during the Revolution with paper money. As the credit behind the various issues was anything but firmly established, these issues depreciated practically to worthlessness, and after the establishment of the federal mint, in 1792, most of this currency was repudiated.

With the Republic a working organization, a new coinage was undertaken. It had been suggested that the head of Washington be used on the new coins, but he refused to permit it—agreeing with the widespread belief that it would be well to get away from the British-type coin with the heads or figures of royal personages. This started the precedent, which has been continued, of never using the head of a living person on the coins. The head of the goddess of liberty was used on the first coins struck at the Philadelphia mint.—New York Times.

The African Goose

Nothing definite is known of the origin of geese, according to the leading writers on poultry. It is said that they were held sacred in Egypt, 4,000 years ago. They were domesticated many centuries before the Christian era. Italy is said to be the home of domestic geese. Scientists claim that the "grayling" is the ancestor of all domestic geese. This probably arises from the fact that all of the earlier geese were gray or gray and white.

Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty, of course, but one gets tired of vigilance.

If a million mothers had something to tell you WOULD YOU LISTEN?

A MOTHER who has watched over her baby . . . day after day . . . thrilling to his every little gain . . . anxious about his smallest distress . . . Who can talk to you more understandingly than she? If a million such mothers could sit down with you now and tell you of their experience with a remarkable baby food—would you be interested?

Today, there are more than a million mothers who could tell you gladly, convincingly, of the wonderful things that Eagle Brand has done.

Year after year—by hundreds, by thousands—they write to The Borden Company, to tell their dramatic human stories. They tell of babies who grew and gained and flourished on Eagle Brand, with never a set-back. They tell of babies who have won blue ribbons and silver cups. They tell of babies—once failing, starving, because they could not digest other foods—brought back to full health by Eagle Brand.

And often, they tell of handsome, healthy grown-up sons and daughters raised on Eagle Brand, and now giving this food to their babies.

FREE—helpful baby book for you. If you cannot nurse your baby, try Eagle Brand. See feeding directions on label. Send for "Baby's Welfare," containing feeding instructions, general information on baby care. We will gladly send your physician a report of the recent scientific feeding test of Eagle Brand.

THAT KWH

Each month on our electric bill is a line informing us that we have used so many kilowatt-hours, at so much a KWH. Most of us think of a kilowatt-hour as being the standard of measurement of a commodity. It is that, in a sense. But in a great deal more important sense means something quite different. It is the standard of measurement of a service.

The job of the electric utility is to make and deliver those kilowatt-hours to the homes and factories of its customers—and to see that they can be had, on demand, at all times, and in whatever quantity is required. Billions of dollars of electric investments are dedicated to that end. Every act of an electric utility is designed either to improve the delivery of kilowatt-hours, distribute them to more people over a wider area, or lower their cost.

Perhaps we would be wiser if we thought of the electric industry from the standpoint of those little kilowatt-hours—not as a gigantic and somewhat remote institution with buildings and offices and power plants and transmission lines. The kilowatt-hour, which no one ever sees, is the important thing—the thing that really matters. More than any other agency, it has made the world a better place in which to live.

John Woodcox, John Dille and Curtis Northrup were at Angola Monday, and played in the band directed by Mrs. Stage of Butler, in a school band contest. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Hollis Dille.

Foraker Ferrell, of Butler, Pa., returned home Sunday after spending his vacation in the Frank Tustison home. Russell Tustison accompanied him for a few weeks. Foraker is holding a splendid position as city editor.

Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Weaver, of Washington, D. C. and Ernest Hollabaugh, of Logansport were guests of relatives here over Tuesday, and were dinner guests in the Ed Pfauher home, together with Wm. Hollabaugh and son, Stanley.

Wm. L. Hollabaugh will have reached his 90th birthday on September 22, and today he is perhaps the most active citizen in St. Joe, considering his years. He works daily and keeps his own home and is alert in matters of his business affairs.

During the month of August there were twelve births in De Kalb county outside of incorporated towns and cities according to the report of Dr. W. W. Swarts, DeKalb county health commissioner, six males and six females. There were six deaths during the month.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Foltz and Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Buckingham spent Sunday at the Foltz Cabin, at the State Dam east of Defiance, together with the sister and brothers of Mrs. Buckingham and Mr. Foltz. Three brothers and two sisters, with their families, twenty-four in number were present. Mrs. Janie Phipps living in California was absent.

George Hart has 13 head of his Jerseys on display at the Van Wert county fair, and they are attracting much attention by lovers of fine dairy cattle. O. E. Ginther is assisting in showing the cattle during the day and McClellan Hart is acting as care taker of the herd. George will show his cattle at Hicksville, Montpelier, Auburn and other places during the next several weeks.

A large sign, of electric type, has been manufactured by the Vitreous Iron Products Company, at Clyde, Ohio, for a large oil refining company and will be erected on top of the Merchants National Bank Building in Indianapolis. The letters are nine feet high and are erected on a steel tower ninety feet above the roof of the building. The beacon, it is understood, is to be the official government aviation light of Indiana and can be seen for 70 miles.

The Freisinger reunion was held Sunday at the Gleaner Hall, four miles south of South Bend. Those from St. Joe attending were, D. B. Ridgway, Floyd Ridgway, Grover Curie and their families; Wellington Blalock and wife of Fort Wayne; A. R. Mason and wife of Auburn. After the reunion they all drove on to Valparaiso to visit George Ridgway and family, and to Hobart as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Vot Chandler and Mrs. Olive Fry and daughter. Mrs. Belle Ridgway returned home Monday with her son, Floyd and family.

Dorothy Ginther will begin her school term at Flint, Ind., Steuben county, on Friday, as enrollment day and on Monday the term will be in full swing.

The young people from the Lutheran Church were guests at the Y. M. C. A. Camp at Blackman Lake last Friday and Saturday and were chaperoned by Mrs. Hollis Dille and Rev. Fabianske.

Rev. C. W. Moore has been returned as pastor of the U. B. Circuit at Newville, according to appointments made at the closing session of the 88th annual St. Joseph Conference at Winona Lake, Sunday. Rev. C. W. Price, Butler and Rev. R. A. Blackburn, Butler Circuit, were among the local appointments made. Rev. Ernest Lowellen was returned to Waterloo.

The estate of the late Mary Sanders is now in progress of settlement under the will which she left giving to the son, Ellsworth, two-thirds and the grandson, Harold, one-third of the personal property, which is now being taken care of under the appointment of F. B. Leighty as administrator. The personal property was appraised and the heirs will take charge of same and dispose of as they see fit, after agreement was made Tuesday. Ellsworth Sanders, of Montrose, Calif., is here and will make disposition of the household goods to meet the wishes of his son. The residence has been contracted for sale to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hursh by the heirs.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard H. Gee and daughter, Arlene Ruth, of Conneaut, O., arrived in Fort Wayne Friday, and were met by Mr. and Mrs. Laney Gee. After spending the day in their home and calling on other relatives they spent from Friday night until Sunday night as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. H. Curie. On Sunday Mrs. S. D. Gee, Mr. and Mrs. L. Gee, Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Gee and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. H. Curie and family visited Mr. and Mrs. Milo Provines and family of near Butler. They were Monday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Nieland of Auburn, Tuesday dinner guests of Mrs. Nina Hadsell of Hicksville and on Wednesday guests of Mrs. S. D. Gee and Mr. and Mrs. Foster Gee. They also made numerous calls on other relatives in this and adjoining vicinities.

A NIGHT AT THE SOUTH SIDE MARKET

Ye editor and wife visited the south side market at Fort Wayne, Monday night, for the first time, and it was the closing of the annual fall show of the producers. As we passed through the market we became particularly interested in the producers from near our home community, and we found ribbons on the booths showing their success as prize winners in the show. Here are the winners we wish to make special mention of:

Jay Hart, 4th on Poultry.
Ora Wilmot, 2nd on Poultry and Eggs.
Clyde Hart, 1st on Nursery Stock.

Fred Hart, 1st on Poultry and Eggs.
Clive Washler 4th on Melons.
Lewis Washler, 2nd on Melons.
Roy Keller, 1st on Melons.
Howard Shilling, 1st on Miscellaneous, made up of 65 different products.

When you enter the market you first think you are at a fair, fine decorations everywhere and almost as many people serging back and forth, only they are hunting that which they wish to buy. Every booth is laden with farm produce, all artistically arranged to make the patrons want to purchase.

The prices are uniform thru out the market and the competition lies in the quality of products and the manner of showing the produce.

Onions - Onions - Onions - Onions. Hugh W. Baum, now buying. Phone 83, Auburn. 37c2.

LEO HIGH SCHOOL SHOWS INCREASE

The opening day of school, September 6, in Cedar Creek township brought with it a larger enrollment than last year. Almost every grade showed an increase in the number of pupils entering upon the year's work.

The Leo high school shows an increase to 115 students from 85. Of this number, 44 are freshmen, 35 sophomores, 19 juniors, and 17 seniors.

The grades show a decrease. The enrollment this year is 341 where it was 347 last year. The distribution by grades this year is as follows:

Grade 1	45
Grade 2	41
Grade 3	44
Grade 4	50
Grade 5	42
Grade 6	41

Grade 7 ..... 39
Grade 8 ..... 39
The number of pupils transferred to the Leo Consolidated School from St. Joseph township has increased. 26 high school pupils were transferred this year. Four others were transferred from Jackson township into DeKalb county.

FORMER PASTOR IS RETURNING TO INDIANA

A letter from Rev. J. C. McCaslin, of Tennesseville, Mo., was received at The News office this week in which he says that when he went to Missouri, only 18 discouraged members of the church were found and that during his two years stay, 103 members were added. He is now returning to Indiana and will be located at New Goshen, Ind., and expects to be located to do evangelistic work wherever called. Rev. McCaslin was pastor of the St. Joe Charge for 4 years, and was very successful while here. We are pleased to note that he is returning to "good old Indiana."

W. H. HANNEN LO- CATED IN FORT WAYNE

Our good old friend, Mr. W. H. Hannen, who for many years made his home at Spokane, Wash., is now located at 1101 Lake Ave., Fort Wayne, and The News will continue to keep him informed as to the happenings. Last week in sending his remittance, he again included money for ice cream for the force, and we certainly appreciate this. Mr. Hannen never forgets the refreshments. Thank you.

YEGGS BLOW POSTOFFICE SAFE AT GRABILL

Crackmen Miss More Than $500
In Cash and Stamps in Haste to Get Away

The safe in the post office at Grabill was blown by crackmen who broke into the place at 1:30 Wednesday morning, September 7th.

In their hurry to get away after the safe had been broken open, the members of the gang overlooked more than $500 in cash and stamps, taking only $58.70 in cash with them, a check-up by Albert Neuen-schwander, the postmaster, disclosed.

In a search of the place after the safe-cracking had been discovered, Sheriff Fred G. Lunz and a deputy with Postmaster Neuen-schwander found cash amounting to $103.29 in stamps worth $396.71 on the floor and inside the safe.

From all appearances, it seems the robbery must have been planned to take place while a freight train was passing through town. As the train approached the yeggs, with a pick, broke the plate glass in the front door of the post office to gain entrance. The crash of the glass was heard by the G. F. Markle family, living in the rooms above the office, and Paul and Willard Conrad, who also reside nearby. Mr. Markle immediately turned on a light and looked out of the window to see what was taking place and saw a guardsman standing in front of the Shell Filling Station who fired two shots, the one bullet striking the building just a couple feet above Mr. Markle's head. By this time the Conrad boys realized that a robbery was being staged at the post office and at once called A. Neuen-schwander, the postmaster. Just a few seconds later, the explosion, blowing open the safe door, was heard. In a few minutes the postmaster with several local residents began to search for the "uninvited guests."

Sheriff Lunz was called to the scene immediately by Herschel A. Woods, a Grabill resident, who was fired upon as he drove by the postoffice. It is thought that the shot was fired by a guard stationed outside the building by the gang.

Make Extensive Search
Sheriff Lunz called out his entire staff of deputies, and with the assistance of Fred Minnick, Harlan deputy, other Harlan and local residents a search of the country within a radius of several miles was made, continuing until 7 A. M. The crackmen fled before the sheriff arrived. No one reported seeing or hearing an automobile which they might have used.

The yeggs stole a pick and a heavy file from the Wabash Railroad section tool house near the post office and used these in breaking through the front door of the building and in getting into the inner office in which the safe was located.

Nitroglycerine is thought to have been used in breaking the safe, but no definite evidence of this could be found. The work appeared to be that of experienced crackmen, Sheriff Lunz said. Three men are believed to have composed the gang, two guarding of the outside while the third worked on the safe.

CHURCHES TO PRAY FOR RETURN OF PROSPERITY

October 2-8 has been set aside by twenty-six of the major protestant bodies of the United States as a special week of penitence and prayer, which is to form part of the year's evangelistic program prepared by the federal Council Churches' commission on evangelism.

WRECK NARROWLY AVERTED

Wm. Staman reports nearly having a smashup on the pavement just east of town, Monday night. As he was driving home about 10:30, he suddenly saw an object on the pavement and when he smashed into it he found a railroad crossing plank with 3 large spikes turned upward, and stones piled at either end. He had a difficult time in slacking up his car to avert a serious accident.

HAPPY SCHOOL DAYS

School bells are ringing again this month, not only in DeKalb county but throughout the country. Thousands, yes millions of children with their new school books under their arms are wending their way back to school. Mostly it is a happy procession. Some may not like it, but, mostly, the children like school, this despite the persistent tradition to the contrary. They like the "pal-ship" that exists only during school days, the intellectual tasks assigned to them, the athletics, and the various embellishments of the three R's. Most of them even like their teachers.

Every community should see to it that every child who belongs in school this fall gets there. No one should lose this opportunity, promised to every American boy and girl, for lack of clothes or money to buy books or food to buy health. The older ones should not be taken out of school to work if it can possibly be avoided. It has been found that of boys and girls in their teens withdrawn from school on work permits last year a very low percentage had regular, remunerative jobs. They lost their precious schooling without gaining anything in experience or income. Idleness of an unhappy and dangerous sort was their lot.

The schools have been as hard hit as any other tax-supported or private institution. Yet they are of tremendous and vital importance to the whole nation and should be maintained by heroic effort and sacrifice if necessary.

Local Briefs

French Exposition of Educational Interest

Shows Interesting Objects From Asia and Africa.

Washington.—Following its famous Colonial exposition of last year Paris this season is holding to an exposition of the recently discovered geography of two continents, Asia and Africa.

Americans visiting France are going in large numbers to this exposition—that of the Citroën-Haardt expedition, first to cross the Sahara by motor, first through the heart and length of Africa and that just returned from making the first wheeled span of Asia, through the least-known regions of the giant continent. Americans have a special interest in the new exposition because it includes a photographic survey made by the American representative from the National Geographic society which co-operated with the Trans-Asia expedition.

The spanning of Asia by motor, accounted the outstanding exploration of 1932, entered areas never before traversed by Europeans, covered many stretches not traveled since Marco Polo's time, visited places where wheeled vehicles hitherto were unknown, and photographed many regions, peoples and natural objects which never before had faced a camera.

Interesting Exhibits. The exposition is housed in the vast Palais des Expositions in the Place de l'Europe. It is set up in 15 "salons" or divisions. One displays a complete Mongolian yurt, the mobile felt home of the nomads of the east Asiatic plateau, with the implements these wandering people carry from place to place, and the richly ornamented costume of a Mongol princess, costume models of Kirghiz women, various other nomad apparel, headgear, and the exotic jewelry of the desert tribes.

Archaeological collections contain many objects first shown in Europe; medical exhibits bear especially upon the curious and ancient practices of Chinese healing; and natural history collections include plants, insects, and animal specimens which add new data to knowledge of life forms of the continent where mankind originated.

Of great interest is the ethnographic salon where is displayed a collection of specimens from Syria, Persia, Afghanistan, India, Burma, Indo-China and Turkestan.

By employing motors for the first time in spanning Asia, the expedition was able to drive its specially built tractor-type cars through unexplored parts of mountain-furrowed Afghanistan; into 14,000-foot passes of the Himalayas higher than many

Finds Gratitude Isn't Among Elk's Virtues

Yellowstone Park, Wyo.—Elk in Yellowstone park have not been taught that gratitude ranks high among the virtues, according to Marion R. Crowell, park ranger.

Crowell recently found an elk calf floundering in the waters of the Madison river. The calf's mother, frantic in her desire to save her offspring, was standing on the bank, unable to aid the helpless youngster.

Crowell, who was on motorcycle duty, dismounted from his machine when he saw the calf's plight and swam into the icy waters. He managed to save the elk from drowning and took it to shore. As he was laying the calf down on the bank, he heard a bellow and snort behind him, and turned to see the mother elk coming in his direction in no uncertain manner.

The mother's anguish had turned to rage, and she did not seem to realize Crowell had saved her calf's life. Crowell fled.

TROPHY FOR WOMEN

This Aerial trophy and $5,000 in prize money were put up for the 50-mile competition for women pilots at the 1932 National Air races in Cleveland, August 27 to September 5. The trophy was won in 1932 by Phoebe Omlie of Memphis, Tenn.; in 1930 by Mrs. Gladys O'Donnell of Long Beach, Calif.; and by Mrs. Maud Tait Morarity of Springfield, Mass., in 1931.

peaks of the Alps, where no wheels ever before had turned on steep, snow-bound yak trails, across the trackless wastes of the Gobi desert and through bandit-infested wild western China. Use of the cars enabled the modern equipment, including color cameras, short-wave radio, sound-recording apparatus and numerous scientific instruments to portray, study and collect specimens of all phases of the long-hidden wonders of the mother continent.

To face extremes of heat and cold—ranging from 25 below zero to 115 above—clothing had to be carried which varied from suits invented by Sir Ernest Shackleton for Antarctic work to khaki safari blouses, shirts and pith helmets for protection against the blinding desert sun. These and other equipment were hauled in trailers and there was a kitchen car where food could be prepared while the motor caravan was on the move, so meals might be served immediately for the halts, which were frequently brief in runs that ran as long as 10 hours a day.

Bullet-Scarred Car. In the main hall of the exposition is the bullet-scarred car in which the leader, Georges-Marie Haardt, was riding when it was riddled by the fire of Chinese brigands. The "Salon of Honor" is the room devoted to the martyr leader of the expedition, M. Haardt, who, after making the arduous 10,000-mile journey without the loss of a man, himself died of pneumonia, weakened by exhaustion after months of leading his motor caravan through untracked areas.

Portrayed in diorama—a mode of scenic representation devised by Daquerre—are contrasting scenes in the Gobi desert and the ascent of the formidable Baril pass, in the Himalaya mountains.

The National Geographic society's exhibit comprises a wide series of noteworthy photographs, in sepia enlargement, constituting a pictorial representation of the expedition's process, taken by the society's representative, Dr. Maynard Owen Williams, who was decorated with the Legion of Honor upon arrival in China. It also includes exhibits of the society's various world explorations, and of its world-wide scientific and educational work. The American exhibit was assembled at the headquarters of the society in Washington, upon invitation of M. Andre Citroën, patron of the African and Asiatic expeditions.

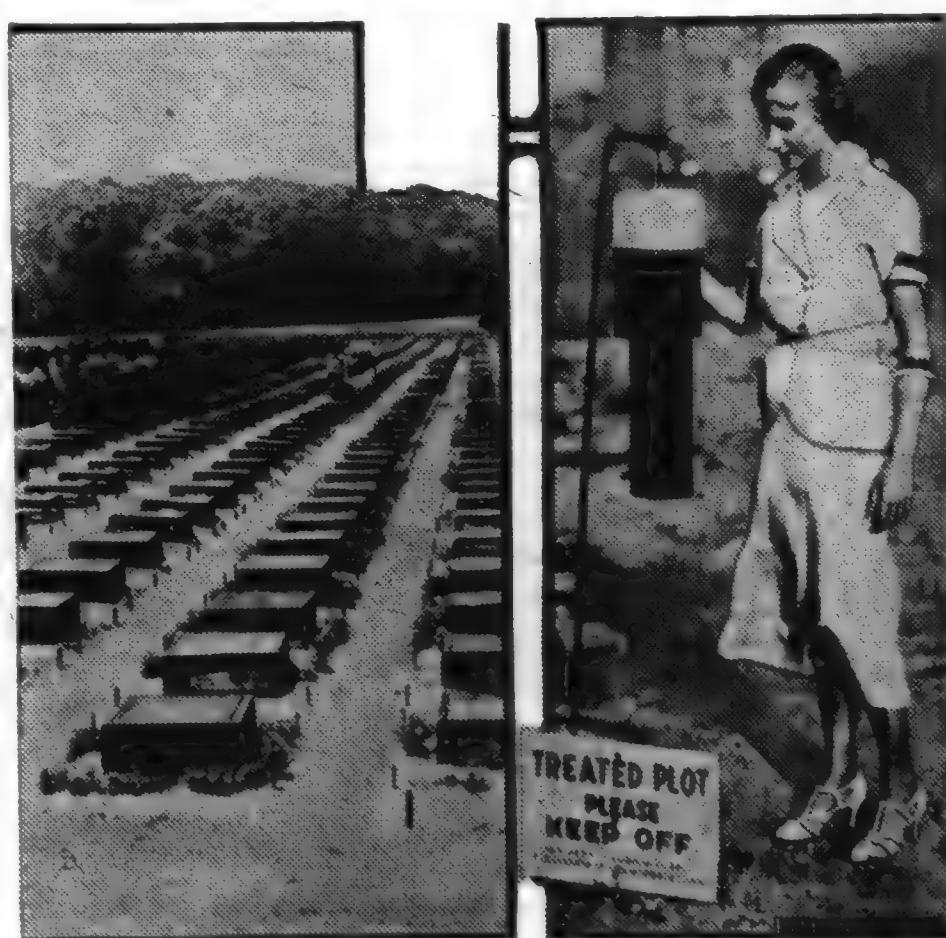

In recognition of the Franco-American co-operation in the explorations the National Geographic society recently elected the president of France an honorary member of the society, an honor accorded fewer than a score of individuals in the history of the society.

Texas Dog Works in U. S. Civil Service

Willis, Texas.—Although he has never been placed on the pay roll, a "houn" dog here is one of the most faithful of the United States civil service workers.

At three o'clock every morning a bus driver deposits a sack of mail on the sidewalk of this little inland town. As the bus driver leaves, the dog lies down on the sack and allows no one to approach the mail until the postmaster arrives several hours later.

Uncle Sam Makes War on Beetles

Uncle Sam has declared war—but the object of his wrath is a pernicious insect invader who will this year attempt to destroy as much of the nation's food, flowers and shrubbery as possible, just as he has done in past seasons. The pest, known as the Japanese beetle, is being battled by means of traps, which might be called "execution chambers." At the left are shown some of the 600 death chambers in which 200 different kinds of poison are used to determine which is the most fatal to the beetle, at the experimental station at Moorestown, N. J. Miss Gertrude Presscott, at right, is shown examining one of the traps.

Bandit's Fate Arouses Corsica

Case of Last of Robin Hoods Divides Island.

Bastia, Corsica.—The fate of the picturesque and romantic honor bandits of Corsica is swinging in the balance as a court decision decides the case of the last of the Robin Hoods, known as Jean Simon Ettori, who ranged the island brush for 27 years and gave himself up to the authorities in their campaign to cleanse the island.

All of Corsica is divided over the question, which they claim is one of honor, involving the right of native Corsicans to pursue their feuds and live the free and adventurous life of banditry, according to the code in which personal honor with a dash of kindness and gallantry, flavors their ways.

Ettori claims he committed only one crime, and that 27 years ago, which was demanded on the honor of his family. Being thus outlawed, Ettori accepted the life of beautiful and primitive bandit, and for 27 years he carried on in the true Robin Hood style.

Ettori was unapologetic to the killers and murderers who rob taverns and poor people indiscriminately to the bad repute of the island and the Corsican race.

It is claimed that Ettori's part is not all filled with gallant exchanges of booty from rich to poor, nor are his days and nights idyls of free and romantic beauty in the flower-scented headlands over the Sapphirae sea. There is a little item of the killing of Antoine Lani at Pila Canale, when three distinguished bandits arrived at his tavern, demanded much wine, asked for the bill and paid it with bullets, killing Lani and blinding a customer, Dominique Casabianca. There is a tale of wounded gendarmes in a scuffle at Sapparelli, when a bandit was being sought who had not done his military service, and who let a gun fall in his fight, and this gun bore the name of Simon Ettori. These incidents must be studied by the court, but there is no doubt that Ettori has honorably presented himself to the court, and if it decides he has honorably lived, Ettori, the honor bandit, will go free.

Cigar Boxes Are Used to Build Model Church

Geneva, N. Y.—A three-foot model of a cathedral tower, made of nothing but cigar boxes, has been constructed by Russell R. Isenhour.

Five spires surmount the structure, which is complete with niches, porticos and entrances. The exterior is arrayed in numerous metallic colors, including gold, bronze, aluminum and purple.

One of the most remarkable features of the model is its mechanical equipment. The tower contains an old German clock. In a miniature street in front of the building stands a lamp post, surmounted by a little electric clock. As the clock prepares to strike the hour, a tiny mechanical man emerges from the building. He holds an electric light in his hand. Going into the street, he turns about, glances at the face of the clock, and disappears into the doorway.

Civilization Means Toothache to Eskimo

Washington.—To the Eskimo civilization means a toothache. White men started dental trouble among the Alaskan natives, the Smithsonian institution said recently in a report of studies by Henry B. Collins, Jr. Collins examined many Eskimos. Natives in remote spots who fed mostly on fish, seal and birds had good teeth. But those at Nome and other white settlements were cases for the dentist. Collins concluded white man's food was bad for teeth.

Don't miss today's LOW PRICES on GOODYEAR TIRES

RIGHT now is certainly a great time to get rid of road worn, tread bare tires and replace them with tough new rubber.

Goodyear quality is the highest it has ever been. Goodyear prices are lower than they have been in 30 previous summers. Read them and be convinced.

These prices buy Goodyear Speedways—built to Goodyear standards—marked with the Goodyear name—the tires that have been making such a sensation in this low-price year. Goodyear can give you such values because Goodyear builds more tires—millions more—than any other tire-maker.

CAPITAL AS MECCA TO TOURIST HOSTS

Washington Most Popular of All Resorts.

The most popular tourist resort in the United States is the city of Washington, according to statistics gathered by travel bureaus and makers of motor maps. And the spots in Washington which attract the largest number of sightseers are the Lincoln memorial, White House and the Washington monument.

Washington is so full of sights of historical, architectural and national interest that it is practically impossible for any visitor to see them all in less than a fortnight. No city in the world has so many guide books, and they are in general so well prepared that the visitor can seek out the city's wealth of monuments and public buildings without difficulty.

"No visitor is likely to miss the Lincoln memorial dreaming in state-ly peace beside its reflecting pool," declares a writer in the Woman's Home Companion, "nor the noble directness of the great shaft of the Washington monument, with its austerity and uncluttered beauty. And no American can stand before the White House without feeling that this unpretentious frame building is a happy instance of the Eighteenth-century democracy that was so sternly turning away from the stolid courts of the Old world they were rejecting."

Washington is a city of anomalies. Not an old city, even as American cities go, it yet embodies in its public buildings so much of what the brilliant statesmanship of the early Republic stood for and accomplished that one feels there almost more than anywhere else in our country the hovering forms from a great past.

A city without industries, it is still a city full of people who work. Too far south for rigorous northern winters, though too northern to be outside the freezing zone, its climate is hospitable to a wealth of flowers, plants and trees that impress the visitor as being greater in variety than any he sees elsewhere. Though it is the Capital of a nation its citizens cannot vote. Situated in no state, adjacent to two, it is an entity in itself unlike any other world capital.

Statues to the Living. Statues to the living are almost as rare as the faces of the living on our postage stamps. However, there are a few statues of notables who still live. General Pershing's likeness appears in bronze and there is a marble bust of Charles G. Dawes at the Capitol. The late Chauncey M. Depew saw a statue of himself unveiled. But the latest one is of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. Depicting the "Lone Eagle" in the working clothes he wore as a youthful flyer, the bronze figure stands at Lindbergh field, San Diego, Calif., the gift of admiring citizens.

All Clear as Daylight. Lady—How could you find the penny I gave you so quickly? Beggar—I am not the blind man. I am just sitting here while he has gone to the cinema.—Lustige Kolner Zeitung.

POPULAR AUBURN COUPLE MARRIED

Wedding of Fred Quance and Miss Erthenia Graham solemnized at Ft. Wayne

The marriage of two of Auburn's well known young people took place Friday night at Fort Wayne, when Fred Quance, son of Mrs. Melvina Quance, assistant purchasing agent for the Auburn Rubber Corp., and Miss Erthenia Graham, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Graham of 403 West Seventh St., were united by the Rev. Arthur P. Bourns, pastor of the Anthony Boulevard Presbyterian Church.

The ceremony was performed at the church in the presence of relatives of the bride and groom and intimate friends. After the nuptials a reception was given for Mr. and Mrs. Quance at the manse and the happy couple departed on a short wedding trip. They will reside in their newly furnished home at 105 North Indiana Avenue after October 1st. The wedding guests from Auburn were Dr. and Mrs. Graham and son, John, Mrs. Jennie Moody grandmother of the bride, Mrs. Melvina Quance and daughter, Mary, Carl Walter, Miss Mary Beth Munton; Mr. and Mrs. Fred

B. Leighty of St. Joe and Mrs. A. P. Bourns of Fort Wayne. Mr. Quance was graduated from the Auburn high school with the class of 1930 and was a basketball star during his high school career. Mrs. Quance graduated a year ago from the Massachusetts General Hospital at Boston and in 1928 from the Auburn high school. She was a member of the girls' basketball team while in high school and is an accomplished musician.

INTERESTING ITEMS GATHERED ABOUT OUR SCHOOL

The General Science class was given a real demonstration Tuesday when during the class Mr. Noffsinger was surprised by a shower of colored water resulting from a "boiler explosion" of some of the apparatus. The students learned in a very short time that there really is power and energy in steam.

We are planning our school exhibits for the Auburn Fair, and hope our work will compare favorably with that of other schools of the county.

The first grade boys are building a doll house. They are using wooden store boxes. After it is finished the girls will make the furnishings.

Lynn Shilling entered the second grade on Tuesday.

The second grade Arithmetic Class are having a grocery store. Each day they purchase articles at the store and must take the proper amount of money to pay for it. This project is being used as a help in addition combinations.

Since most of the third and fourth grade pupils will be unable to attend the fair this week, the fourth grade pupils are planning a sand table fair of their own. We are all working hard to perfect our skill in map drawing with hopes of bringing home a prize from the Auburn Fair.

The Commercial Department has added two new typewriters, a Royal and a Remington, to its equipment.

A total of fifty-five students are enrolled in the various commercial classes.

Advanced Bookkeeping is being offered this year for the first time.

There are twenty girls enrolled in the Vocational Home Economics courses this fall. The semester's work consists of Home Nursing and Child Development courses in addition to the Foods work, which boasts of four additional members from last year's class making that course twenty-four in number. As soon as convenient arrangements can be made to take care of such a large class in a small laboratory, the Foods class shall carry on a fall project in canning.

The St. Joe H. S. baseball team experienced little trouble with the Waterloo club last Friday evening, giving them a sound trouncing to the score of 21-4.

It was a sweet revenge to the St. Joe fans who remember of the previous engagements of the two schools in basketball last year.

The local club was materially weakened this year due to graduation but it is the hope of local high school sportsmen that this year's club will hold its own on the diamond as it has so enviously held in the past.

Basketball practice is already in the planning stage. Prospects in this sport are not as dark as they at first seemed. Although graduation took a heavy toll from last year's squad, a formidable combination can be built around R. Wiers, K. Gaff, J. Woodcock and J. Dilley. J. Stewart will be lost to the squad for the first semester due to scholastic difficulties.

The local club will open the '32 season with Hamilton at that resort in October.

Any woman in the school community of St. Joe, who is interested in exhibiting any fancy work in the way of quilts, crocheting, needlework, embroidering or ornamental work, at the DeKalb County Fair, October 5, 6, 7 and 8, please get in touch with Miss Ditmars Home Economics teacher.

Mrs. Hattie Widney spent Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Widney at Columbia City.

All members were on hand when the DeKalb county council got under way at the office of County Auditor Frank E. Lyon Tuesday morning. The first act was the reading of the budget and it was considered item by item. The session continued for two days. Some interesting discussions followed in their effort to hold down the county expenses.

CHAPTER I

"Smoke, old chum, there's something afloat out there to the south. Ears pricked, the massive black-and-white husky raised slant eyes to the speaker.

Jim Stuart watched a distant object, which regularly disappeared, to lift again on the white crest of the running seas.

"Acts like a filled canoe, Smoke. I'm going to get the glasses."

Crossing the clearing, where the grass grew thickly among the stumps, to the group of white-washed log buildings of the little fur post, he entered the tradehouse.

"Looks like a capsized canoe out there, Omar," Stuart said to the broad-backed figure seated cross-legged on the floor, shaping with a drawknife a slab of birch into a paddle.

The half-breed lifted a swart, square face, seamed with lines, his mouth widening to a grin, as he said: "Wal, w'at you do? Dis canoe' come from Nor'-Wes' comp'ny; eet ees good t'ing, eh?"

"You're too bitter, Omar," said the factor of Sunset House. "We can't let men drown before our eyes even if they are from LeBlond's."

Stuart took his service binoculars from the case and joined the dog who waited for him at the door. Crossing the clearing to the shore, he focused the glasses on the wind-whirled lake. As he found the drifting object he sought, his lips moved in a muttered: "Man hanging to that boat! How long can he last?"

Jim started on a run for the tradehouse. "Come on, Omar! There's some one with that filled canoe. Come on! We'll take the petersboro!"

The lined face of the half-breed stiffened in a black frown. "We fill, too, out dere! Tough job—put de canoe into dat wind!"

Stuart laughed as he started for the shore, followed reluctantly by his man. "What! The best canoe man I ever saw—afraid of that water?" he taunted. "You sure hate that LeBlond outfit! But we'll show this fellow some paddling!"

Out into the welter of wind-driven seas went the plunging canoe. For a mile, the dogged "churn-swish, churn-swish" of maple blades fought the fury of the southwester. On they went for a space, then swung toward the submerged boat. The canoe was within short rifle shot of each other when Jim saw the dark head beside the submerged craft move as if to signal the approaching boat.

"He's all right!" panted Stuart. "He'll hang on! A boy!"

Hails awoke, the filled canoe bore down on the laboring petersboro. As the rescuing boat worked closer a huge comber mounded over the wallowing craft burying the dark head beside it. Jim dug desperately with his paddle, fearful of the lifting boat, but would reveal. But as the canoe rose he saw the head still there, with the arms circling a thwart.

"Good boy!" muttered the bowman. Closer crept the petersboro. Again the boat was drowned in a ridge of black water, topped with foam. Then, as the dark head appeared, the eyes of the tolling bowman widened in amazement.

"A girl!" His paddle tore at the water. Over his shoulder he shouted: "It's a girl!"

It was dangerous work—edging the petersboro alongside a filled boat yawing in that sea. But Omar Boisvert was a magician with a paddle, and did not hesitate. As they reached the canoe the half-drowned girl turned a face gray from exhaustion and the drenching of the seas, and her blue lips moved.

While Omar fought to hold his bow into the wind against the drag of the yawing canoe, Stuart worked desperately to get the limp body of the girl into the boat without rolling them under a lifting sea. At last, she was in the petersboro, and, as a ridge of water broke at the bow, they cleared the boat and headed for Sunset House.

"A white girl—from LeBlond's! Short hair, whipcord knickers—who can she be?" wondered Jim as his stiff arms drove his paddle. He glanced over his shoulder at the huddled figure of his drenched passenger covered by his coat. "Cold!" he shouted to the shivering girl. "Get down, out of the wind!"

She nodded, with a gallant attempt at a smile, as he encouraged: "Only a few minutes now!"

But two miles of running "white horses" separated the canoe, yawing in the following sea, from the post, and the kneeling paddler had his work cut out.

At length, leaping into the shoal water, Stuart eased the boat in to the beach at the post; then lifted the girl, blue with cold, from the boat.

"Can you walk?" he asked, conscious of the thickness of her drenched, crow-black hair. "Take my arm."

The girl's stiff legs, numb from exposure to water and wind, moved uncertainly. With a shrug she raised black eyes to the man who supported her, wondering if he dared pick her up and run to the warm kitchen of Omar's cabin. "I make you—much trouble," she replied through chattering teeth. "You take me—out of—dat wet lake. Now you must—dry me."

At the door of her cabin the amazed Marthe, wife of Omar, met with wide and disapproving eyes. Jim Stuart with a short-haired girl wearing a man's coat, a man's trousers, a man's high laced boots! A costume for women unknown in Kiwedin. "W'at—w'at you do, Meester Jeem?" she feebly gasped, overwhelmed with embarrassment.

"She's been in the lake, Marthe," explained Stuart. "She upset and drifted across from LeBlond's. Needs hot soup and a fire—quick! I'll rustle dry clothes for you, Miss—Miss—"

With a flash of white teeth the girl laughed: "Oh, didn't you guess? I'm Aurora LeBlond!"

Jim Stuart was startled. The blood showed in his tanned cheeks as he replied: "No, I didn't know." Then he said: "Marthe will take care of you, Miss LeBlond. Get those wet clothes off and dry out. My cook will have some supper for you shortly."

LeBlond's daughter, at Sunset House! Impossible to get her back across that lake until the wind died! What a situation! What would LeBlond, his rival and enemy, do? He'd saved the life of LeBlond's girl. It was a huge joke on the free-trader. Now what would he do?

As the girl followed the Ojibwa woman into the log house, she turned in the doorway and called to Stuart: "Merci, monsieur, oh very many thanks for saving me from a watery grave!" With a laugh she disappeared.

"Well, Omar, she's surely a cool one! Half frozen in those clammy clothes, she stops to make fun of our breaking thee what Sarah had seen. Short hair and men's breeches! No Ojibwa woman would bring shame to her sex by shearing her hair, and as for the "gibodiegwasoon"—the breeches? Marthe's rolling eyes and hunched shoulders eloquently portrayed her thoughts. But then, some white women are mad!

With much wagging of dark, braided heads the women parted.

Jim Stuart's knock at the door of Omar's cabin brought the reply: "Coming!"

Shortly the door opened and the daughter of the man who was rapidly driving him out of the fur trade at Mitawangagama—Ojibwa for the Lake of the Sand Beches—stood in dry woolen blouse caught at the neck by a scarf of crimson silk, and whipcord; on her stockinged feet a pair of the beggared Marthe's beaded moccasins.

"You're warm again—no chill?" he asked, politely aware of the picture she made in the frame of the door.

"Yes, my heroic rescuer," she began archly, "and now Monsieur Stuart, that I'm warm and dry again and look less like a drowned fish, do you not like me better?"

The fluttering of her black hair in the wind; the allure of her thick-lashed eyes; the clean lines of her build held the appraising sweep of Stuart's gaze, as she posed, hands on hips, free of all self-consciousness, watching him in frank amusement.

"No, Miss LeBlond," he replied in mock gravity, "I think I prefer you as a 'drowned fish.' You were then more respectful to your heroic rescuer."

"But my hair was plastered with water and my eyes red," she objected, vehemently. "See it now—how it waves when it's dry!"

"Yes, it's very—nice!" he replied, aghast at her amazing candor, as he walked beside her toward his quarters. So this was the new girl, the younger generation! He had not been "outside," down to the railroad and civilization, since his discharge from the army on his return from France. But in the stray papers and magazines which had reached him in the hinterlands of Kiwedin, he had read of the manners and dress of the younger generation. The frankness of this "specimen," however, was startling.

He said: "Now, you haven't told me how you happened to paddle that canoe out from your shore past the lee of the islands. You see what a risk you took?"

"Oh, I was tired of listening to that fool, Paul Paradis," she explained, "and it wasn't rough inside the islands. But, outside, before I knew it, the wind caught me and I couldn't turn back. You know the rest."

"You had a close shave, Miss LeBlond," he said quietly, wondering at her seeming lack of gratitude for the battle two men had made with wind and sea for her life.

She turned impulsively, placing a hand on his arm, as her face sobered. "You don't have to tell me that," she said, and the railway left her brilliant eyes. "I died out there, today. I knew I couldn't last—hang on, much longer. . . . Then I saw you coming!"

He looked suspiciously at her dark face, which met his the straight gaze which met his betokened sincerity.

"I thought you didn't know," he said, lamely.

"Didn't know?" she cried, almost savagely. "You think me a fool!" Then, swiftly, her mood changed. "Ah, I will now make amends to my heroic deliverer from the raging waters of Mitawangagama—is that right?—The Lake of the Sand Beches!" she laughed. "Sir, you have rescued a water-logged mare from the fishes! She never forget your bravery—or your surprise at her whipcord! She thanks you with all the heart she has—left!" Aurora LeBlond bowed grotesquely, until her hair touched the long grass of the clearing.

He watched her in silence, with a quizzical smile, puzzled, wondering, half-charmed, partly repelled. "Let's see what Sarah has got for us," he suggested. "I'm hungry, aren't you?"

"I thought you didn't know," he said, lamely.

"Starved! She won't poison me, will she? Marthe's eyes snapped when she saw me in those." The girl lifted a shapely leg and curled her toes in the smoke-tanned moccasins, far too generous in size for her foot.

"You did starve them—in those," he laughed. "You rather startled me; I haven't been in Winnipeg since the war."

"You poor man!"

"No, I've lived in Winnipeg—and prefer this. Hello, Smoke!" Bursting from the spruce at the edge of the clearing where he had been hunting rabbits, Smoke loomed up to the man and girl.

"What a handsome dog!" she cried. "Why, he's much larger than any of father's! Where did you get him?"

"He's a Hudson's Straits Ungava," said Jim, proudly.

"He's a raving beauty. The darling! Will he let me touch him? Most of father's won't."

"Smoke, this is a friend of mine," said Jim. "Shake hands with her!"

With a red grin which bared his formidable tusks, the Ungava raised a hairy paw, which the girl took.

"Smoke," she said, with a laugh, as the dog's slant eyes watched his master's face, "You're not polite; you don't look at the lady when you shake hands."

"Like his master, he's embarrassed by beautiful ladies," said Jim, as they left the dog and entered the house.

"Is that why you prefer this life to Winnipeg—because of your shyness of the ladies? But you'll be lonely when this beautiful lady goes," she challenged.

Here indeed was no false modesty. "What makes you think so?" he teased. "Oh, every one is. But you're hardly polite. How nice and comfortable you are here!" she went on, her eyes moving from the chairs built of spruce and birch in the round, the caribou and bear-skin rugs, to walls bare except for moosehorn gun-rack and two shelves of books.

He reddened under his tan. "You're laughing at my humble quarters. They're not much like your father's place, are they?"

Ignoring his remark, she faced him with: "Why do you men hate each other? Can't you trade with the Indians without fighting?"

Stuart laughed at her frankness. "We haven't exactly got to fighting yet; but I admit he's making it pretty rough for me."

She sat down at the table and the square-built Sarah appeared, her copper skin red from cooking, a large pink bow bobbing bravely from her dusky braids. With a withering look at Jim's guest from her small eyes, she deposited a dish of steaming hot stew, to be followed by broiled whitefish, hot biscuit, tea and wild strawberries.

"Dear me, but I'm hungry!" exclaimed the girl, as the outraged and inquisitive Ojibwa woman, hands on hips, boldly scrutinized her from bobbed hair to whipcord knickers—to gain a better view of which the cook coolly stepped back and circled her chair.

Then, aware of the exhaustive inspection from the rear by the fascinated and shocked Sarah, the girl rose and turned to the gaping cook: "Would you like to see my knickers?" she asked, wheeling on her toes. "You don't wear them, do you? You'd find them very comfortable."

Choicing with confusion, the overwhelmed Sarah fled to the kitchen, while Stuart shook with laughter.

"You're too much for Sarah. She was certainly hypnotized by your gibodiegwasoon."

"My what?"

"Your gibodiegwasoon—your pan-whipcor!"

"Mon Dieu! Are they as awful as that?" she cried, overcome by the Ojibwa equivalent. "What did you call them? Gibo-di-what? No wonder Marthe and Sarah are shocked! Think of a woman wearing anything with such a name! Gibo-di—" and she broke into shouts of laughter.

"Gibodiegwasoon," he repeated.

"Gibo-di-gwasoon!" she faltered, breathlessly, "gibos for short! Wait till they hear that in Winnipeg! They'll never wear 'em again!"

Stuart regarded his guest with unconcealed curiosity. Buried in the hinterlands since the war, he had had no contact with the new girl. But now, it appeared, he was being offered a rare opportunity for the study of the species.

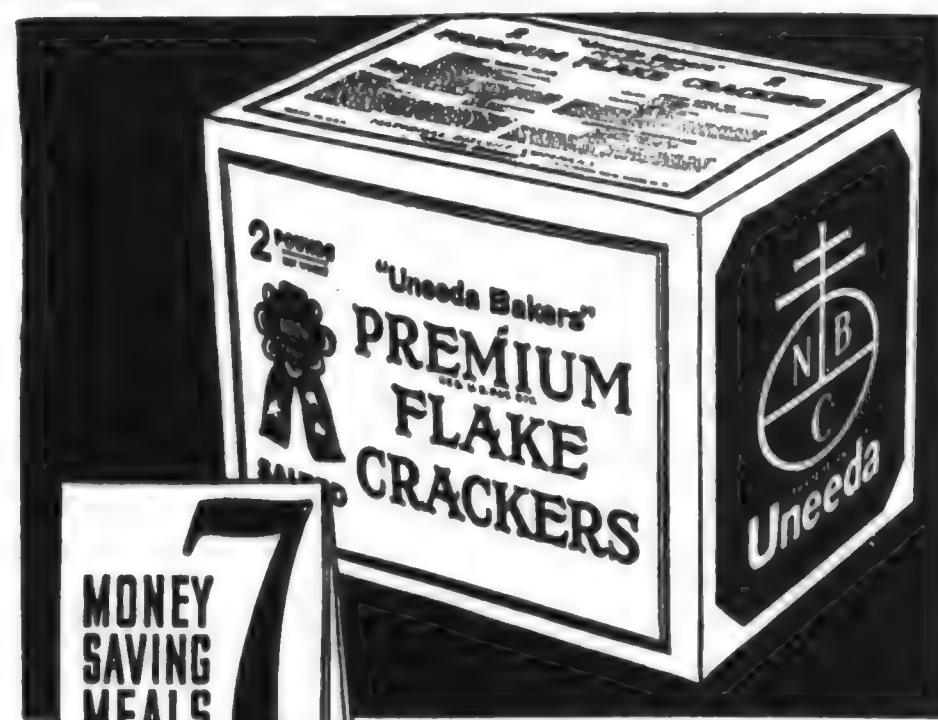

"There won't be much left of me when Sarah and Marthe get their heads together, but you're not really shocked, Monsieur Stuart. With us, all women wear them for sport."

"No, indeed, I'm not shocked," he laughed, his eyes shifting from her dusky head to the well-shaped hand busy with her fork. "We saw lots of them in France. But I'm wondering just how your being here will strike your father. It's going to blow all night, Miss LeBlond, and I don't see how we can get you home."

"So you're worried over what Marthe and Sarah will think if you can't rid yourself of your guest, Mr. Stuart?" she suggested with a curl of a full red lip.

"I'm wondering how your father will take it. How will he like it when he learns that you've been here?" she shrugged. "My father adores his unworthy daughter. He will love you for what you did this afternoon. The poor man must think I'm the lake, now. He'll be insane with worry! Poor dad!"

REPAIR CRISIS COMING SOON

Avoidable Home Neglect Costs Millions; Save by Painting Now.

Home owners and others throughout the United States face an avoidable burden of $200,000,000 for repairs and replacements next spring, that can be prevented by adopting proper precautions this fall. A crisis that has been approaching for several years will be reached this winter, and a vigorous offensive program, to lessen its seriousness will be inaugurated at once, according to an announcement by the Acme White Lead and Color Works, Detroit White Lead Works, W. W. Lawrence & Co., Lincoln, Paint & Color Co., the Lowe Brothers Co., John Lucas & Co., Inc., the Martin-Senour Co., Peninsular Paint & Varnish Co., the Sherwin-Williams Co. Newspaper advertising in every part of the United States will be used to tell property owners of the danger from further delay in making needed repairs and replacements.

"Millions of dollars can be saved by giving buildings proper care this fall. They have been exposed to the elements three, four and five years, through neglect and postponement of needed work. Property and equipment cannot go longer lacking proper protection, without further serious injury.

"When a woman's home is saved from foreclosure by a coat of new paint which led to a renewal of the loan on the house, as has just been reported from a small Middle Western town, it is easy to see that other benefits than just those of property protection can be derived, too, from adopting the correct safeguard methods.

"Prices of good paints are the lowest in fifteen years. Enough good, dependable paint to protect all the badly weathered surfaces on the average home can be bought with a few dollars. The general buying public has already begun responding to advance promotion through our distributing and retail channels. Encouraging orders from large key industries and railways are simply the forerunner of a pick-up through all the various industries. We are entering a paint market of huge proportions. We are moving with greater confidence than in many months."—Adv.

Oldest Married Couple?

Jugoslavia claims to have found the oldest married couple in the world. The husband is one hundred and seventeen, and the wife one hundred and fifteen, and they have been married 100 years. They are peasants and live in a village near Nish. Both still enjoy good health. More than 100 descendants took part in a festival held recently at the aged couple's farm to honor them.

TALK IT OVER WITH US

Buying Wisely

In these days people are buying wisely. They study values more closely than ever before, they compare prices. The buyer today studies advertising carefully, and the seller can use advertising and obtain better results than when money is more carelessly spent. Advertising nowadays pays—both buyer and seller.

Modern Detective Not "Sleuth" of Old Times

When did detectives finally discard the black mustache? We observe that detective fiction, at least, with which the book market is flooded, has quite withdrawn from the black and scowling sleuth with his all too visible trap-lings of the chase. The truth is, it was the melodrama more markedly than the novel that so pictured the pursuers of the transgressor.

The best detectives, we learn, are those whom nobody suspects of "detecting." It is your mid-mannered man, often of fair hair and guileless eyes, who leads the wicked, step by step, into the trap of the law. This "detecting" is a gift, bestowed for the good of mankind. Its possessor learns his powers little by little and is poised by them. Combined of intuition and an uncanny suspicion, the far-seeing sleuth's hypothesis grows into stern facts. Such a detective is as clever in constructing the plot of crime as the scientist is in creating the whole prehistoric animal out of a single leg bone. Plato's logic, splitting hairs, is as nothing to it.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Care Needed

The mistress of the house was explaining the household duties to the new maid.

"This," she said in awed tones, "is a very valuable Persian rug." She paused, and added: "I want you to be very careful when you clean it, as it is very old and has been in the family for many generations."

The new maid nodded understandingly.

"I can quite see that it's old, ma'am," she replied, "but I dare say we can make it last through the year if we're careful."

Fans the Frost Away

Fred Rustenburg has 100 acres of beans on his farm near San Benito, Texas. The earliest beans marketed naturally bring premium prices, and as the tender young plants fall an easy prey to late frosts, there is the constant danger of having them tipped. To ward off these late frosts, Rustenburg has mounted three airplane propellers with their motors, taken from World War air bombers. Whenever the temperature sinks to the danger point, Rustenburg starts his motors and the currents of air set in motion keep the frost from forming, just as happens on a windy night, even if temperatures are quite low.

REVIEW: MOSES HONORED IN HIS DEATH.

GOLDEN TEXT—Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.

LESSON TEXT—Deuteronomy 32:45-52: 34:5-8.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Moses Goes to Live With God.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What We May Learn from the Life of Moses.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What the World Owe Moses.

I. Moses Debarred From Canaan (32:48-52).

This act of God strikingly displays the tragedy of an unfinished task. Moses was loyal to God and faithfully served him through a long life. Though his "eye was not dimmed nor his natural force abated," he was obliged to leave his work unfinished. This is true of all of us. However, the tragedy is only apparent. Life is a probation. The question is not of finished tasks, but fidelity in service and growth in divine graces.

1. The reason for (v. 51). It was sin. The nature of this sin is given in Numbers 20:1-13. It was his failure to sanctify the Lord at Meribah. This penalty, while severe, was not too severe, for the righteousness of God demands the meeting out of penalty upon every transgression. This was too glaring a sin for the Lord to pass over, though Moses had served him faithfully for many years.

2. God's treatment of Moses (vv. 46, 50). While it was severe, it was yet most tender. It was in keeping with God's nature. While God cannot pass over sin, he is always as gracious as his justice will permit. He appointed the place of Moses' death on the mount of vision. Moses was gathered "unto his people."

II. Moses Views the Promised Land from Mount Pisgah (34:1-4).

At the Lord's bidding Moses ascended the mountain of Nebo from which he got a view of the promised land. He obeyed though he knew that he was to die there (32:50). He greatly desired to go into the land (3:25), but submitted to the will of the Lord. Though he was not permitted to enter the land, God gave him a view of the fullest dimensions of the land which was to be the inheritance of the people he had delivered and led for forty years. While Moses suffered this severe penalty, we should remember that his salvation was not affected. He was debarred from entrance to the land at that time, but we see him in the land some fifteen centuries later in a state of glory discoursing with Christ on the loftiest theme of the universe; namely, the death which he would accomplish at Jerusalem (Matt. 17:1-5; Luke 9:28-31).

III. The Death and Burial of Moses (34:5-8).

1. His death (v. 5). Though he died in the vigor of manhood, his work was done. God put him into the world for a purpose and as soon as that work was done he called him home. It is stated in verse five that he died according to the word of the Lord.

2. The burial of Moses (v. 8). God buried him. Moses had no human help or sympathy in his dying hour, but he had something better. The Lord was with him. His grave was concealed to prevent his people from making it a shrine.

3. The time of mourning for Moses (v. 8). They mourned for thirty days. It was customary to mourn for the dead from seven to seventy days. We are not wrong to lay away earthly friends even with tears, but as Christians we should not mourn as those who have no hope.

IV. An Encomium upon Moses (34:10-12).

In this eulogy Moses is given a place at the head of the Old Testament prophets. With the exception of the greater prophet (Deut. 18:15-18) of whom Moses was a type, he stands as the greatest prophet of Israel.

1. Because of his intimacy with God (v. 10). "Whom the Lord knew face to face."

2. He was great in that he gave to the world a code of laws unequalled in the world's history.

3. He was great as a general in that he liberated the Israelitish nation from the oppression of the great nation of the earth.

4. He was great because he led two or three million Israelites through the desert for forty years.

5. He was great because he gave to us in the book of Deuteronomy three orations, which, according to the judgment of competent critics, stand at the head of the world's literature.

PITHY PICK-UPS

Dorothy's Mother Proves Claim

Children don't ordinarily take to medicine but here's one that all of them love. Perhaps it shouldn't be called a medicine at all. It's more like a rich, concentrated food.

It's pure, wholesome, sweet to the taste and sweet in your child's little stomach. It builds up and strengthens weak, puny, underweight children, makes them eat heartily, brings the roses back to their cheeks, makes them playful, energetic, full of life. And no bilious, headachy, constipated, feverish, fretful baby or child ever failed to respond to the gentle influence of California Fig Syrup on their little bowels. It starts lazy bowels quick, cleans them out thoroughly, tones and strengthens them so they continue to act normally, of their own accord.

"Millions of mothers know about California Fig Syrup from experience. A Western mother, Mrs. J. G. Moore, 110 Cliff Ave., San Antonio, Texas, says: "California Fig Syrup is certainly all that's claimed for it. I have proved that with my little Dorothy, who was a bottle baby and very delicate. Her bowels were weak. I started her on Fig Syrup when she was a few months old and it regulated her, quick. I have used it with her ever since for colds and every little set-back and her wonderful condition tells better than words how it helps."

Don't be imposed on. See that the Fig Syrup you buy bears the name, "California" so you'll get the genuine, famous for 50 years.

Best Sugar

The first factory for the manufacture of sugar from beets was erected by Edward Leo Church at Northampton, Mass., in 1838, and the following year it produced 1,000 pounds of sugar. A few other factories followed, but all were failures. In 1870, E. B. Dyer erected at Alvarado, Calif., a factory which became successful in 1879 and marked the beginning of the modern sugar-making from sugar beets.

Odd Postage Stamps

In the main hall of the South Kensington museum, London, is to be seen one of the most remarkable collections of postage stamps in the world. Every one of the hundreds of specimens displayed portrays some member of the animal kingdom in its native haunts. For the most part they are typical of the countries from whence they come.

Ralph Waldo Emerson's View

Ralph Waldo Emerson, "the wisest of Americans," mentions the name of Shakespeare twice as frequently in his writings as he does that of his next favorite, Goethe. He is reported to have said, "I am always happy to meet persons who perceive the transcendent superiority of Shakespeare over all other writers."

Hamlet's Sanity

Whether or not Hamlet was insane is a question which has disturbed critics for 300 years. It is interesting to know that most of the profound thinkers who have given the question deep consideration regard Hamlet as sane. It would seem that if Hamlet was insane there is no point in the drama.—Washington Star.

Bird Sheep Herder

The yakamik, a species of crane, is used by the natives of Venezuela, South America, in the place of shepherd dogs, for guarding and herding flocks of sheep. However, far the yakamik may wander with the flocks, it never fails to find its way home at night, driving before it all the creatures entrusted to its care.

Best Things Are Nearest

The best things are nearest: breath in your nostrils, light in your eyes, flowers at your feet, duties at your hand, the path of God just before you. Then do not grasp at the stars, but do life's plain, common work as it comes, certain that daily duties and daily bread are the sweetest things of life.—R. L. Stevenson.

Man's Supremacy

Scientists tell us that what has lifted man above the brute creation with which he has so much in common is the fact that he can touch each of his fingers with his thumb! No other living thing can do that. Try experiments with your own hand, and see what a difference it would make if you could not do this simple-seeming act.

Glaciers Disappear

The evidence indicates that hundreds of small glaciers have disappeared altogether from the Yosemite National park during the last half century. The first "living glacier" discovered by John Muir in 1871 in the Sierra Nevada now has ceased to exist, it is reported.

British Pen

"A new hat is like wine to a woman," said a magnate the other day. It goes to her head very quickly.—London Humorist.

APPEAL TO WHITES TO AID DYING RACE

Australian Aborigines Near Extinction.

Isolated for hundreds of years with no ferocious human or animal enemies, the aborigines of Australia led their primitive Stone age life until after Captain Cook planted the flag of Britain on that island continent in 1770. They were out of the track of the great migrations and knew not the harring hordes which swept over Europe, Asia and Africa from prehistoric times.

According to anthropologists, these aborigines were akin to the ancient Dravidians of southern India and the Vedhans of Ceylon; they migrated to Australia when it was still joined to the Asiatic mainland and drove the original Australian—the Tasmanian man—into the fastnesses of Tasmania, which later became an island. Homo tasmanianus was an even more primitive type than the mainland aborigines and the last of his race died in 1870, exterminated by the ruthlessness of settlers.

There are estimated to be about 60,000 full-blooded aborigines in Australia and about 16,818 half-breeds. At the time of the white man's arrival, the natives probably numbered at least 150,000. They are rapidly dying off and only about a 1,000 remain in New South Wales and less than 100 in Victoria. Of all the aborigines, about 25,000 are nomads and roam the northern territory and parts of Queensland and West Australia. In the northern territory, there are about 80,000 square miles of federal reserve and 1,700 square miles of missionary reserves for the natives. All aborigines except the nomads and the gainfully employed are wards of the state and receive free clothing and food.

Only recently has Australia tried to evolve a scientific policy for the conservation of the aborigines.

On the big cattle stations in the north the natives have proved adept stockmen and boundary riders. Observe any they have remarkable assimilative capacities.

Rinso is safe for the finest cottons and linens—white or colors

Shadrach L. James, an aboriginal preacher, recently made a moving appeal to the Australian people to conserve his race. "The whole attitude of the white man toward the aborigine," he said, "has been all along to dispirit and humiliate him, to extinguish his self-respect, to suppress his ambition."

"Our so-called protectors are diligently attending to the care of my people, with the full conviction that they are surely passing out. Hence, all their efforts for my people are mere palliatives."

He then enumerates what should be done. His chief recommendation is that land and homes be provided for the aborigines and that his people be taught to become an agricultural and pastoral race.

Life's Proudest Moment

"No bigger than a minute"—when he arrived. . . . But look at him now! See what the scales are saying! Look at those muscles! Look at that husky framework! Look at the bright-eyed, pink-skinned health of him! It comes over you both with a great surge of happiness—he's a perfect specimen, your baby!

Can a baby thrive like that, if his mother's milk fails?

Millions of mothers nod a beaming "Yes!" For millions of mothers in America have had proof in their own homes that Eagle Brand builds wonderfully sturdy babies—babies that grow to be men and women of fine physique, outstanding health.

And recently, two famous baby specialists put Eagle Brand to one of the most searching tests that modern science has ever given a baby food. They fed fifty average infants on Eagle Brand for a period of months, comparing results with other groups of babies similarly fed on other foods. They tested these babies' progress with the X-ray, with blood counts, with measuring, weighing, every modern check on growing structure, growing strength.

And measured by every scientific test, the result was favorable to Eagle Brand. These Eagle Brand babies showed themselves superbly nourished—lacking in nothing that makes for future health and stamina. Eagle Brand* had proved itself equal in every way to the building of 100% babies!

You see, Eagle Brand is wonderfully easy to digest—second only to mother's milk in easy digestibility. Every drop goes quickly into the making of bones and teeth, tissue and muscle, energy and strength. Eagle Brand is easily prepared—you merely add boiled water. See directions on the label. Eagle Brand is free from dangerous germs—safe for your baby. It keeps indefinitely in the can. And can be obtained at any grocer's.

Send for a free copy of "Baby's Welfare"—an 80-page booklet on feeding and caring for baby. It gives you pictures and histories of a number of Eagle Brand babies. And let us send your physician a report of the scientific test we have described.

*As with mother's milk, or any milk diet, the usual supplementary foods were given. These are, of course, orange or tomato juice, and cod-liver oil or other source of the anti-rachitic Vitamin D.

WHO ARE RESPONSIBLE FOR THE DISRESPECT FOR LAW, THOSE WHO SUPPORT IT, OR THOSE WHO FLOUT IT?

On any question in the world except liquor, every one would call that an absurd question. If anyone is in doubt on this point, let him try a few experiments. Let him ask his friends, for example, who is responsible for the disrespect for laws against theft—those who make and support these laws, or those who break them or connive with those who break them by buying stolen goods? Let our experimenter keep a record of the answers which he receives to this question.

Or take the narcotics law. It is widely disobeyed. Ask your friends: Who is responsible for the disrespect for that law—those who show respect for it, or those who show disrespect? The question seems to answer itself. Try the same question with respect to the white slave law, the anti-gambling law, the anti-spitting law, or any other law which your friends are not themselves flouting.

Liquor is known to have the physiological effect of paralyzing the higher brain centers when actually taken internally. It seems to produce a kind of mental paralysis in those who defend it, even when not actually taken.

WITH OUR CLUB LADIES

Concord Home Bureau

The September meeting of the Home Bureau was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Simanton. Seventeen members responded to roll call giving some place of interest in Concord township. Officers for another year were chosen as follows:

President, Mrs. Mary Krise.
Vice Pres., Mrs. Arline Koch.
Secretary, Mrs. Laura Washler.
Treasurer, Mrs. Clara Foltz.
Planist, Mrs. Cora Curie.
Chorister, Mrs. Gertrude Borthwick.

A vocal duet was given by Mrs. Borthwick and Mrs. Mary Krise. A talk on "Use of Leisure Time" by Mrs. Arline Koch.

Little Bobby Laux, who has been a patient in the Shrine hospital in Chicago for the last 8 months, and had submitted to 4 different operations for club feet, was present. These operations were successful and were sponsored by the Home Bureau.

Guests present were, Mrs. Manfred Smith and daughter, Lucile of Hicksville, Mrs. Blanche Murray of Fort Wayne, Mrs. Harry Laux, Mrs. Belle Means, Miss Beatrice Woodcox and Mrs. Maud Brathwaite.

Mrs. Simanton, assisted by her committee, served refreshments. The club adjourned to meet October 21 at the gym, at which time the ladies will entertain their families. Mrs. Millie Shull is chairman of the entertainment committee and Mrs. Pluma Hamilton chairman of the refreshment committee.

Spencer Home Bureau

The Spencer Township Home Bureau met with Mrs. Florence Boger in an all day meeting at Butler, on September 14. Love's Old Sweet Song was sung followed by the Lord's Prayer. Election of officers was held and an ice cream social was planned for the first of October. A discussion "Should the Bible be Taught in the Public School" was taken up by Mrs. Dora Wilder. Everyone agreed it should. The officers elected are as follows: President, Mrs. Bernice Wilder; vice president, Mrs. Ethel Bowser; secretary, Mrs. Irma Howey; assistant secretary, Mrs. Marjorie Rezor; treasurer, Mrs. Frank Markle; reporter, Mrs. Irma Howey. Several guests were present.

The U. S. Weather Bureau has announced that early predictions point to another moderate winter. We wouldn't be surprised to hear Blondy McNutt telling the voters of Indiana that such a statement is merely Republican propaganda. At least he blames the world-wide depression on the Republicans, so why not the weather?

Weather observers do not make a business of long range forecasting, but Joseph M. Kincer, chief of the agricultural meteorology division of the weather bureau in Washington, is willing to announce some conclusions. These are that weather conditions run in cycles, and that after a series of severe winters we may expect a cycle of mild ones. The trend toward mildness has been marked since 1926 and last winter was abnormal throughout the country. Kincer is not predicting that the coming winter will be marked by an absence of low temperatures, but if the trend is followed he looks for a winter about as mild as that of 1931-'32.

WEST MILFORD CHRISTIAN CHURCH HOMECOMING

The Homecoming of the West Milford Christian Church will be held on Sunday, October 2. This year will mark the 40th anniversary of the organization of the congregation in 1892 and this will celebrate this event.

The present building was re-dedicated on October 2 and this will also celebrate this event.

The day will begin with Sunday School at the usual hour followed by the Lord's Supper. The sermon will be delivered by Evangelist Charles Oakley of Chicago.

Mr. Oakley began his ministry

SCOUTS MAKE APPEAL

The Boy Scouts are starting a campaign for some money. We are trying to raise enough money to can some fruit and vegetables.
You will find our collection boxes in several stores around town.

Don't you please help us. We need your assistance. Just give us a few cents a day and we will be able to do a large amount of charity work this fall and winter.
If you have any fruit or vegetables that we may have please drop a slip in one of our boxes with your name and what you can give us.

We are hoping for your help and thank you in advance for it.

COUNTY COUNCIL CUTS BUDGET TO LIMIT

A slash of $26,000 from the county budget was the result of the two days session of the council last week, making the levy nearly 10 cents less than proposed. In order to give our readers an idea of where the savings were made, we give a table showing the important changes.

SYNOPSIS

From his fur post, Sunset House, in the Canadian north, Jim Stuart, trader in charge, sights an overturned canoe in the lake. With his headman, Omar, he rescues the drifter, who proves to be Aurora LeBlond, daughter of his rival in the fur business. Made comfortable at the post, Aurora proves to be a charming companion.

CHAPTER I—Continued

Stuart scowled with impatience. "Are you never serious, Miss Aurora LeBlond? You may ignore the facts but he won't. You French are careful of appearances. If I thought I could get you safely over there tonight we'd start now."

The blood drove into her olive skin. "It's you who seem careful of appearances. You—you are bored with your guest, Monsieur Stuart. Let us go, then." She rose stiffly, her face flaming with outraged vanity.

But he ignored the challenge. "A boat wouldn't live out there now." "Then I shall go by shore."

With hands on hips he smiled indulgently at the indignant girl who confronted him. "Do you realize how far it is through the bush? It's a good twenty miles, and it'll be dark in an hour. Have you ever traveled in the bush at night?"

Ignoring the question she contemplated Marthe's beaded moccasins as she curled and uncurled her toes in their capacious interiors. Then her black eyes lifted to the man who watched her. Ill at ease, as her face lit in an amused smile, "Have you really been so bored, Mr. Stuart?"

He laughed in relief at her change of mood. "Is it likely that a man marooned up here in the bush would be bored with Miss Aurora LeBlond?"

"That's rather half-hearted, isn't it? Can't you do better?"

"Yes, I can do better," he teased, "but I don't think it's good for you." "You think I'm vain?"

"I know you are." She nodded as she moved about the room. "That's true, I am. Father's made a fool of me."

They turned at a knock on the outside door of the house. "Come in!" called Stuart.

Omar's broad face thrust through the doorway of the living room. "You spik wid me?" he asked of Stuart, with a sidelong glance at the girl.

Nodding, Stuart turned to the girl with, "You'll excuse me?" and left the room.

"What you do wid her?" demanded the half-breed, as the two walked to the rear of the building.

"What can we do, Omar? She's got to stay until the wind drops."

"You don't know Louis LeBlond," muttered Bolwert, ominously. "Eef she stay here dis night it mean troubl' for you and me."

"All right, let it come, then!" angrily answered the trader. "A little more won't hurt us. We can't get her home tonight in that seventeen-foot petyboro, and we can't put her out in the bush, can we? She's got to stay here. If he wants to make trouble—let it come!"

Stuart left the half-breed and entered the house. "Miss LeBlond," he said, "there's no trail alongshore, and there's a swamp at the outlet where you'd be eaten alive by mosquitoes. To start with our small canoe means filling, in a mile or two!"

She studied him with sober face; then, thick brows knotted in a mock frown, she demanded: "You're not trying to deceive me, are you?"

"What have you thrown into your hands? Oh, sir, somewhere in your black heart there must linger a trace of pity, of honor. Spare my tender youth!"

With a muttered exclamation of irritation, he turned to the window and gazed out where the running seas grayed in the fading twilight.

"Well, anyway, whether you're a villain or not," she continued, "I don't intend to swamp in that lake in the dark and get wet again. Oh-h-h! It was cold! It makes me shiver to think of it. And besides," her eyes flashed with humor, "suppose my what-you-call-'ems, my gibo-dig-wason, shrank? What should I do?"

"They knew you took a canoe?"

"Yes, but they may think I landed on an island and couldn't get back. By the way, do you happen to have such a thing as a cigarette? Mine were water soaked."

"Yes, such as they are. But you'll find them pretty poor." He went to his bedroom and returned with a package.

"Now," she said, when he had given her a light and filled his pipe, "tell me about yourself."

"There's not much to interest a lady from Winnipeg."

"Try me. You came here three years ago to start a post for the Hudson's Bay company. I know that much. Father was here first, for his North-West Trading company, and, naturally, didn't like it. I've heard so many terrible things about you, that I've been gasping to learn just how much of a liar Paul Paradis was."

"So—Paradis has been blackening my reputation, has he?"

"Blackening is mild to what he's told me about the factor at Sunset House. You came from God's lake, didn't you? Well, it seems you left a very dark and mysterious past up there, Mr. Stuart, according to Paul."

"Oh, very! I'm really a terrible man, Miss LeBlond. Hadn't we better have Sarah in here as chaperone?"

She laughed as she shook her head. "From what I've seen of Sarah, I'd wager she's on guard now, waiting to rescue you from the woman with the gibo-dig-wason. No, Paul Paradis didn't impress me. He made you too black. Father is quite different. He intends to beat you but he's sorry for you—sent here by your people on a forlorn hope."

Stuart's features hardened. Forlorn hope? His features hardened. Forlorn hope? His features hardened. Forlorn hope?

"This Paradis—did he tell you anything of his own past?"

"Oh, trust Paul for that! Most romantic and mysterious—if one were to believe him. Why, what do you know about him?"

An enigmatic smile was Stuart's reply. "You do know something, eh? Well, I'm sure father does, too; but the man exploring its by-ways, testing whatever of interest it had to give.

"Little as this country can offer to a young woman curious of life," he observed, "I managed to provide you with one first-class thrill this afternoon."

"Two!" she corrected, her eyes suddenly grave with sincerity. "I was both drowned today—and saved!"

"You mean you were saved from drowning?"

She leaned toward him. "No, I learned what it is to despair—and I learned what it means to have life given back to me." The eyes of the girl misted. In the intensity of her feeling her lower lip trembled.

"You did that—gave me back my life! I did not thank you—made light of it. But I do thank you now!"

His face flushed; his gray eyes shifted uneasily under the poignancy of her dark gaze.

"It was easy enough—nothing," he avoided. "We were lucky to see you—that's all."

She shook her head. "I saw how you had to fight to reach me." Then with a shrug she shed her gravity as one sheds a coat. "Now tell me about yourself, Mr. Joem Stuart."

But Stuart did not dwell long on his early life in Hudson's Bay posts with the father who had died at God's lake. Avoiding the girl's live interest in his three years with the Canadian Expeditionary Force, he talked of the coming of the Hudson's Bay company to the Lake of the Sand Beaches, and the building of Sunset House.

"It sounds rather like a forlorn hope, doesn't it? I heard that your father thought it a great joke—said I knew what I was doing when I named it. It wouldn't last any longer than the setting sun."

"I don't think father knows you—very well," she said with conviction. Their talk was checked by a knock on the outside door.

"What is it, Omar?" demanded the trader, with some irritation, for his evening with the daughter of his rival was proving most agreeable.

"Come outside; I show you something."

Leaving his guest, Stuart went out into the wind with the half-breed.

"Look!" Omar pointed through the murk up the lake shore.

On a point, far up the shore, like fireflies in the dusk, a light flashed—then another.

"They hunt for her," added the half-breed, significantly.

"Yes, we must let them know she's here," agreed Stuart. "Take a lantern and see if you can signal them."

Returning to his quarters, Stuart announced: "They've crossed the lake to search the north shore for you. We can see their lights."

"Poor dad! He must be frantic," she said soberly; then her lip curled in a faint smile. "It's early, yet. Too bad to spoil our nice talk, isn't it?"

"It is," he agreed, "but think of your poor father."

"Oh, I do. I love him, you know. He's all I've got."

"Well, it'll be some time before Omar attracts their attention. All my men are up the lake with the freight canoes and my small petyboro would fill tonight. Your father must have crossed in a big boat. There's nothing to do but wait for him."

"Then I shall have another cigarette, and we can talk until they come."

Was she strangely callous, he wondered, or totally without nerves, that she could calmly curl herself in a chair and smoke while her desperate father and his men hunted a rocky shore, white with surf, for her canoe and drowned body? Most women would have paced the clearing outside in a frenzy of excitement. In all likelihood this vivid creature, who for a few hours had shared the hospitality of Sunset House, would never again cross his path. In the autumn she would return to the world outside, and, in the meantime, in spite of LeBlond's gratitude, the rivalry between the trading posts and the open hos-teel between the company servants would prevent Stuart's seeing her. "Let me see," she was saying, "I'm to be here six, seven weeks more. How am I to endure that Paradis all the time?"

"You might get your father to send him to Fort Hope," he suggested. "That's a good idea! I'll do it." Then her black brows drew together as she added suggestively: "But you know, Mr. Joem Stuart, I'm going to be lonely for some one to talk to."

"So am I, Miss Aurora LeBlond."

"Well, the answer is obvious. We'll talk to each other."

He shook his head. "I can't come to your father's place. There'd be war. You'll have to swamp again in the lake," he suggested with a grin.

"What? Wait that long? The wind might not blow for days."

Omar's dark face, following a call outside, appeared at the door. "Day build fire wen dey see my lantern. I think a boat follow de shore, now."

"Let's go and see," the girl suggested.

With the wash of the surf on the boulders of the shore and the drive of the wind through the neighboring forest in their ears, they stood on the beach, peering into the black night. Shortly, a light blinked through the murk.

"It's a lantern—in a canoe," explained Stuart. "They're coming for you."

He felt her hand on his arm—felt her wind-blown hair on his face as he bent to hear what she said. His blood stirred at her touch.

"When will they get here?" she called through her cupped hands.

"Soon, now."

"Let's go back and talk until they come!"

So the two returned to the house while the sullen Omar waited on the beach.

"You know that little island—I think it's the one farthest to the east—with all the rocks and boulders on the shore?" she asked.

"Yes."

"You remember that split rock which stands partly in the water? Well, if you were to look behind that rock, some day, you might find a note from a very much bored person—that is, if you cared to go there and look."

Stuart thrilled at the thought of what her words implied. She wanted to see him again—wanted to talk to him. Then the hopelessness of the situation—the sheer recklessness of attempting to meet the daughter of LeBlond secretly—forced itself upon him.

"You mean you would paddle there—some day—alone?" Stuart asked, wondering what manner of girl this was who so lightly put her trust in a stranger.

"Perhaps I should so far forget myself," she replied archly, "if I found an answer to my note."

"Try me!" he urged, reckless of the outcome in his desire to see again this girl so vividly alive, so baffling to his curiosity.

Her dark eyes flashed the challenge. "You will be bored, too?"

"How can I help being bored—after today?"

"You're improving." A red lip curled in satisfaction. "A little more training and you'll be—"

The yelping of dogs and the sound of voices outside, above the beat of wind, stopped her.

"Here they are! He's coming—dear old dad!"

Stuart stepped to the door to meet the man who had, the winter before, down on the railroad at Wabigoon, boasted openly that two years would see the end of Sunset House.

"Aurora, my girl? She is here?" The agitated LeBlond, delicious with joy at the news given him at the shore by Omar, pushed past the man who opened the door. "Aurora, my child! Ma cherie!"

"Dad! Mon pauvre pere! Good old dad!"

As the trader took his daughter in his arms, in a swift glance Jim Stuart's curious eyes measured the rival he had never seen. LeBlond was little taller than the girl, but the set of the iron-gray head on the square shoulders of the bold nose and chin of the dark profile suggested the force and daring which his reputation had given him. Closing the door behind him, Stuart remained outside with the two men who had followed LeBlond to the house. In blackness the Hudson's Bay man could not see the faces of the blurred shapes beside him. Then the door opened and LeBlond called them inside.

Look Up Your Copy of "Alice in Wonderland"

So conscientious was Doctor Dodgson (Lewis Carroll) about his books giving full value in good workmanship for the money paid for them that, when the printings of the drawings in the first edition of "Alice in Wonderland" proved defective he set down and wrote purchasers (getting the names from a list supplied by his publishers) his personal apologies. These letters further said that he had made arrangements for the exchange of perfect copies for these first defective issues.

Those who sent in the badly printed first editions got nice new copies in which the ink was properly spread over the Sir John Tenniel illustrations. But they made bad bargains.

It was for two of these "defectives," and the handwritten manuscript by Lewis Carroll, that Eldridge B. Johnson paid $160.00.

And those who threw away the author's letter of apology and regret were also out of luck.

any such letter offered on the open market would bring enough to make a good stab at shooing the wolf from the door.—Detroit News.

Translation Called For

A little while ago we printed some lines showing the queer words one comes across while "foresacking round in the dictionary." Apropos, a lady in Florida sends us the following brief exercise in unusual English. Some of our readers may enjoy translating it into the vernacular.

"He abetted his glasses with an insouciant air amid the apopemptics of his fellows, and was enough of a sciolist, now that he was manumitted, to enjoy it as he would the sapidity of a ripe peach."—Boston Transcript.

The Sequoia forest, untroubled by the rise and fall of nations, unconscious of the sulphurous depths of passion and woe of the human spirit, unchanged by the cataclysmic changes in the world of human thought, mercifully untouched even by terrestrial cataclysms that overwhelmed many a mountain and plain, scattered its golden pollen in the spring, its ripened cones in the fall; sang its inimitable, dreamy song when the winds passed through it.

Almost within sound of its "hushing" great civilizations came to maturity and sank into the soil—so deep that the youngest, even now, is inarticulate.—Alice Day Pratt in the Atlantic Monthly.

Case of "Some Baby"

The sheriff in a small Indiana town had arrested a woman who was wanted for house breaking in a neighboring city. As there was a handsome reward offered for the guilty party, there was considerable speculation in regard to the possibility of the local officer's "bringing home the bacon." On his return from delivering his prisoner to the city authorities, the sheriff was questioned as to the outcome of his trip.

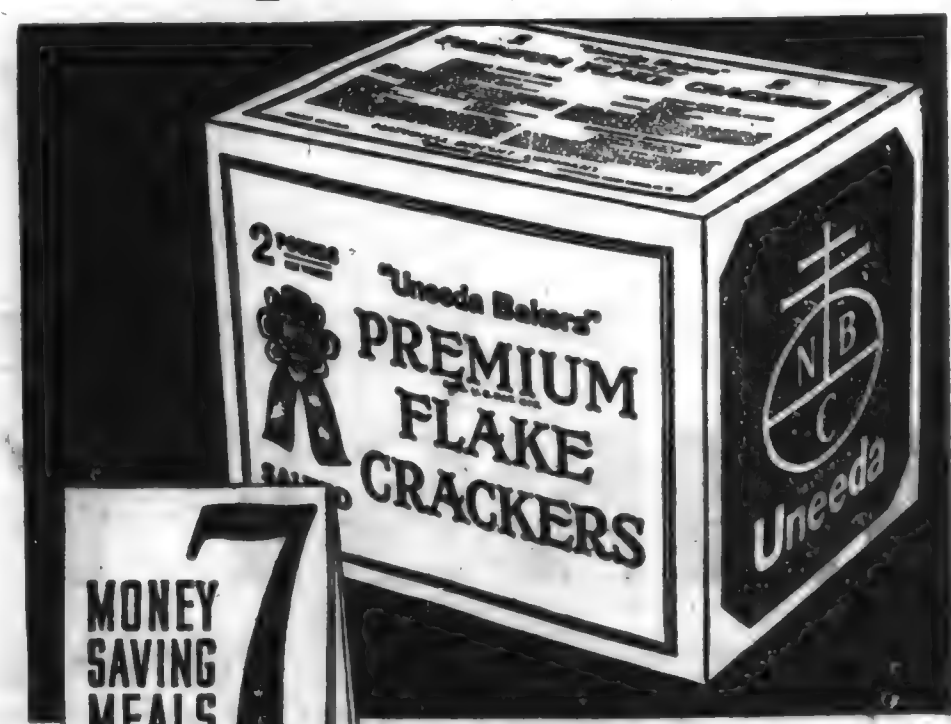

"Aw, there wasn't nuthin' to it," he explained disgustedly. "I thought I had her dead to rights but blamed if she didn't prove a lullaby."

Lesson for October 2

THE CHRISTIAN'S DEVOTIONAL LIFE

GOLDEN TEXT—But grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. To him be glory now and for ever.
LESSON TEXT—Matthew 6:15-16; Daniel 8:10; II Timothy 1:14-15.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Talking to God.
JUNIOR TOPIC—What Real Prayer Is.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Christian's Devotional Life.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Means of Christian Growth.

The Christian's growth is by means of his devotional life. It requires the symmetrical development of his understanding and heart. Bible study and prayer go hand in hand. The believer's affections need proper direction and exercise.

1. The Christian's Prayer Life (Matt. 6:6-13).

In Christ's teaching in this passage on prayer we note:

1. False prayer (vv. 5-7). This consists:

a. In one praying to be seen and heard of men (v. 5). Many prayers uttered in public are false, for the supreme consideration is what the people think rather than what God thinks. Men who thus pray get a reward but not from God.

b. In using vain repetitions (vv. 7, 8). This does not mean that we should ask but once for the thing desired, for we have examples of Christ and Paul praying three times for the same thing (Matt. 26:39-40; II Cor. 12:7, 8); but rather that the use of meaningless repetitions, repetitions of empty sentences be avoided.

2. True prayer (v. 8). Real prayer is communion of the child of God with his heavenly Father. Life for its fullest development needs both solitude and companionship. God, our Creator, knew what our natures require. Therefore, he commands both public and private prayer (Heb. 10:25; Matt. 6:6).

3. The model prayer (vv. 9-13). This was given in response to the disciples' request that the Lord would teach them to pray (Luke 11:1).

a. A right relationship—"Our Father" (v. 9). Only those who have become children of God by faith in Jesus Christ can pray aright.

b. A right attitude—"Hallowed be thy name" (vv. 9, 10). When one realizes that he has been delivered from the power of darkness and translated into the kingdom of his dear Son (Col. 1:13) by being a child of God, he cannot help pouring out his soul in gratitude and praise, intensely longing for the kingdom, the righteous rule of Christ on the earth.

c. A right spirit (vv. 11-13). This spirit involves:

(1) Trust which looks to God for the supply of daily need. We are dependent upon him for our daily food. With all man's boasted progress he cannot make a harvest.

(2) The spirit of love which results in forgiveness of others. God will not listen to the prayers of one who has an unforgiving spirit.

(3) That of holiness which moves one to pray and not to be led into temptation and moves him to long to be delivered from the Evil One.

(4) Regular prayer (Dan. 6:10). Though prohibited by royal decree from asking a petition from any god or man except the king, Daniel did not depart from his regular custom of prayer to God three times a day.

11. The Christian's Bible Study (II Tim. 3:14-17).

This scripture exhibits the value of the Holy Scriptures. Devotional life undirected by the Scriptures will develop in a wrong direction. The affections need to be disciplined through the understanding.

1. The Scriptures able to make one wise unto salvation (v. 15). Salvation is in Christ alone. It is secured through faith in his finished work on the cross. True wisdom leads to Christ crucified since "there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:12), "and without shedding of blood is no remission" (Heb. 9:22).

2. The Scriptures discipline the life (vv. 16, 17). In the Scriptures doctrine is set forth, the standard of conduct which is absolutely needed. The only place to find God's standard of life is in his Holy Word. It not only exhibits the divine standard, but it reproves; that is, refutes error. The way to deal with error is not denunciation, but the positive presentation of truth. Then, too, it corrects; that is, sets straight many of the dislocations of personal and social conduct. The Word of God not only sets straight, but instructs in righteousness and equips for service.

GEMS OF THOUGHT

If you expect to get to heaven you must go in that direction.

Do not pray for easy lives; pray to be stronger men and women.

If I take care of my character, my reputation will take care of itself.

It is one thing to see the way you should go, and quite another to go the way you see.

Gran Chaco Known as Land of Death

Where Bolivia, Paraguay and Argentina join on the map of South America lies the Gran Chaco, a steaming, insect-swarming triangle 600 miles by 800 between the Paraguay and Pilcomayo rivers.

Julian Duguid, British explorer, has described the Pilcomayo as "a vast, foul-smelling, oozy stretch of bog with as much movement as an unqueezed sponge. . . . An Englishman may obtain some insight into the discomfort of penetration into the Chaco if he locks himself into a hothouse, waters the flowers, closes all the windows, and allows a blinding sun to shine through the glass while he rides a stationary bicycle. Even then he will not be bothered by insects."

The worst insects are then, vicious black flies that hang in dark clouds in the air. There are also poisonous snakes, jaguars and piranhas (carnivorous fish). Despite the dampness, water holes are 15 to 40 miles apart.

This is the land over which Bolivia and Paraguay have squabbled since 1879. Paraguay wants the Chaco because the district is larger than the rest of their country and its jungles contain great growths of the quebracho tree, whose bark yields 80 per cent tannin.—Time Magazine.

Better bend the neck than bruise the forehead.

Nation's Largest Ranch
The largest singly owned ranch in the United States is the King's ranch, at Kingville, Texas, which comprises 1,280,000 acres of land. This ranch borders the Gulf of Mexico for 100 miles and more than 100,000 calves are branded on it each season. Kingville is a town of about 5,000 people and is the center of this vast estate, which is largely supported by the industries of the ranch.—Washington Star.

The Cinema Influence
Youth (pointing out lovely bather)—There, isn't she a peach? She knocks all the rest of the girls down here silly.
Friend—Ha! a real flatter-er! blond!—Humorist (London).

Mercollized Wax Keeps Skin Young

Get an ounce and use as directed. Fine particles of gold skin peel off until all surface such as pimples, liver spots, tan and freckles disappear. Skin is then soft and velvety. Your face looks years younger. Mercollized wax brings out the hidden beauty of your skin. You receive, besides, one ounce Mercollized Rosaline dissolved in one-half pint which has a skin softener.

Strawberry Baths in Paris
Beauty-culture experts in Paris are advising their clients to take baths in strawberry juice for beauty. Many who cannot afford such expensive treatments are rubbing their faces with large ripe strawberries. One berry a day is sufficient for this method.

WARNING to PROPERTY OWNERS

TODAY a letter came to my desk that deeply impressed me. It was written by a woman—the mother in a typical American family. Her little home had been saved from foreclosure by a coat of new paint, for which a part of their meager savings had been paid.

Those few gallons of fresh paint had so revived the appearance and enhanced the value of the property that the mortgagee had consented to renew the loan . . . and the little home was saved.

I could not help thinking of the thousands of homes and buildings that are shabby and unattractive today due to several years of neglected painting; of the millions of home owners who, because of reduced incomes and enforced economy, have been obliged to sacrifice painting for taxes, interest, assessments, to say nothing of food, clothing, heat and other essentials of comfort and health.

You have seen these paint-starved houses and buildings, as have I. They are everywhere about you. Perhaps your home is included.

Do you understand what they signify? Do you realize what will happen to wood or metal that is literally naked of paint if these houses and buildings face the attack of another season of rain, snow, ice, and frost?

Never in the history of our country has the situation been paralleled. Property owners face an added burden of expense amounting to millions of dollars for repairs and replacements next spring.

And the crisis, in my opinion, will be reached this coming winter when paint of four, five, and even six years exposure to the weather will be unable to resist the elements—when badly weathered wood and metal will be easy prey for rot, rust and decay.

Today the big question facing thousands of property owners is plain. It is "paint or pay." Either you must invest a little this fall in new paint or you must take the risk of paying many times the cost of paint to repair the damage done by rot, rust and decay this winter.

Even at the sacrifice of other things, have your house or buildings completely repainted now. No investment you can make will pay better dividends. And nothing you can buy will make you and your family feel so uplifted and cheerful.

If you cannot arrange to do a complete repainting job now, at least give the badly weathered places a coat or two of protecting paint.

Look especially, to the window sills, thresholds, outdoor porches and steps; the joints of porch railings and palings; the bases of pillars; the edges of eaves; the roof; the gutters and down spouts. These are the vital spots where water lodges—where ice and frost settle—where rot and rust attack first.

A few dollars' worth of good paint, applied now, will protect these vital spots—will tide you over this crucial winter. And it will probably save you a much greater expense for repairs and replacements next spring and summer.

Under existing conditions, you may be tempted to buy a cheap paint because of its low price. I hope you will not make this costly mistake.

Even on sound lumber, inferior paint is a poor bargain. But on weathered wood, which is very porous, such paint is worse than useless. It gives you a false feeling of security and leaves you without protection.

Prices of well-known, established brands of paint are now the lowest in fifteen years. Enough good, dependable paint can be purchased for a few dollars to protect all the badly weathered surfaces on your building.

Again I repeat, do a complete job this fall if you can. But at least do the vital exposed places before it is "too late."

"The GOLD AND BLACK"

Sponsored by Sophomore English Class of the St. Joe (Ind.) High School

Editor in Chief ..... John Kaelner
Assistant Editor ..... Jean Goodwin
Vol. 1. No. 1 ..... Thursday, September 29, 1932

Sophomores Start Paper

For a period of several years the St. Joe High School has had no school paper. This year, through the courtesy of Mr. F. B. Leighty and the aid of Miss Borthwick, the Sophomore English Class is planning to start things off in a big way by publishing The Gold and Black each week.

To make it more interesting the class has been divided into two groups, each trying hard to get the largest number of lines by the end of the first semester. The losers, of course, will have to pay the bill. If there is any news lurking around the corners of St. Joe High School these reporters will be sure to find it.

Watch for The Gold and Black each week.

Grade Activities

Estella Hart, from the second grade is quite ill with yellow jaundice.

Every child in the primary room is responsible for some certain duty in the care of the room. Some of the duties are the care of the tables, chairs, library, blackboard, chalk and erasers, plants, cloakroom, pictures, and sandtable.

The first grade has been making number and word booklets.

Mrs. Oberlin was on the sick list Friday, and Mrs. Guilford was asked to take her place.

The pupils of the fifth and sixth grades have made some very good free hand maps. Next week they will put on a salt and flour preparation and paint them.

Biology Teacher: What is an antler?
Student: It is the horn of a buck deer.

Seventh grade boy: Is the test all we have for today in Arithmetic?

Classes Organize

The Seniors have organized their class for the coming year. The following people were elected: Kenneth Gaff, president; John Woodcox, vice president; Enid Curie, secretary; Robert Wiers, treasurer. They have selected...

The Junior class of 1932 is composed of seventeen members, nine boys and eight girls. The first class meeting was held September 14, resulting in the election of Keith Dailey for president, Ethelmae Freeburn vice-president, Helen Like secretary, and John Dille treasurer. As a result of a later meeting, Mr. Noffsinger was elected sponsor, and it was decided that the vice president would have charge of the various committees. The monthly class dues are to be fifteen cents.

The Sophomores had an election of officers last Friday, electing Keith Davis president, Merlin Simanton vice president, Kenneth Ridgway secretary, and Violet Baker treasurer. No sponsor has been elected as yet.

Students Migrate to Fair

The St. Joe school building was nearly deserted on Wednesday due to the fact that one hundred and seventy-five Hicksville fair tickets were given to the St. Joe school children for that day. Those not having ways to get to Hicksville were taken by Mr. Cochran in the school bus Wednesday noon.

Another Victory

St. Joe's baseball team has been doing fine. They played Waterloo two games and won both. September 16 the team went to Waterloo and won an easy game of 21 to 4. Friday afternoon Waterloo visited St. Joe and played the return game. Waterloo put up a good fight but St. Joe won 11 to 8. This game ends the baseball season for this semester—and then comes basket ball!

Here Comes the Band

The prospects for the band activities are very great this year. The band, under the direction of Mr. Woodcox, consists of twenty-two members. They played at Reservoir Park at Fort Wayne last Sunday, September 25. Their next public appearance will be at the P. T. A. next Tuesday night. The octet, a division of the band, will play and sing at Auburn next week.

The Girls' Chorus, consisting of twenty-four members, will start their rehearsals next week under the direction of Mr. Woodcox. Miss Poland spent the weekend with her parents near North Manchester, Indiana.

NEWS SUPPLEMENT

Thursday, Sept. 29, 1932.

DEPRESSION PRAYER

One remedy for the depression and, incidentally, for some other human tribulations, that has a large following, but that never is advertised in the headlines, is proposed by twenty-six Protestant churches acting through the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ of America. This is a call to their 23,000,000 members to a week of prayer and penitence from October 3 to 8 for having worshiped at the shrines of such "false gods" as money, materialism, individualism and social injustice. The presiding officials, in their summons, say:

"In many areas within the church there is urgent desire for a religious awakening. On every hand thoughtful Christians feel that the root of our trouble is moral and spiritual. . . . We have worshiped at the shrines of false gods—the false god of mammon, money, things; the false god of power, production, bigness; the false god of nationalism, individualism, social injustice; the false god of pleasure, amusement, disregard for things and times sacred; the false god of success, high living, careless thinking; the false god of magic, reaping where we had not sowed, profiting where we had not toiled. . . . Only a national turning to God in repentance and moral restitution seeking His divine forgiveness, will restore the spiritual health of our people. . . . No social or political revival can come out of spiritual destitution, and no national awakening can arise out of religious indifference."

The past shows that times of material plenty have robbed the churches of their vigor, and that years of adversity have restored to them their primitive enthusiasm and have increased the size of congregations. This call from a united group of Protestant churches is indicative that they recognize that now they are called to leadership and it implies that they feel that the people will follow them now far more readily than in days of material prosperity.

No plans for such an observance has been announced for St. Joe as yet. Harlan has the full week's plans made by the ministers for such an observance.

Local Briefs

Sam Betz was a Sunday guest in the Curtis Hursey home.

Mrs. Ruth Davis stepped on a nail last Friday and has been laid up for several days since.

Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Thornton spent several days last week with his sister in Forest Park and her sister in Lindenwood, Illinois.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Buckingham spent from Sunday until Tuesday at Lake Pleasant in the Zollars cottage, with Fort Wayne friends.

A change in train schedules took effect Sunday, when No. 1, on the Wabash came in at 11:04 instead of 11:38, and the B. & O. No. 9 arrives at 4:10 instead of 4:05. There are mail trains.

A sample of Spanish onions was brought to The News office last week by Clifford Milliman and they are of exceptional size. He had fairly good luck with them this year and they are in demand by those who have used them before.

Clinton Camfield and son, Neal of Charlotte, Mich., have purchased a 120 acre farm in Allen county known as the Miller farm, now occupied by a Mr. Walter. They expect to get moved this fall and brought some articles of furniture on this trip.

W. H. Garrison and family moved last week, a portion of their goods to Angola and will open a student boarding house. Milton will remain here until the new school house at Angola is ready for the high school, which will be about the middle of October.

There are 4,962 pupils enrolled in the schools of Noble county. Kendallville heads the list with 1,212 including 460 in the high school, 672 in the grades, and 90 in the St. John's Lutheran parochial school. At Ligonier, there are 141 in the high school and 272 in the grades.

An increase of 186 in public school enrollment in Allen county outside Fort Wayne over the opening month's figures last year was reported Thursday. A total of 6,667 pupils are enrolled in public grade and high schools of the county now, as compared to 6,481 enrolled at the end of September last year.

Elza R. Kinsey has been appointed by Judge Endicott as guardian of Rosa Mae Smith, 20, to succeed the late Wm. Curie and qualified by filing $1,000 bond, with F. R. Bowman and Willard L. Hurni as sureties. Mr. Curie was appointed guardian in 1930 and the inventory showed the ward to be the owner of $629.78 in cash.

The Allen county tax levy for next year will be an even 29 cents. The rate was fixed by the county council late Friday afternoon after it had devoted four days to cutting the budget to the bone. The reduction of the budget was one of the most drastic in the history of the county. The rate as originally advertised was 52 cents.

Because of discontinuance of the New York Central train on the Fort Wayne to Jackson branch, a star mail route will be established, starting at Fort Wayne and meeting each town terminating at Montgomery, Mich. The mail will leave Fort Wayne at 6 in the morning and arrive at 8 in the evening. Russell Burnier has the contract, starting Monday this week.

Clarence Han, electrical appliance salesman for the Indiana & Michigan Electric Co., has filed an action for malicious prosecution in the DeKalb circuit court, against Donald M. Campbell of Auburn. The demand is for $1,000. Han states that false statements were made by Campbell about him and that it has caused him mental agony and has been damaged in the above sum.

STATEMENT OF THE OWNERSHIP, MANAGEMENT, CIRCULATION, ETC.,
REQUIRED BY THE ACT OF CON-GRESS OF AUGUST 24, 1912.

Of St. Joe News, published weekly at St. Joe, Indiana, for October 1, 1932.

Before me, a Notary Public, and for the state and county aforesaid, personally appeared Fred B. Leighty, who, having been duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that he is the Editor and Publisher of the St. Joe News, and that the following is, to the best of his knowledge and belief, a true statement of the ownership, management, etc., of the aforesaid publication for the date shown in the above caption, required by the Act of August 24, 1912, enacted in section 443, Postal Laws and Regulations, printed on the reverse of this form, to wit:

Editor, Fred B. Leighty, St. Joe, Ind.

Managing Editor, Fred B. Leighty, St.
Joe, Ind.

1. That the names and addresses of the publisher, editor, managing editor, and business manager are:

Publisher, Fred B. Leighty, St. Joe,
Business Manager, Fred B. Leighty,
St. Joe, Ind.

2. That the owners are:

Fred B. Leighty, St. Joe, Ind.

3. That the known bondholders, mortgagees, and other security holders owning or holding 1 per cent or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities are:

None.

4. That the two paragraphs next above, giving the names of the owners, stockholders, and security holders, if any, contain not only the list of stockholders and security holders as they appear upon the books of the company but also, in cases where the stockholder or security holder appears upon the books of the company as trustee or in any other fiduciary relation, the name of the person or corporation for whom such trustee is acting, is given; also that the said two paragraphs contain statements embracing affiant's full knowledge and belief as to the circumstances and conditions under which stockholders and security holders who do not appear upon the books of the company as trustees, hold stock and securities in a capacity other than that of a bona fide owner; and this affiant has no reason to believe that any other person, association, or corporation has any interest direct or indirect in the said stock, bonds, or other securities than as so stated by him.

FORMER ST. JOE
FARMER KILLED

Roy McMillen, 52, Was Killed
Near Ney, Ohio, Friday;
Funeral Monday

The following article is taken from the Defiance Crescent-News of last Saturday, giving the detailed information of the death of Roy McMillen, who will be remembered by St. Joe friends, as having lived on the John Davis farm near town some few years ago.

"Harl Lehman, Republican candidate for surveyor in Paulding county, was under arrest today awaiting the inquest of Coroner Fred W. Watkins, Defiance, into the fatal accident which occurred
Friday afternoon at the intersection of State Routes 127 and 249, one and a half miles west of Ney.

"Sheriff Cloyd King arrested
Lehman late Friday when Coroner Watkins learned from witnesses that Lehman ignored the stop sign. Lehman drove his north bound machine broadside into the west bound car, killing the driver, Roy McMillen, 52, Continental farmer, and fracturing ribs for Mrs. McMillen.

"Coroner Watkins said that the inquest will be held when Mrs.
McMillen is able to be present.

"Indications were that manslaughter might be the finding of the inquest.

Grand Jury to Get Case
"If such a finding is made by the coroner, Prosecutor Edwin S.
Diehl said that the information will be presented to the grand jury. The jurors will convene Monday morning in regular session. If the coroner's inquest is completed in time, the case would be presented at the coming session. If not, Prosecutor Diehl indicated that the body might be recalled to hear the case.

"Coroner Watkins and Deputy
King informally questioned Mr. and Mrs. Charles Walker who reside at the intersection and to whose home Mr. and Mrs. Mc-Millen were removed after the crash; pupils of the Chickasaw school, and Teacher Hillard Koeppe.

"The body of Mr. McMillen was removed Friday night to the Caskey undertaking establishment at Oakwood. Mrs. McMillen was taken to her home, three and a half miles southwest of Continental.

"Funeral services for Mr. Mc-
Millen were held in Oakwood
Monday afternoon at 2 P. M., with Rev. C. A. Cantor, United Brethren pastor, officiating. Burial was made in Prairie Chapel cemetery.

Formerly Near Oakwood

"Mr. and Mrs. McMillen had lived on this farm for about a year. They moved there from a farm north of Oakwood. They are well known in the Oakwood and Continental communities, having lived in that territory for a number of years.

"Mr. McMillen leaves his widow; a son, Arlo McMillen, at home; his mother, Mrs. Martha McMillen, Oakwood; and two sisters, Mrs. Donna Horner and Mrs. Nellie Shialer, both of Oakwood.

Among the St. Joe people attending the funeral Monday were
Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Curle, Mrs.
Cora Curle and daughter, Lucille and Mrs. Harold Kraft of Spencerville.

LEIGHTY ORCHARD
DISPLAY AT FAIR

The Auburn Fair this week will attract practically the entire population for miles about. Displays of every kind will be seen and among them will be the Leighty Orchard, in a very unique display, depicting colonial days.

To those who call and are interested in apples, a folder will be presented giving one of the favorite recipes of Martha Washington for the making of a coddling tart. Several thousand of these folders were printed by The News for distribution to fair callers and orchard patrons. The cover is printed in the orchard's long established trademark, in red and black, and the folder is very attractive, and we hope will prove a valuable piece of advertising for the Leighty Orchard.

In attending the fair, be sure to look up the booth carrying the Leighty Orchard display.

Parcel Post rates increased the first of October.

The Josiah Farver 135 acre farm in Jackson township will be sold October 29 to the high bidder.

For Sale: Drywood, $2 cord, mostly hard sugar, delivered within 3 miles of woods. See Roy

Dr. Brunson, of Newville is suffering a severe heart attack.
It came upon him Thursday evening while reading the paper. His condition is serious.

The Cedar Creek bluff bridge on Road 427, south of the county line is being replaced with a new bridge, making it safe to pass.
The old bridge was narrow, and at the bottom of a steep grade.

Franklin Shuff, 5, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Shuff, is at Garrett Hospital, where he underwent an operation Sunday for appendicitis, and his condition is quite serious. The little fellow was sick for two days before the operation.

Frank A. Provines of Auburn has been appointed as acting balliff of the DeKalb circuit court. He takes the place of Wm. H. Hoagland, who had a leg amputated. Judge Endicott fixed
Mr. Provines' compensation at $3 a day.

The Culture Club starts its twenty-fourth year this week, meeting with its president, Mrs.
Esther Bowman. The ladies will study Benjamin A. Heydrick's book entitled "Types of the Short Story." The programs were printed by The News.

Robert Coburn, 21, son of Earl
Coburn, and Miss Ruth Schrader,
20, daughter of Edward Schrader of north of Concord, were granted a marriage license last Wednesday. Both are highly respected young people of the community and are graduates of our local high school.

One hundred and three pounds of strained honey was taken from the Merritt Sechler home last week. A swarm of bees found a hole in the siding and proceeded to lay up their winter's store. Mr.
Sechler discovered the bees some time ago when he started shingling his home. The work was not finished then.

C. M. Ten Eyck, senior member of the firm of Ten Eyck & Son, Auburn, was run down by a truck near his home last week, breaking his right leg below the hip.
The offender has not been apprehended. Later: Lester Zolman has been identified as the truck driver, but will not be held by authorities unless the injuries prove fatal to Mr. Ten Eyck.

County Treasurer, Merritt M.
Maxwell, urges that as many as can do so pay their taxes early.
The new delinquent laws passed by the last special session of the State Legislature, require that interest be figured on practically all delinquent taxes, and as this interest cannot be computed in advance but must be done on the date that it is paid, tax collection will necessarily be slowed up during the last rush days. By paying early you will avoid waiting in line so long and at the same time help us to better serve you.

Col. A. P. Melton, member of the state highway commission, who was responsible for the state taking over Roads No. 1 and 8 in DeKalb county, was stricken with a heart attack at Gary, where he had made a talk at a Democratic rally, and died at his home a few hours later. He was a World War veteran.

Everyone is invited to attend the revival which will be conducted by Ralph Kniesly in the room over Hurn's Grocery, starting Oct. 9 at 2 P. M. Special music and singing will be features of the meetings. The churches of this community are invited to furnish special music at any time and are asked to pray in the interests of this meeting, as it will be appreciated by the evangelist.

SYNOPSIS

From his fur post, Sunset House, in a Canadian north, Jim Stuart, trader in charge, sights an overturned canoe in the lake. With his headman, Omar, he rescues the drifter, who proves to be Aureole LeBlond, daughter of his rival in the fur business. Made comfortable at the post, Aureole proves to be a charming companion. Exchanging badinage, she and Jim arrange to exchange notes on a certain island. LeBlond, with Paradis, his unscrupulous half-breed lieutenant, arrives in search of the missing girl.

CHAPTER I—Continued

With a voice hoarse with feeling, he said, with a slight trace of accent: "Mr. Stuart, my daughter says she owes her life to you and your man."

As they faced him, the striking resemblance in feature and expression between father and daughter impressed the man who entered the room followed by Renault and Paradis. The girl was the true daughter of Louis LeBlond.

"Luckily, we happen to see her," deprecated Stuart.

"Yes, but she tells me that her strength was gone—she had already given up, when she saw you," LeBlond impulsively grasped the hand of the man who studied him. "We are rivals in business; it cannot be helped. But what you have done for my child I will not forget."

In a corner of the room the slim Paradis, dark as a half-breed, talked excitedly to the thick-set Renault, across whose swart face a knife slash had left a livid scar.

"It was nothing," replied Stuart. "I happened to see her canoe. That was all. You owe me nothing, sir." As he spoke, Paradis left Renault and whispered in LeBlond's ear.

"My house is at your disposal," continued Stuart. "Will you and your daughter stay here tonight?" The eyes of the speaker hardened as he went on. "The gentleman who is whispering to you, and Renault, here, are welcome to sleep in the tradehouse. You can't cross the lake against this wind."

The somewhat small but regular features of Paradis darkened in a scowl at the thrust, but he continued his whispering. Slowly a look of doubt—of perplexity—crept into LeBlond's eyes, but with a gesture of irritation he waved aside the insistent Paradis. Turning, he spoke rapidly in French to his daughter, who replied vehemently, her courageous black eyes flashing in anger as she faced her father.

"Mr. Stuart," said the patently embarrassed LeBlond, "you—found her in the afternoon?"

"Yes," in a flash Stuart sensed what was coming—what Paradis had been whispering.

"And you let us hunt the lake through six hours of daylight—hunt for her, thinking she was drowned?" LeBlond spoke more in regret than in anger.

"Why didn't you send word?" added Paradis with a sneer.

"Father!" The blood rose to Aureole LeBlond's temples. "Are you crazy? Do you know what you're saying? Is this your gratitude?" The eyes of the girl flamed with indignation. "Mr. Stuart wanted to take me home, but I wouldn't go. There was only the small canoe here, and I was afraid—afraid of that lake. And this is your thanks to him! Oh, I'm ashamed of you—ashamed of you all!"

The enraged factor of Sunset House was near the end of his self-control as he faced LeBlond. "You see fit to quibble over my actions today, I've nothing to explain. You found out what the lake was out there, when you crossed with the wind in your big canoe. My large boats are bringing up my stuff, and I'm alone with one man. I don't like your insinuations! You can't take your daughter back to-night, and I offered you my quarters—such as they are. But, as for this whispering assistant of yours, I take back my offer. He can't stay here!" The speaker's voice snapped like a brittle stick. "You understand English, don't you, Paradis?"

The room was silent. In the glance of the girl as she watched Jim's eyes blacken with anger, was amusement and approval.

With a swift movement the enraged Paradis jerked his hand back to his belt; but the squat Renault's fingers gripped his arm. The working features of LeBlond reflected his warring emotions. This man who had saved his daughter had also flagrantly affronted his friend. For a space his sense of gratitude and his loyalty to Paradis strove for mastery as he looked into the cold eyes which challenged his. Then he found his voice.

"You have insulted us, here, in your own house," he burst out. "We want no hospitality from you. Then, as if ashamed, went on: 'Oh, I'm grateful—I know what I owe you; but we'll bid you good-night. Come Aureole!'"

His answer from the girl was contemptuous laughter. "Oh, you men are so funny—so funny!" she cried. "So ridiculous! Because Mr. Stuart knocked down our Paul Paradis, and Paul fills your ears with a fool idea of word not being sent ten miles against that wind and sea, you forget that I'd be down there with the fish tonight if it hadn't been for Omar and Mr. Stuart. Pah! You men are all fools!"

She was serious now, her scornful gaze over-awing her father's uneasy eyes. In frank admiration Stuart watched her as she waited for LeBlond's reply.

"I thank you for what you did for her," said LeBlond at length, turning defeated from the accusing eyes of his daughter. "Come, Aureole!"

Paradis and Renault sullenly left the room while the trader waited at the door for the girl who had not moved.

"So you think, because of the hurt feelings of your pretty Paul, I'll spend the night in front of a fire, with my back against a tree?" she replied.

"Well, I will not!"

Over the bold features of LeBlond crept an expression of helplessness—of impotence. It was patent to Stuart that this trader, whose energy and determination were bywords in the fur trade, was not the master of the girl who now faced him.

"I shall accept Mr. Stuart's offered hospitality," she continued. "As for you, mon pere, you can stay and help old Sarah, the cook, guard the

"And This Is Your Thanks to Him! Oh, I'm Ashamed of You—Ashamed of You All!"

sacred honor of your precious daughter—or you can leave her to Sarah and go and sit by your fire. I stay here. Do you understand English, Monsieur LeBlond?"

In the end, LeBlond and his daughter passed the night in the quarters of Stuart while the indignant Sarah tossed through sleepless hours, outraged by the thought that the roof above her should shelter the enemy who had boasted that the wolves should soon howl in the deserted clearing of Sunset House.

CHAPTER II

Six years before, when the boat brigade of the North-West Trading company, in command of one of the partners, Louis LeBlond, had passed through Lake Expansé on the trail to Mitawangama, the Ojibwa, who were camped at Pelican portage on the way south to the spring trade with the Hudson's Bay company, had been greatly excited. Turning in to the camp, LeBlond's head voyageur, Black Jules Renault, had announced in their native tongue that a trading station was to be built on the great Lake of the Sand Beaches two hundred miles north. Never again need they take the long trail south to Lake Expansé, but in the next long snows would find a warm welcome—a New Year's feast—and the best of trade goods ready for exchange for their furs at the new post.

In three years LeBlond had made serious inroads into the trade of the old company. He no longer could be

Goat Ranked Above Cow in Mountainous Lands

Although they keep themselves distinct and appear to affect disdain one for the other, sheep and goats are, and apparently always have been, pastured together, the goats eating the brush and roughage which the more tender-mouthed sheep will not touch.

In rough, rocky mountainous districts as is a great part of the land of Canada, the goat is a more serviceable animal than the cow, more agile and wonderfully sure footed, content to wander about and pick a mouthful here and there, able to live without much more moisture than the heavy dews supply, long-lived, and generally free from sickness, especially from contagious diseases. They thrive best in the higher altitudes, and the wild varieties which existed until comparatively recent days in Syria and about the Pyrenean mountains, are always sought on mountain tops. As the Psalmist says: "The high hills are a refuge for the wild goats." It is worth noting that among all his riches of flocks and herds, Job counted no goats, as was to be expected, since he lived on an Arabian plain where abundant pastures for his "fourteen thousand sheep and six thousand camels, and a thousand yoke of oxen, and a thousand asses," (Job 1:3-4) as well doubtless as immense numbers of cows.

Favored German Sport

The unusually beautiful scenery of the Harz mountains in Germany and the plentiful variety of wild game are said to be great attractions to visitors. Elk, roe, fallow deer, wild swine and sheep come from the hills to feed on horse chestnuts, acorns, carrots and hay provided by the foresters on the hunting preserves.

Chinese Symbols

Among Chinese symbols the bat signifies happiness; Buddhist scepter, immortality; crow, evil; duck, conjugal affection; stork, tortoise or young stag, long life; crane, immortality.

As the factor of Sunset House watched the departing paterfamilias nose an ever-widening ripple out across the still lake which now mirrored the hills—for the wind had dropped in the night to a flat calm—a voice at his side roused him from his thoughts.

"We got a beag job ahead, dis summer!"

Stuart looked into the grave face of Omar. "We have, Omar, but I wish I knew where to begin. They heard at Lake Expansé that LeBlond got thirty-thousand dollars worth of fur from Pipestone lake and the Sturgeon river country alone, this year. We didn't get a peli—not one hunter from that country!"

"I hear, last night, something about dat."

"You did? How dyuh mean—heard?"

"De men wid de cano' talk w'il LeBlond go to de house for de girl. Dey talk about Jingwak."

"Jingwak, the medicine man at Pipestone lake?"

"Ah-hah, you know how he get all de hunter to trade wid LeBlond—not one come to Sunset House?"

"No, but I'd like to," said the interested Stuart.

"Wal—Jingwak tell all dem peopl' dat dis place es full of devil. I find dis out, for one of dat crew had fear to stay on de beach."

Slowly the blood filled the bronzed face of the man who listened.

"So they are bribing the medicine men, the conjurers, are they, to keep the trade from Sunset House?"

It was clever of LeBlond, for the Pipestone Ojibwa, who came two hundred miles south to trade, were a wild, superstitious lot, easily influenced by a medicine man—a shaman.

"Wat you tink of dat?" demanded the half-breed. "I tell you we got good job ahead, dis summer, w'en we get de trade stuff from Lak' Expansé."

"Omar, we've got to get some of that Pipestone and Sturgeon river trade. We can't live on what we get from the rest of the country. What're we going to do?"

The swart Boisvert rose from his squatting position. He was not tall, but his Scotch and French blood had united with the ability to create a rare example of nature's skill in the building of human thigh and muscle; for in his compact one hundred and eighty pounds Omar carried power and stamina which had been a byword among the voyageurs of western Keweenaw. Deliberately reaching to the rear, the half-breed drew his skinning knife and, lifting a foot, stropped the blade slowly on his moccasin. "Dere es one ting we can do wid M'is'le Jingwak," he said, significantly.

"You old wolf," laughed Stuart, "I believe, if I said the word, you'd hunt him down this summer and stick dat in him."

Omar's small eyes met his chief's cryptically as he said: "Dere are manee way to kech a fox."

"Yes, and we must find one to beat this Jingwak; but we can't hurt him, you know. There are laws in this country."

"Law? Umph!" grunted Omar. "We got do something ver' queek!"

"We have, Omar," admitted Stuart. "If I'm licked here, I might as well look for a new job. The Company'll never forgive me. Christie knows what the job is here, but he's not satisfied with the small trade this year."

With an impulsive movement Boisvert grasped the hand of the younger man. "We not try yet! Dis summer we go to Pipestone lake."

Two days later, with the freight boats from Lake Expansé which carried the next year's supplies and trade goods for the little post and had been windbound at the head of the lake, came Esau Otegh, whose shoulders had rounded and lean face creased with furrows in the service of the company—old Esau, a full-blooded Ojibwa, who had served thirty years with Stuart's father and now followed the fortunes of the son. To the Indian, when the supplies were unloaded and the empty freighters had started back on the trail south, Omar related what he had overheard on the beach—how the hunters from the Pipestone country had been kept from trading at Sunset House by the tabu of the shaman, Jingwak.

"Ah-hah!" Esau muttered. "So dis Jingwak put de devil into Sunset House. Wal, we put de devil into Jingwak."

"Goodly!" agreed Stuart. "But how?" Esau's beady eyes met the widening grin of Omar as he answered: "Omar esvair tell you wat happen to Makwa, de beag shaman at Wolf river, manee long snow back?"

Stuart shook his head. "No, what happened?"

"De Makwa, he tink he mak' de beag medicine. He come an' say to de ole man at Wolf river, 'You geve Makwa, de shaman, flour, tea, trade good, an' you get all Jilwa fur. You not geve Makwa dis, an' free-trader, he get de fur!'"

"What did the Hudson's Bay man say to that?"

BANKING HOUSES IN HISTORY OF WORLD

In Existence as Early as Year 600 B. C.

The earliest banks, if such they can be called, date back many centuries before the Christian era, and were generally conducted by governments in an attempt to prevent plunder of the money they had issued.

The early places of business were usually the temples. The cuneiform writings disclose, however, that as early as 600 B. C. private banks were known in Babylon. The firm of Egit & Son of Babylon is the first private banking house of which record survives, its name perhaps setting the precedent for the nepotism that has ever since characterized the business.

But to a banker named Calvus, at Alexandria, in 280 B. C., must go the credit for offering what appears to be the first banking service really deserving of the name. He paid interest on deposits, permitted withdrawals upon demand, and kept his bank open for business every hour of the day and night.

Despite its auspicious start, banking gradually came into public disfavor, and that disfavor culminated in a prohibition of interest during the reign of Alexander Severus of Rome, at the time when that country was dominant in world affairs.

The fecundity of money came to be regarded as a monstrous thing, and in the course of time the Jews were the only people willing to brave the storm of criticism that met every attempt to establish banks. They organized what were known as poverty banks, or lending houses, and by the Fifth century of our era these makeshift banks were the only lending institutions in Italy.

The effect of the long interdiction of interest by pope and emperor was a virtual paralysis of trade. All commercial enterprise waned, and poverty seized the land. The period is still known as the Dark ages. The abhorrence of interest, however, gradually declined, and during the Eight century the monks took over the poverty banks from the Jews.

This covert recognition of banking by the church did much to restore it to its former good estate, and it gained rapidly in prestige during the next two centuries, when the popes confirmed formally the right to charge interest and to demand adequate collateral on loans.—Clifford B. Reeves in the American Mercury.

Radio Links Nations

Direct wireless transmission from Belgium to the United States was inaugurated, on the Belgium national holiday, by King Albert, who spoke briefly over the National and Columbia broadcasting networks, expressing his "sincere wish that the progress of science, of which this is so signal an example, may find its equivalent in a progress toward a better understanding between nations."

Bear Merely Curious

Driving to Lube, Maine, at an early hour in the morning, James E. Cook found his right of way disputed by a huge bear which arose from the thick grass bordering the road. Mr. Cook stopped his automobile and, after the bear had leisurely looked it over, it turned and ambled away.

Basket Ball Season Starts

The girls and boys have both started practice for their first basketball game October 23 with Ashley. Twenty-one girls reported for practice and eighteen boys.

The girls have very good prospects for this year, having lost only one by graduation. With the eleven from the first team of last year and the new material of this year the girls should be able to show the fans some very interesting games. New jerseys have been ordered and each one is planning to work hard for the privilege of wearing them. Miss Borthwick will have charge of the girls.

The boys have lost six from last year's squad, so it will be necessary to work up an entirely new team. However, with four weeks practice Mr. Noffsinger may develop a fast team from his new material.

While playing ball Friday evening Kenneth Gaff injured his ankle. For several days it was necessary for him to attend school with the aid of a crutch.

Lewis Walter was absent Wednesday treating a sore foot, which was caused by stepping on a rusty nail.

The foods class has canned twenty-four quarts of tomatoes this week.

The Seniors lost one of their members last Friday when Milton Garrison left for Angola. That leaves fourteen in the graduating class of 1933.

English Teacher: Why hand in a theme on only half a sheet of paper?
Student: I'm saving the other half for the next theme.

It seems to be the style now for all the boys to carry rubber bands and plenty of paper. Of course the girls don't know what they're for.

Earl W. Kinsey missed several days of school due to illness, but the class is hoping he will recover in time for the fair.

School Leaves Out for Fair

The schools will leave out on Friday of this week for the DeKalb County Fair at Auburn. The teachers and classes all gave a sigh of relief Monday evening when the exhibits were in and on their way to Auburn. Everyone feels that they have well earned a day's vacation.

The band will play on Friday night at the Auburn Fair from 7:30 to 8:15.

One might think Miss Poland had started a kindergarten in her Latin class, it it weren't known that she was having the dolls dressed for the exhibit.

Grade Activities

The fourth grade maps are finished and hopes are running high that they will bring honor to our school at the fair.

The miniature fair in the third and fourth grade room is almost completed. Much enjoyment was derived from its process of construction.

Everyone is eagerly waiting for the grade cards at the end of the week.

The salt and flour maps of the fifth and sixth grades are finished and look very nice.

The transportation chart of the same room proved very interesting as well as educational.

NEWVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Ide were here last week from Chicago visiting friends.

A school reunion of all those who attended school at Cherry Valley or the Lyons School as it is now known, will be held there October 8th. Basket dinner and afternoon program.

Funeral services for Wesley Wilson, 75 years of age, were held at the Newville Christian Church October 4, and burial in Six Corners cemetery. Mr. Wilson dropped dead Saturday afternoon about 2 o'clock in his melon patch, north of his home. Mr. Wilson had seated himself on the running board of the car to eat a piece of melon when his grandson noticed that he had fallen over. Upon reaching his side he was found dead. The coroner was called and pronounced death due to apoplexy. The deceased was a faithful worker, and was treasurer, deacon and elder in the Newville Christian Church. Surviving are the wife and the grandson, Clair Wilson who makes his home with them.

CONCORD

Marion Sherer was at Anderson Monday.

Mrs. Stanley Baker visited her people Sunday afternoon.

Quite a few are picking apples in the Leighty and Widney orchards.

A goodly number from this place attended the Hillsdale fair last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Scott, of Hicksville spent Sunday in the Ira Bone home.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Elm and Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Buckingham spent Sunday afternoon at Pokagon State Park and also visited the Angola Nursery.

Mr. and Mrs. Hollis Dilley had as supper guests Sunday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Sechler, daughter, Irene, Mrs. Mary Sechler and Miss Susan Sechler.

Believe it or not, on display in our window is a cluster of 14 paw paws, possibly the largest bunch found anywhere. They were put on display by Mr. Wick-erham.

Mrs. John Timmerman, Mrs. Ben Markins, Miss Isa Krise, Mrs. Forest Gerig and Mrs. Frank May spent Sunday with a cousin, Mrs. Anna Brown at Cassopolis, Michigan.

Mrs. Belle Ridgway is some better from a recent sick spell. Her children, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Ridgway, of Valparaiso and Mr. and Mrs. Vet. Chandler of Hobart were recent visitors.

Mrs. Mary Sechler, Miss Susan Sechler and Miss Ersa Reidenbach were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Sechler and family. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bowen, of Fort Wayne were afternoon guests at the Sechler home.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Kessler and Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Yeiser and children were Sunday afternoon callers at the L. W. Yeiser home in Kendallville. They report a son, Kenneth Lucian, born to Mr. and Mrs. Morris Yeiser on Wednesday of last week.

The township trustees of the county and County Highway Superintendent E. E. Turner conferred at the court house Monday on a plan to employ on the roads men who are receiving aid from the poor relief funds. Mr. Turner will give such men work if they bring orders to him from the trustees. The pay will be $1 a day and compensation will not be cash, but will be necessities. The public treasury is expected to benefit considerably from the co-operation of the highway superintendent and the trustees.

ST. JOE, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1932

NUMBER 11

OUR TAX ADJUSTMENT
BOARD IN SESSION

DeKalb county seems to be a rather civil or virtuous place after all to live in, compared with many others. Just now serious threats are being made to tax boards who are doing their level best to reduce the budgets, and yet keep things moving. The board in session at Warsaw received threats of personal violence and business boycotts, because they are endeavoring to keep within the law of a total rate of $1.50. The DeKalb county board is in session, and the work is most agreeable. Some voluntarily reduced their levy.

The law makes it the duty of the board to "revise, change and if necessary reduce the levy of any municipal corporation so that the total does not exceed $1.50." However, by a vote of not less than five of the members, the board may determine that an emergency exists for a rate higher than $1.50. Taxpayers not satisfied with the board's findings may appeal to the state board of tax commissioners.

The board organized Monday by selecting County Auditor F. E. Lyon as chairman and John Zimmerman of Auburn, as secretary. The other members all were present, also. They are Joseph E. Wiley of Troy township, E. W. Johnson of Concord township, Gilbert Bonecutter of Waterloo, C. H. Heinsterling of Garrett, and Elmer D. Case of Fairfield township.

PEOPLE ARE WANTED

To attend the revival meeting being held over the Hurni Store.

Wednesday night special singers. Brother and Sister Haggermon from Auburn will sing for you and the Rev. Jack Ames will preach. You should hear them they are interesting.

In the days when millionaires are committing suicide, when governments are perplexed, when the depression is on there is a friend Jesus who will help and carry us through if we only trust in Him. Don't forget Wednesday night October 12, special singers. Then again on Thursday the Boy Evangelist will talk. Please everybody come, rich or poor, young or old, come! —Ralph Knisely.

ANNIVERSARY DINNER GIVEN SUNDAY

A wedding anniversary dinner was served at the home of Mr. and Mrs. I. M. Woodcox, Sunday, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Don Burley of Princeville, Illinois, Mr. and Mrs. I. M. Woodcox and Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Woodcox of St. Joe. Those present included Mr. and Mrs. Burley, Mr. and Mrs. I. M. Woodcox and daughter, Beatrice, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Woodcox and son, Malcolm, Mr. and Mrs. Vance Woodcox, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Woodcox, Mr. and Mrs. John Scivo, all of Detroit. The kiddies present were Junior Woodcox, Kent Woodcox, Billy Woodcox, Belle Jean Woodcox, Wanda Woodcox and Bruce Woodcox.

Miss Susan Sechler is spending several days with relatives in Fort Wayne this week.

Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Beams, of Spencerville were entertained Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Curie.

MRS. ELLA GILL GIVEN A REAL SURPRISE

A surprise party was given Mrs. Ella Gill at her home here last Sunday, she having reached the age of 73 years. Relatives began to arrive in the morning, bringing baskets full of good things to eat. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Charley White and family, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gall, Mr. and Mrs. Moses Neckert, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Gall, Mr. and Mrs. George Oury, Donovan and Evelyn Oury, Mr. and Mrs. Otis Gall and family, Charles Hodges, Miss Zelma Ball, Miss Esther Harding and Homer Woodcox.

The day was in a way, sad for Mrs. Gill, due to the sudden death of her brother, Martin White, only a few months ago, when he was killed in an auto crash, enroute home from her home, where he had spent a week. Her other brother, Eugene was killed a year ago in a similar way and she is the only survivor of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob White.

Mrs. Gill keeps her own home and is quite well. She was more than pleased with her surprise and enjoys telling her friends about it.

Some new post cards at News office to be used for sending sick friends. Ask to see them.

George Millman has moved his family from the Henly property into the J. W. Hart residence recently vacated by H. G. Hursh. The Millmans lived there some years ago, in fact they remodeled the home.

The season for reading is approaching and we wish to advise you not to subscribe through traveling salesmen, for the reason that so many times clubs are made up of cheap, worthless reading, and by calling at The News office, you make up your own combination.

The fall council meeting of Sunday School workers of DeKalb County, will meet in the Auburn M. E. Church Sunday, October 16, at 2:30. The speaker for the occasion will be Col. A. L. Moudy, former county president. Every Sunday School worker is asked to be in the meeting.

Large crowds visited the apple orchards last Sunday.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Leon Kees, Monday forenoon, a 10½ pound boy.

Mrs. Daisy Woodcox is spending the week in the Grey Woodcox home at Garrett.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Miller and Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hull took Sunday dinner in the F. B. Leighty home.

For Sale: Dry Wood, $2 cord, mostly hard sugar, delivered within 3 miles of woods. See Roy Keller. 394p.

Have your glasses fitted by Benj. F. Griest, Eyesight Specialist, Office in American Bldg., Hicksville, Ohio. 28tf.

Floyd Barkey and family moved last week from St. Joe, where he has been engaged in the garage business for the past few years, to near Helmer.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bower and sons, Dale and Lavern, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Cox of Helmer and Mrs. Jennie Clinesmith of Angola were Sunday dinner guests in the W. B. Cox home.

Mrs. Lizzie Millman is now at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Leota Gruber at Fort Wayne. She was taken there Friday following a few days illness with an appendix and heart attack.

Rev. V. O. Harrold left Tuesday for Liberty Center, Ind., to attend the sub-district meeting in session there for three days. Mrs. Harrold and daughter were guests of her mother near Grabbill.

Master Franklin Shuff is reported as better following an operation at Garrett on October 2. The little fellow was very serious a few days last week, but is now on the road to recovery.

Blood poison, caused by a wound from shears, piercing his left hand, caused Harold Yeiser to miss school last week a few days. He was taken to Garrett for treatment and is now much better.

George Ridgway, of Valparaiso and Robert Frisinger, brother of Mrs. Belle Ridgway, Mrs. Eva Chandler and Mrs. Olive Frye of Hobart, were over Sunday guests of their mother. She is not feeling quite so well at this writing.

TEXT OF STATEMENT BY CRUSADERS URGING ELEC-TION OF J. I. FARLEY

Following is the text of the statement issued by the Crusaders, an organization opposed to national prohibition, in which it urged the election of James I. Farley to congress from the Fourth district and the defeat of Cong. David Hogg:

"The Crusaders is an organization of younger citizens who are opposed to national prohibition. The Crusaders has for its sole purpose early modification of the Volstead laws and finally and as soon as possible repeal of the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

"In the sense that it is not any way related to any political party, the Crusaders is an organization which is wholly non-partisan. Its action in politics and particularly in this campaign is taken solely to do what it can to make an end of prohibition. It has no concern for any other question in this campaign.

"To promote the single object of its being, the Crusaders is giving its effort to the election of members of congress who will vote to modify the Volstead law at once and to submit the eighteenth amendment as directly as possible to the people for repeal. "Hence it is that the Crusaders has endorsed the candidacy and urges the election of James I. Farley as the Fourth Indiana district's representative in the national congress.

"Hence it is that the Crusaders has condemned the candidacy and urges the defeat of David Hogg, four terms in the national house as the representative of the old Twelfth Indiana district and now a candidate for re-election from the new Fourth district.

"Mr. Farley is opposed to national prohibition. He will vote for modification of the Volstead law and to submit the eighteenth amendment for repeal. He so declared when he became a candidate for nomination and has stood fast by that declaration.

"Congressman Hogg is bone-dry. He has always had the endorsement and support of the Indiana Anti-Saloon league. His record in congress is consistently dry. He is dry now. His record on the question of submitting the eighteenth amendment to the people shows him unqualifiedly hostile to such recourse.

"The Crusaders does not conceive any distinction between Mr. Farley and Mr. Hogg on any point of character or ability. That Mr. Farley is a Democrat makes no difference to Republican Crusaders. He is against prohibition. That Mr. Hogg is a Republican makes no difference to Democratic Crusaders. He is a prohibitionist of tested loyalty to that cause.

"The Crusaders has tried to shake off the shackles of party prejudice and with a sense of political orientation get to the only process of translating majority sentiment into a production result by electing a congress friendly to regulation and repeal of prohibition. Too many candidates are now giving lip service to pandering to public sentiment only to get in office then slow up on prohibition reform.

"The Crusaders strongly urge the election of Mr. Farley to congress from this district. It asks for the defeat of Mr. Hogg."

The above appeal to the voters certainly tells the story, but all the voters in this district are not like the Crusaders. The Democrat and Republican voters who still maintain that the ballot is sacred, will not vote as such.

CHAPTER II—Continued

The old Indian's eyes snapped with humor. "He don't 'spik' noding," he said for Esau.

"What'd you do, Esau?" Esau puffed for a space, his eyes on his moccasins; then he said: "Mak-wa, de heeg shaman, mak' medicine no more."

Stuart leaned forward curiously. "You chased him out of the country?" The old man shook his head. Stuart turned to Omar, who chuckled: "Esau nevaire tell, but Makwa come to Wolf river to trade next tam widout hees ear. Ah-hah! He no good for shaman after he lose hees ear."

"You mean they were cut off?" Omar nodded. "Widout dem he was no good to mak' de medicine."

Stuart glanced doubtfully at the sphinxlike Esau.

"Do you intend to cut off Jingwak's ears, Esau?" he laughed. "That will be some job! They're a wild lot up there in the Pipestone country; they might cut off yours—or worse."

The lean face of the old Ojibwa shaped a cryptic smile as he rose with a grunt and went out to visit the gill-nets below the post.

"Do you believe the old rascal actually cut off the medicine man's ears?" Stuart demanded of the grinning Omar.

"No one know. Esau nevaire tell." "But the shaman, you say, lost his magic with his ears?"

"Ah-hah! All de 'Jibwa laugh at heem afore dat."

"Well, I'll say that's a great yarn, anyway. But what do you suppose Esau meant when he said he'd put the devil into Jingwak?"

The half-breed shrugged. "I don't know. De fader of Esau was a shaman, a sorcerer. Esau, mebbe, got frien' among de devil."

His supplies and trade-goods properly checked and stowed away against the coming of the Ojibwas for the Christmas trade, Stuart prepared to follow the freight canoes, with his fur from the spring trade, down to Lake Expansé, the headquarters of the district.

There he would listen, in sullen silence, while his chief, Andrew Christie, talked deep into the night of the failure of Sunset House to obtain its share of the trade.

With endless reiteration the stiff-necked inspector would dwell on the cost of building the post and its small yearly returns in fur while Jim, raging inwardly, endured in silence.

And, from the increasing stiffness in the manner of his chief, the discouraged Stuart knew that the end of Sunset House would mean the end of his advancement in the Company's service.

For a failure is a failure. The fact that he had been chosen to lead a forlorn hope—that Sunset House was doomed from the beginning, would be forgotten. He would have had his chance. If he stayed with the Hudson's Bay, the would send him somewhere as clerk, assistant to a luckier man.

But the journey to Lake Expansé would consume a fortnight, and the thought of what might await him behind a certain split rock on an island ten miles across the uncharted waters of Mitawangangum led him to postpone his start with Omar.

The spell of the northern summer was on cloudless sky; the dusky, spruce green of the ridges; the cool depths of the translucent lake, as Jim paddled alongshore toward the sturgeon set-lines at the outlet, to deceive the sharp eyes which followed his departure from the post. Then with a savage lunge his paddle tore the water to foam. Across the lake they laughed at the name, Sunset House, did they? So they held the whole Pipestone and Sturgeon river trade by bribing a sorcerer! Well, as Omar said, there were ways of handling a shaman. Esau was an old hand at that game. He and Omar should have their wish. They would go to the summer camps of the Pipestone Lake Indians—carry the war into the enemies' country. Jim Stuart's future as a fur-man was at stake. He'd played fair, but now all rules were off and henceforth there'd be no quarter.

Then his anger cooled as he thought of the girl whose message he was paddling ten miles to look for at the split rock. A reckless game, this, he admitted. Some day she'd be seen and followed. They even, might be caught! Then what? He laughed aloud at the thought. Well, she was worth it—this bewitching daughter of LeBlond.

It was mid-forenoon when the birch bark of Jim Stuart approached the split rock on the stony beach of the island. Stepping from the canoe, Jim's eager eyes searched the bushes behind the rock for the telltale white of the note which she had promised to leave. Then, lying under a stone, he saw to his surprise a folded sheet ruled, as if torn from a small note book. It did not seem like her—this soiled scrap of paper at his feet. Fuzzled, he picked it up and read:

"This is your first and last warning. Louis LeBlond will see that there are no more love notes here for you. The next time you come for a letter you'll get lead."

The note was written in pencil in an immature hand and unsigned.

FROM THE BEGINNING

From his fur post, Sunset House, in the Canadian north, Jim Stuart, trader in charge, with his headman, Omar, rescued a girl from an overturned canoe in the lake. She is Aurore LeBlond, daughter of Stuart's rival in the fur business, and proves to be a charming companion. In a spirit of fun, she and Jim arrange to exchange notes on a certain island. LeBlond, with Paradis, his half-breed lieutenant, arrives in search of the missing girl. Paradis displays enmity toward Jim, though LeBlond acknowledges his debt of gratitude to Sunset House.

"Paradis!" He had followed her canoe at a distance and, finding her note, had left this. And now LeBlond would not allow her out of his sight—would watch her as a lynx watches a rabbit. Jim Stuart had seen the last of the girl who had filled the living room at Sunset House with laughter—whose departure had left him lonely, vaguely restless, puzzled with himself.

Nice dog in the manger, this Paradis! The head man of LeBlond had only run true to form in spying on the girl who laughed at him. Then the angered Stuart rasped aloud: "Get lead, eh, if I come again? If I could meet Monsieur Paradis here, I'd come tomorrow."

"Weel today do?" From the thick spruce in his rear a voice wheeled Jim in his tracks, as Paradis appeared in the brush back of the canoe, carrying a gun. Stuart was unarmed.

With evident satisfaction, Paradis leered at the man who watched him. "Well, Monsieur Stuart, here ees Paradis," he taunted. "You have your weesh. What weel the writer of love notes do about eet?"

"You're a pretty specimen of a man, Paradis," said Jim coolly, refusing to take the situation seriously. "You swing a gun on me, then ask me what I intend to do. Drop that gun and come down here on the beach, if you're not afraid, and I'll show you what I'll do about it."

"Ah, he boasts," Paradis grinned in derision.

"Well, there's only one way to call a bluff," drawled Jim. "You hold the cards. It's your play." As Paradis bent with laughter, Jim edged a yard nearer. "But I have not made up my mind wether to shoot you for de insult you give me—or take you to Louis LeBlond and let you taste de sting of Black Jules' dog-whip."

At the fantastic threat the hard-thinking Stuart grinned in derision, but the situation was not humorous. Was this wild-eyed Paradis, fingering the trigger of his rifle, fifteen feet away, unbalanced over the girl—or drunk? Either condition was equally dangerous with that gun.

"Shoot me, eh?" Jim scoffed, sliding a moccasin a foot nearer the man who covered him. "You'd hang, if my man, Omar, didn't get you first, and they'd run the North-West Trading company out of the bush." Then an idea flashed through his active brain as the inflamed eyes of Paradis glared at him. "Take me to LeBlond. It's his daughter. Let him settle it."

"I settle my own affair." The face of Paradis was distorted with passion. Slowly he brought the rifle to his shoulder.

Stuart's heart started with a leap. The man was crazed! He would shoot! With a desperate bound Jim strained to reach the madman—to deflect his miss him. Then, sucking in a deep breath, Jim deliberately folded his arms over his chest, and taking a desperate chance, challenged: "All right, I'm ready! Now—right through the heart!"

For a space the black tube covered the chest of the man whose eyes did not waver. "Your arm is con de way. De shot weel not be a clean one," muttered the man whose finger slowly curled on the trigger.

Jim Stuart's straight gaze held the grimacing face behind the black tube sighted on his laboring heart, but doubt slowly chilled him. Had he misjudged his man? Did Paradis, after all, intend to murder him? Slowly, under the strain, the sweat broke from his forehead. Better to take the chances of a rush than to be shot like a spy against a wall. Then, as Jim stiffened for a headlong leap, with a laugh Paradis dropped his gun butt.

"Now we go an' see Louis LeBlond," Jim let the breath out of his lungs. It had seemed minutes while he looked into that gun muzzle. It had taken all the nerve he had. But it had worked—that trick; or was Paradis merely baiting him?

"Get into your boat! Take de stern and paddle! If you move, I shoot you for sure!" ordered Paradis.

Jim did as he was told. Facing him, with the gun in his hands, Paradis squatted in the bow of the boat, and they started along the shallows of the shore.

"You think you are luckee I deed not shoot you, Monsieur Stuart of de Hudson's Bay; but when Louis LeBlond hear you come to meet hees daughter—den you weesh I shoot. Dat heeg dog-whip of Jules—ah! I can hear it seeng now. Crack! She go on your back!"

The threats of Paradis fell on deaf ears. Jim was not worrying over LeBlond. But he did not relish the humiliation of being brought into the post by the unbalanced Paradis. He pictured the mirth in the eyes of Aurore LeBlond. But as for the jealous and demented Paradis, he almost pitied him. There would be no mercy when she learned how he had spied upon her movements. And LeBlond? She'd laugh at him, as she did that night at Sunset House.

Beyond the island of the split rock, across a half-mile of quiet water, lay another and larger one. As Jim paddled leisurely, ignoring the abuse of the man squatted in the bow, holding his rifle, he wondered whether this strat was visible from LeBlond's place on the mainland.

"You didn't tell me how far your place is from here?" he said, as the water began to boil behind his paddle.

"Tree-four mile. Not far. Don't hurry. Louis LeBlond, he weel soon enough teach you to come sneaking 'round de south shore for de love letter!" Paradis laughed uproariously.

Then, as the man in the bow lurched forward and jerked himself into an upright position, Jim suddenly realized that he was not mad, but drunk.

On his knees, Stuart rapidly drove the light birch bark out into the strait with his birch stroke. From LeBlond's the canoe could not be seen! With a lurch of his heavy body, Jim rolled the light canoe over as he plunged into the lake.

As the speeding canoe capsize, with a cry the surprised Paradis slid headlong into the water as his rifle exploded. Rising beyond reach of the boat, for an instant he beat the water desperately; then sank.

aim; but fell, sprawled in low brush far short of his goal, as Paradis backed away, his gun still covering his enemy.

"Ah," chuckled the other, "that was worth de blow in de face at Medicine Stone—to see you jump like a frog."

Jim got to his feet, his eyes on the grimacing face behind the rifle barrel. He must get closer—risk being hit, to get that gun. But how?

Lowering the rifle, Paradis said with a chuckle: "Now that I have made you jump, I weel make a little hole through your heart, Monsieur Jeem Stuart." Then he raised the rifle and took deliberate aim.

The leveled gun was yards away, with low brush between. It was hope, if he rushed, Paradis couldn't away with a stiff left arm, Jim sucked in a deep breath and sank beneath the surface; then, as he rose, struck the gasping man fiercely in the face. The fingers which clutched Stuart's shirt relaxed, and he pushed the half-conscious trader to the boat floating bottom up.

"Now, can you hear that dog-whip sling?" he laughed. But the man Jim held beside the overturned canoe was too busy coughing up water to hear—too frightened to answer.

"You're a clever man with the Indians, Paradis, but there're some tricks you don't know," taunted Jim, as he swam beside the boat. "Look out! You'll roll into the lake if you move!" he warned, as the dazed passenger lifted a livid face to the man in the water.

At last they reached the shore, and wading to the beach with the man who had ambushed him, Jim dropped him none too tenderly.

"Now, what are you going to tell LeBlond, when you can walk and are able to find your boat which you have hidden somewhere on this shore?" he asked of the hiccupping Paradis propped on his elbow, his red eyes picturing his feat of what awaited him at the hands of the Hudson's Bay man.

Paradis weakly shook his head.

"You deserve a good north country beating, my friend, for throwing that gun on me. You might have pulled that trigger. But for spying on Miss Aurore, you deserve—I'll take this."

Stuart suddenly bent over the shivering Paradis, who shrank from the blow he anticipated, and jerked a knife from its sheath on the other's belt. "Yes," Jim went on, "you deserve getting this between your ribs for following her out here, and I'm goin' to let you have it." With a black scowl Jim drew back the shining knife and thrust savagely at the helpless man at his feet. The mottled face of Paradis went white, as he shrank from the blow. But the shining blade stopped inches from his ribs.

"How d'yuh like that, my brave beauty? Not so nice when the other man has the whip hand, eh?"

"Don't don't!" whimpered the man on the beach, too weak to move. "I onlee play wid you—I nevaire shoot!"

"Well, the least I can do is to cut a birch whip and give you what you promised I'd get."

But Stuart had had enough of this head man of LeBlond's. The yellowness of spirit of the one who, an hour before, had held a rifle on his heart, disgusted him. And across the lake Omar was waiting.

"Just remember one thing, Paradis," he said, "when you lie about what happened this morning—I didn't let you down when I had good reason to. From now on, between you and me there'll be no more business—yours and LeBlond's; but before you're through you'll know you've been in a fight. Now go back and tell them a cock-and-bull yarn about what happened to you!"

Turning from the surprised Paradis, Jim stepped into his boat and started for Sunset House. As he passed the split rock, he suddenly swung the canoe with a sweep of his paddle and started furiously back up the shore. Her note! Paradis must have it in his pocket. It could be dried and read.

But when Jim reached the strip of beach where he had left his man, it was empty.

Medal for Slowness

Motorman Joseph J. Krankoff (there's another name o'howl for you!) is the proud possessor of a gold medal. He was presented it the other day by the New York Humane society because he dared lower the speed of his subway train to a snail's pace for two miles in order not to run over a white poodle dog that had wandered into the tube.

Satire can be severe; but it need not slay.

WON IN THREE BABY SHOWS

Mother gives credit to Eagle Brand

Little Rose Marie Haggerty of Pueblo, Colo., at 1 year, 7 months.

"WE STARTED our baby on Eagle Brand at three months," writes Mrs. W. F. Haggerty, 1016 Carterette Ave., Pueblo, Colo., "and she is perfect now. She has won in three baby shows, and I think Eagle Brand ought to have the credit. She is 1 year, 8 months old now, and has never been sick, not even a cold—and I will send our family doctor's statement if you wish."

"The texture of her skin is just like velvet. I sure have praised Eagle Brand, for I think it has made her beautiful."

"The other day, I was visiting at the hospital and one of the men called a doctor to see her and he asked was she bottle fed and when I told him Eagle Brand, he said, 'Well, Eagle Brand ought to see her' so that is why I am sending the picture."

If your baby is not thriving on his present food we suggest that you and your doctor consider Eagle Brand. Send for free booklet. The new and complete edition of "Baby's Welfare" contains practical feeding information and suggestions for supplementary foods—orange juice, cereals, cod-liver oil, etc.—advised by doctors.

Great Things Hoped of Exploration in Mexico

Egyptology carries its devotees back to a profound antiquity in comparison with which all the remains of Mexico seem almost modern. But Egyptian history is known and written, while not only the history but also the ethnology of early Mexico remain mysteries. For example, the Quiche of Guatemala and the Maya of Yucatan, whose great temples and cities may appear similar to the undisturbed ruins in reality distinct peoples, and they both had languages which seem wholly unrelated to the language of the Aztecs of Mexico. It is not wide of the mark to assert that "Mexicology," if such a word may be coined, is still in its infancy despite the remarkable discoveries and erudite studies of the savants.

Relics of Israelites

Ancient remains in Palestine dating back as far as the kingdom of Israel, covered by a forum of the Herodian period, and one of the succeeding Roman period, were found at Sabasthi, near Nabulus, or ancient Antipatris, in central Palestine. A stone channel by which water was brought to the village from distant springs during the Roman occupation has been discovered in a well-preserved condition, and north of the village some stone coffins were found in a Roman mausoleum. Stone walls on hinges closed the two rooms of the building.

St. Joe (Ind.) High SchoolEditor in Chief ..... John Kaelner
Assistant Editor ..... Jean Goodwin

Vol. 1. No. 3. Thursday, October 13, 1932

P. T. A.

The first meeting of the P. T. A. was held October 8 in the high school auditorium. In spite of the weather a nice crowd attended. Mrs. Everett Mavis, a graduate of the St. Joe schools, gave a very practical and interesting talk. The High School Band received many compliments for their music, and Mr. Woodcox can be proud of the results he has obtained in these first few weeks.

The membership committee decided to reward $3.00 to the class which gets the most members for the P. T. A. by the December meeting. Each class needs money and intends to work hard for this reward.

Marvelous!

Biology Student: Hey, this fly has wings.

The Freshman class met last Thursday and elected as their officers for this year Evelyn Dermott, president; Roma McSorley, vice president; Effie Belle Freeman, treasurer, and LeRoy Coburn, secretary. Miss Dittmar was elected sponsor.

The Sophomore class met last week and elected Miss Borthwick as their sponsor. A class party was planned for November 4.

The Juniors are beginning to plan ways of earning money to finance the Junior-Senior banquet. A Halloween Carnival was suggested, but nothing definite has been decided.

The Senior class lost another member last week. Alma Franks moved to Garrett.

Master Junior Curie has been on the sick list and was compelled to miss several days of school.

Now that the fair is over everyone's attention is turning to the first six weeks tests. After a vacation always comes work.

After six days of absence Earl Kinsey is back to school—just in time for the tests.

Although St. Joe took no ribbons at the fair, the classes displayed interesting and original work. The Latin class dressed dolls in Roman costumes and displayed a Roman chariot made of paraffin. The citizenship class made a graph showing the distribution of the tax dollar in Concord Township, and the arithmetic class made graphs showing the enrollment and attendance of the school. The biology class displayed a collection of mounted butterflies. The physiology class showed the result of carelessness in the care of the teeth by displaying several decayed teeth. The geometry students made numerous geometrical designs and colored them. Then of course "The Gold and Black" was on display.

SOME LOCAL BRIEFS

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hull spent Wednesday in Fort Wayne.

For Sale: Good Hoover Sweeper. Mrs. James Goings. Phone 2214.

DuWayne Kinsey, accompanied by a boy friend, were home from U. over Saturday night.

Leon Kees has been on the sick list for the past ten days and is just able to be about the house.

Ye editor and wife were dinner guests Saturday evening of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Quance at Auburn.

Dr. Brunson of Newville is convalescing from a severe heart attack suffered a couple of weeks ago. His many friends are glad to hear of his improved condition.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hursh called on Mrs. Florence Smith at the Garrett hospital Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Smith has been in poor health for some time. They found her some better.

Mrs. Carrie Musser, of Bryan, Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. Ward Musser, of near Edgerton, O., Mr. and Mrs. Milo Provines, son, James, and daughter, Melva, of near Butler were Sunday afternoon guests of Mrs. S. D. Gee.

This section of DeKalb county can feel proud of the assistance in making the free fall fair a complete success. Displays were made by the schools and individuals in fancy work, produce, live stock, poultry and rabbits. The Leighty Orchard display drew thousands of interested spectators and the display proved to be the most unique on the street, from the standpoint of arrangement and the quality of fruit making the display. Everyone felt good over the results and next year a greater interest will be shown.

A surprise party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Kinsey last Sunday, in honor of their daughter, Inez's birthday. She was presented a lovely fountain pen. At the noon hour a bounteous dinner was served to the following guests: Mr. Harry Kinsey and family of Hamilton; Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Mohney and daughter, Barbara of Delphos, O.; Mr. and Mrs. John Willet and family of Hicksville, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Jenkins and Mrs. Annette Turnbull of Fort Wayne, Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Jenkins of Auburn and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Bowser and family.

Professor Defines Crooning

Crooning, as defined by Prof. E. L. Mendenhall of the Rural Normal School is a "cross between a dying calf and a dog baying at the moon, while jazz," in his opinion, "sounds like a combination of a hose-fiddle, the caterwaul of a tomat and the bray of a jackass."

KELLER-BAKER

Gilber Keller and Naomi Baker of near Concord were married October 5th at 2 o'clock in the St. Joe Methodist Protestant parsonage. The bride and groom were attended by Miss Dorothy Knight and Howard Hamman. Mr. and Mrs. Yates were also witnesses at the wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Keller will reside with the groom's parents for the present.

Australian Ballot
(Student, Spencerville School)

The Australian Ballot is the name of a system of voting whose essential features are absolute secrecy in the expression of the voter's choice. Printed ballots supplied officially by the state, provincial or local authorities are used. This system of voting was first known in Australia and has since spread to all nations. Before this system was known each candidate had his own ballots printed, and would distribute them to the voters before they entered the polling place. Bribery and fraud were not only quite possible but quite common. Under the Australian system, the ballots are furnished by the government and are delivered in a sealed package to the judges of the election shortly before the polls are opened. After the election, every ballot must be accounted for, whether used for voting or spoiled, or still clean and unmarked.

The names of candidates for office are arranged in columns under their respective parties. A straight ticket may be voted by marking an "X" in the circle at the left of the party's name. A split ticket may be voted by marking an "X" in the square at the left of the name of the candidate wished to be voted for.

When the voter receives a blank ballot from one of the judges of the election, his name is checked on the list of registered voters. He then enters a curtained booth where he may mark without interference. Upon the request of the voter, a judge may assist him in voting. Under this system of voting there is little chance for fraud and bribery. Only through the dishonesty of the election officials are bribery and fraud possible.

Wednesday was Columbus Day and it was observed by the bank and postoffice.

The Methodist Ladies Aid has been postponed and will meet in an all day session with Mrs. Eva Miller on Thursday, October 20.

Envelopes, tablets for letter writing, ink and whatever you need for your correspondence can be purchased at News office. See our line.

The True Seekers Class, taught by Clyde Hart, was entertained Sunday at the Wm. Hamilton home and the dinner was served around the outside furnace.

Quite a delegation from Concord and Spencer townships attended the Republican love feast Monday evening, at Auburn. E. J. Gallmeyer, postmaster at Fort Wayne and Ralph Gates of Columbia City, made the addresses in the court house.

COMING DATES OF RELIGIOUS CONVENTIONS

The County Council held Sunday in the Auburn M. E. Church, gave out the dates for future activities in DeKalb County, as follows:

The state young people's convention at Huntington on October 21, 22 and 23. On November 4, 5 and 6 the county conference will be held in Auburn and the county convention will be held at Butler on February 16 and 17. At the latter convention two well known leaders will be present to deliver addresses, Harry G. Rowe and Miss Nellie Young, of Indianapolis. On the night of February 16 Judge Clyde C. Carlin, of Angola will be the principal speaker. Other plans and speakers will be announced from time to time as the program develops.

Col. Alfred Moudy, former president of the Council, gave a splendid talk on the "Dawn of a New Day," when there would be a universal respect for law and order, and when people would direct their energies in upholding truth and good, instead of encouraging the opposite.

Every county officer was present but one and nearly every township was represented by several workers.

MERRITT M. MAXWELL FOR TREASURER

In the coming elections for County officers the voters are going to be confronted with the perplexing problem as to whom to choose for the responsible position of public trust. One of the offices in which the tax payers of any county is most interested is that of County Treasurer, for through this office passes all of the public funds and the Treasurer is accountable not only for the funds entrusted but the accuracy in which each individual transaction is recorded.

Merritt M. Maxwell, candidate for re-election to the office of Treasurer is abundantly qualified to render the highest type of service as he has acquired a knowledge of operation during his past term that enables him to handle the office economically and efficiently.

Mr. Maxwell during his administration has met many of the DeKalb County tax payers and they may be assured that should Mr. Maxwell be elected they will receive the same courtesy and expediency as in the past.

Try This "SAVINGS FIRST" Idea

If you are having any trouble in saving money, it may be because you are going at it from the wrong end. That is, you are spending first, intending to save what is left—and often there is nothing left.

Why not put savings first? Deposit immediately each week or month whatever you think you can spare. Pay bills and live on the remainder.

You will be surprised at how readily you adjust yourself to this program. It is a sensible plan, proved sound by many successful savers. Try it.

RENOVED - SOLDIER AND LECTURER TO SPEAK AT FORT WAYNE

The Republican Veterans' League has announced that they have secured Major Norman Imrie, Instructor in public speaking at Culver Military Academy, considered one of the outstanding lecturers in America, to address the Veterans of the Fourth Congressional District, at Ft. Wayne on October 22nd, at 8:00 P. M. at the Republican Headquarters on East Washington St., according to Karl C. Knapp, Chairman of the Veterans' Committee for DeKalb County.

Major Imrie has just returned from a speaking tour in Oregon and Washington, and through the efforts of the Fourth District Veterans will make his initial speech in Indiana at Fort Wayne. The general public has been invited to this meeting and it is expected that because of the prominence of the speaker that this will be one of the largest meetings to be held in Fort Wayne during this campaign.

REPORT SHOWS VALUE OF COUNTY NURSE

The Red Cross and County Nurse, during the month of September made 33 visits to schools including 45 visits to classrooms and 9 second visits to schools. In these rooms 100 children had dental defects and five vision defects corrected. In making a rapid inspection of 898 children, 40 cases of skin infections, and ten cases of tuberculosis were found. In a one room school fourteen children out of eighteen pupils were suffering with it. The home of one case of Para-Typhoid was placarded. Four homes were placarded for whooping cough with fifteen children. The home-calls made were as follows: To physicians 15, T. B. 15, Whooping Cough 12, Typhoid 1, Pediculosis 4, Bed Bug bites 1, to sick adults 9, infants 5, Pre-school 7, cancer 3, Pre-natal 1, Investigation calls 5, Miscellaneous 6, 150 Form letters were written, 30 individual letters, 70 post cards, 50 calls made in behalf of general activities, 60 office interviews concerning general activities, 125 phone calls, 15 social service, 46 interviews in behalf of patient. One patient was taken to the Irene Byron Hospital for care.

ASK PLACE ON DEKALB COUNTY ELECTION BALLOT

A petition to have the name of Emory Johnston, of Ashley, placed on the ballots in DeKalb county as candidate for the office of joint state senator from DeKalb, Steuben and LaGrange counties on the prohibition ticket has been filed with the DeKalb county board of election commissioners. Another petition is for Chas. H. A. Weiler, of Fort Wayne, as a candidate of the Liberty party for congress from the fourth district.

A third petition is for Leroy H. Swartz, of Fort Wayne, as a candidate for congress on the National party ticket.

NATIONAL PARTY MEETING AT ST. JOE, OCTOBER 27

The National party, represented by Arthur Stairhime, as district chairman, of Fort Wayne, and Leroy Swartz, candidate for Congress of the Fourth District, were in town Tuesday, and touring the county. A public meeting has been scheduled for Thursday evening, October 27, at the town hall, St. Joe. Mr. Swartz will present his claims as congressional candidate.

REPUBLICAN RALLY AT ST. JOE, NOVEMBER 3

County chairman, Henry C. Springer, today makes announcement of a local Republican rally for this section of DeKalb county, for Thursday evening, November 3, at 7:30 o'clock in the high school gym.

The speakers slated thus far are Congressman David Hogg, of Fort Wayne, candidate for reelection, and Col. A. L. Moudy, of Waterloo, candidate for representative.

"This will be one of the outstanding rallies of this section of the county," says Mr. Springer, and the voters are asked to attend and hear what the candidates have to say.

REVIVAL CONTINUES

Here we are again! To tell you that the revival meeting, over Hurn's Store, is still going on with God's help. The attendance at the Sunday afternoon and evening meetings was good but there is still room for many more.

Sunday evening the boy evangelist preached his sky scraper sermon. He said, in part, "With our churches forgetting God and making fun of a revival meeting, the young people of the land, who will soon run the government, unless there is a change, will cause it to fall, and great will be the fall of it."

Wednesday night at 7:30 the boy evangelist will speak on "The Story of My Life." A special quartet from Auburn will be here to render several numbers in song.

You are welcome. Please come.

WITH OUR CLUB LADIES

The active members of the Ladies Literary Club were delightfully entertained at Fort Wayne last Wednesday evening, by the honorary members.

The first part of the evening was spent at Latchstring Inn, the dining room of which was attractively decorated in red and green, the club colors, and red carnations, the club flower. During the delicious two-course dinner Mrs. Marguerite Hercules presided as toastmistress, and toasts were given by Mrs. Addie Patterson, Mrs. Delora Curie, Mrs. Minnie Bayman and Miss Violet May.

After the dinner hour the party adjourned to the home of Mrs. Hercules and a social evening ensued. Miss Delight Smith, of New Haven, gave two readings. Mrs. Thelma Baker won first prize in a contest, and Mrs. Harriett Johnson the consolation. The only two charter members of the club, Mrs. Delora Curie, active and Mrs. Addie Patterson, honorary, were each presented with an attractive gift.

All guests were seemingly very reluctant to break up their reminiscing and say goodbye, but eventually all did, expressing much pleasure from the evening's program.

CHURCHMAN REFUSES TO VOTE HIS RESENTMENTS

Indianapolis, Oct. 17. (Special.)—Endorsement of President Hoover for reelection was made here by one of the leading churchmen of the United States in a statement issued to the press by James A. Crain, secretary of the Board of Temperance and Social Welfare of the Disciples of Christ Church and member of the National Prohibition Board of Strategy.

Mr. Crain, who is regarded as a leading churchman, was attending the international convention of the Disciples of Christ Church, which closed its annual session here yesterday.

Although termed "purely personal," the statement from the church leader is regarded as very significant, according to political observers.

In the statement issued to the press Mr. Crain said: "After carefully weighing the political situation, I have decided to vote for President Hoover for reelection."

"I shall support Hoover for the following reasons:

"1. Because of his sincere efforts on behalf of world peace, as evidenced by his support of the London and Geneva disarmament conferences, his attitude toward the Kellogg pact, and his proposal for one-third reduction of military and naval armaments.

"2. Because of his declaration that the United States will refuse to recognize territorial gains made anywhere in the world at the expense of the Kellogg pact.

"3. Because of his notable work on behalf of child welfare.

"4. Because, while I do not agree with his opinion as to the desirability of a change in the national prohibition law, he does demand a constructive alternative to prohibition as opposed to naked repeal without Federal protection of dry states, as proposed by his opponent.

"5. Because, while I am an ex-service man, I believe that payment of the soldiers' bonus at this time is justified neither in morals nor statesmanship.

"6. Because I believe that he has made a heroic struggle against economic conditions which are world-wide and for which neither he nor any other single man is to blame. In short, I refuse to vote my resentments.

"This decision is purely personal and in no way commits the Board of Temperance and Social Welfare of the Disciples of Christ to this action."

NATIONAL SPEAKER COMING

Oliver W. Stewart, of Chicago, nationally known speaker, will be in DeKalb county, Saturday and Sunday, November 5 and 6, and as planned will be in St. Joe on Saturday night, for an address. Keep this date in mind.

WABASH WRECK

About 6:30 Wednesday morning, train No. 96, Wabash fast freight, east bound, was ditched near the Spencerville pumping station, and 16 cars were demolished, containing hogs, eggs and other valuable merchandise. Cars were piled up on the steep grade and tracks were torn up for several hundred feet.

CHAPTER III

That afternoon, on the shore at Sunset House, Omar sat pulling gloomily at his pipe beside the loaded and waiting paterboro, scanning the wide reaches of the still lake for a sign of Jim's canoe.

"He go for to see dat woman," he muttered, with an ominous shake of his black head, as he cut a pipeful from a plug of Company nigger-head. Then he turned with a scowl at the sound of Sarah's shrill voice.

"Where see Master Jeem?"

As he glanced around at her Omar's swart features slowly expanded in a smile. Sarah's coal-black head was resplendent in a crimson scarf.

"Why you laugh?" she demanded angrily, her black eyes snapping at Omar's mouth widened into a leer.

He liked to bait the fiery Sarah. "You look lak' de sky wen de sun set. Marthe, she see you?"

The thick-set Sarah wrathfully stamped her moccasined foot on a pebble, and as quickly lifted it with a grunted, "To!" of pain. "Where see he? You not go to lak' Expanse?" she snapped, ignoring the allusion to her scarf.

"Ah-hah, we go!" replied the amused Omar, refusing to share his suspicions with the inquisitive Ojibwa, who had evidently been won over by Aureole's gift. "She see you dat? You lak' dat crane girl of LeBlond?"

Toasting her gaudy head, the self-conscious Sarah turned away as she proudly thrust over her shoulder: "Eet lak' manne mink skin to buy dis seek shawl!"

With a shrug of his heavy shoulders at the schlemmery of women, Omar resumed his vigil by the lake. In mid-afternoon Jim's birch-bark slid in to the shore.

Leaving Esau in charge of the post, planning his coming campaign in the Pipestone country, Stuart and Omar, with Smoke, running the near shore, paddled late into the June twilight. Should he ever see her again, Jim wondered. It would be August when he returned from Lake Expanse, and then they must start north with Esau. When they returned from the summer camp of the Pipestone Ojibwa, she would be gone. And now, when Paradise told his story, LeBlond would have her watched—followed. There would be no message at the split rock—not even a good-by.

As the stem of the canoe nosed a wedge-shaped ripple over the still lake tinted with the rose of the afterglow, past the silhouettes of spruce ridges purple against the flushed sky, the poignant memory of the bewildering girl the storm had brought to Sunset House accompanied the bowman.

At last, while there was yet light to make camp, they landed. And before the supper was cooked, Smoke appeared, wet from his swim across the mouth of a wide bay.

"Well, old sport, you left the shore to follow game, eh?" Jim rubbed the black ears of the great head as the panting Smoke swished his tail in pleasure at reaching his master.

After supper, with the dog's great head between his knees, Jim described his meeting with Paradise, while the seamed face of Omar reflected his disapproval in a set scowl. Much as he shrank from bringing Aureole LeBlond into the narrative, the staunch loyalty of his friend deserved in return Jim's complete confidence. Omar had already guessed why he had taken that morning paddle.

"You lak' dat woman yer mooh?" the half-breed asked gravely when Stuart had finished. "Eet lak' troubl' for you. I tot you lak' dat girl of Christie, at Lak' Expanse."

"Well, I like her, too, Omar. She's a fine woman, Mary Christie."

"But eet you lak' dat French girl, why you not let heed down—dis Paradise?"

Jim shook his head. "I couldn't do that. He couldn't swim. I had upset the boat."

"He weel mak' mooh troubl' for us. Bettair let heed down; no one know. The Indian in Omar had spoken. "You cross de lak' again, Omar go wid you."

"You old wolf! You wouldn't let Paradise off, if you got those paws of yours on him. Their beating us for the trade's got under you skin."

With a guttural growl Omar nodded. "We feex dem yet, you and Esau and Omar. We get fur from de Pipestone cuntry dis long snow, or—phit! Sunset House, she bust!" And knocking out his pipe, the loyal French-Ojibwa prepared to roll himself in his blanket.

Two days later Jim and Omar were packing over the portage between the Lake of the Sand Beaches and the Woman river, which flowed into Lake Expanse. Ahead, Smoke thrashed through the "bush" in search of rabbits. Half-way across the carry Omar rested the bow of the canoe in a birch and Jim slipped the tump-line lashed to his backboard from his forehead. Then they sat down and filled their pipes.

"Christie's going to tear his hair over our small spring trade," said Jim. "I suppose he'll blame it all on me."

"Ah-hah, he forget wat you did at God's lake."

"They're prodding him pretty hard from Winnipeg. He's a bit worried—thinks they might retire him."

The furious yelping of the husky up the trail caused the two men to lift their heads in curiosity.

"What's he got, there?" queried Jim. "He's not running—can't have stumbled into a sulky bull moose."

FROM THE BEGINNING

From his fur post, Sunset House, in the Canadian north, Jim Stuart, trader in charge, with his headman, Omar, rescued a girl from an overturned canoe in the lake. She is Aureole LeBlond, daughter of Stuart's rival in the fur business, and proves to be a charming companion. In a spirit of fun, she and Jim arrange to exchange notes on a certain island. LeBlond, with Paradise, his half-breed lieutenant, arrives in search of the missing girl. Paradise displays enmity toward Jim, though LeBlond acknowledges his debt of gratitude to Sunset House. Going to the island, Jim is ambushed by Paradise and forced to travel toward the LeBlond post. On the way he overtures the boat, leaving his half-drowned enemy on the beach.

Omar shook his head. "He got some-ting een a tree."

"Well, let's start along," said Jim. "He's near the trail. We'll find out."

Taking up their loads the two men continued over the carry. Shortly they came up with Smoke, yelping excitedly a few yards off the trail.

Slipping the tump-line from his head, Jim dropped his load and turned off the path to see what the husky had treed, when an angry voice rose above the bedlam of the husky's yelps.

"Call off that dog!"

In the thick branches of a spruce perched a stranger treed by Smoke.

"Here, Smoke! Stop that noise!" Secretly amused at the discomfiture of the man in the tree, Jim reached his dog. "He's all right, now; he won't bother you," he said.

"What d'yuh mean—having a wolf like that loose in the bush? If I'd had my gun, I'd have bored him."

"Oh, no, you wouldn't kill a valuable dog because he yelped at you. If you'd spoken to him, he wouldn't have hurt you." Jim scrutinized the stranger, who suspiciously eyed Smoke, now calmly surveying his former quarry. Evidently, from his dog clothes and general appearance, he had come from "outside." Who could he be?

"Speak to him? I spoke to him in four languages, but he wouldn't listen," laughed the other.

"Well, Smoke's satisfied that you're all right, now," said Jim, impressed by the good nature of this man in new whipcords, with the stamp of the city on face and manner. "You left your outfit at the end of the portage?"

"Yes. You're Hudson's Bay people, I suppose. The stranger smiled. "I'm McLaren, of the North-West Trading company."

"Oh, yes, Mr. McLaren. I've heard of you." Jim had indeed heard of the man who had furnished the financial backing for LeBlond's string of fur posts; but he was surprised to find him so young—hardly forty, from his looks. "My name is Stuart. I'm in charge at Sunset House."

For a space McLaren seemed to measure the caliber of the tall fur trader with the level gray eyes which coolly looked into his. Then he said: "So you're the chap who's bucking us at Sunset House?"

"Yes, Mr. McLaren," said Stuart, his face hardening. "I'm bucking you. In the last three years you've had the laugh on me, but I want to tell you that you'll have to work for the fur in the future."

McLaren, with a smile, extended his hand. "Good day, Stuart," he said, ignoring Jim's remark, "from what I hear of you, you're too good a man to be sacrificed at Sunset House. The odds are too heavy against you."

"This winter the odds are going to shift," said Jim, as McLaren's men came up with the canoe and dunnage, and the partner of LeBlond left him. "You mak' mooh talk wid dat fellier, grumbled Omar, walking to the canoe. "He lak' de fur from you an' you shake hand. Bettair let Smoke eat heed up, eh?"

"You're certainly a good hater, Omar," laughed Jim. "But the man was friendly, and I was glad to have a look at LeBlond's partner."

"Ah-hah, grunted the half-breed, lifting the paterboro to his shoulder. "He steal de fur an' he steal de girl." Across the remaining mile of portage to the Woman river Omar's gloomy prophecy dominated Jim's thoughts. Already he had put the hope of again seeing Aureole LeBlond, that summer, behind him, but the thought of McKnicker's?

Lauren monopolizing her for days—weeks, possibly—aroused in him a deep resentment over the duty which had sent him south to Lake Expanse. He found himself wondering if this McLaren were a single man—then laughed at a jealousy based on a few hours with a girl whom, in all likelihood, he would never see again.

The paterboro approached the post, asleep in the soft July sun. For two hundred years this post had guarded the frontiers of Klwined.

At the big log trade-house Christie and his clerk, McComb, turned from the slab table where they were bent over a book of accounts, heads together, when Jim entered.

"Good day, Mr. Christie—McComb!" greeted Jim.

The door face of Andrew Christie framed in an iron-gray beard, turned on the voyager with the effigy of a smile on the stiff lips.

"So you're here—at last? I've been expecting you."

Jim's teeth clamped hard at the coolness of his reception from the inspector of the district.

"I came by canoe—not airplane," he countered.

"Well, Mary's waiting to see you at the house and supper'll soon be ready, so we'll not talk business now," answered the older man, turning to his figure.

At the factor's quarters a woman watched Jim's approach. He waved his hat and she lifted a hand in reply. As he reached her the fair skin of the girl's face was touched with color, her blue eyes, beneath the thatch of gold outlined at the back, alight with pleasure.

"Well, Jim, how are you?" said Mary Christie as he took her hand. "It seems years since you were here in January."

"Seems longer than that to me, Mary," returned. "How well you're looking! And the girl with you?"

As they entered the house the girl threw a sidelong glance at the bold profile of the man beside her. "I'm glad you think so, Jim."

Jim thought of Aureole LeBlond. Sooner or later the news of the girl's mishap and the visit of her father to Sunset House would reach Lake Expanse. He would have to report it to Christie. But he would tell Mary now before her father and McComb appeared.

"Did you know that my rival LeBlond has his daughter with him this summer?" he boldly began.

"The Indians saw when they passed through. Have you seen her?" demanded the girl with interest.

"Well," said Jim with a smile, "I should say that I have. We found her in a big boat clinging to a canoe drifting in the lake."

Mary Christie leaned toward the speaker, her face eager with curiosity. "You saved her life—pulled her out of the lake? What's she like?"

The feminine curiosity evidenced in the question drew a laugh from the trader. "Well, she had bobbed hair and wore knickers. What'd you think of that?"

"I don't think much of it," said Mary, drily, "but you're not telling me what she's like."

"Are you interested to hear the rest of the story?" he demanded.

"What is she like, Jim? What happened? Did you take her to Sunset House?"

"She's dark, of course—like her father. A good looking—striking, in fact," he stammered on.

"Even with her hair bobbed—and knickers?"

Serpent Big Figure in Mythology and History

Considering that the serpent, alone among the lower creatures, can travel with speed upon land or upon water, can climb trees, swallow other creatures of much greater size than itself, go without food for incredibly long periods, has eyes protected by a very strong horny substance, so that it can squeeze itself into stony crevices without damaging its eyesight, possesses the ability to fascinate birds and small animals so that they are helpless to make their escape, can inflict death by a bite, etc., it is not to be wondered at that it figures largely in ancient mythology and history, as also in Biblical lore.

Egypt, India, Africa found place for it among their gods. At one period in their history the Israelites also paid it divine honors (II Kings 18:4). In

Explaining Solar System

The solar system is the sun, with the group of celestial bodies which, held by its attraction, revolve around it. This group comprises, so far as is known, nine major planets attended by 99 satellites, about 700 minor planets or asteroids, also comets and meteors.

tropical countries where it is found in greatest number and widest variety, it is the dread and curse of the countryside, and fear is often an elementary ingredient of natural religion.

Mesopotamia, the original home of the human race, is especially infested with serpents, sometimes in numbers almost incredible, the mouth of the Euphrates in some flood seasons being a great moving mass of the horrifying creatures.

Special Holy Days

Ember days or Ember weeks are the four seasons set apart in the early centuries by the western church for special prayer and fasting and for the ordination of the clergy. The weeks are those immediately following Holy Cross day, September 14; St. Lucy's day, December 13; the first Sunday in Lent (movable), and Whit Sunday (also movable). Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays of these weeks are called Ember days, the Sundays following these days being days of ordination. They were known to be observed in Britain as early as 607, and were affirmed by the council of Aachen, 1000.

"Yes, even with her short hair and the knickers. In fact the knickers were becoming," he laughed.

Mary's regular features stiffened. "They must have been—very—when you pulled her out of the lake."

Then Jim briefly narrated the events of the evening following the coming of Aureole LeBlond to Sunset House. When he had finished, the girl who had listened while her eyes furtively ranged from crisp brown hair, and bold, weather-burned features, to the well-set shoulders and capable hands, said quietly: "And to think that you'll never see this—what d'they call 'em, flappers—this flapper again, the daughter of your bitter rival. Poor Jim!"

The sound of voices checked Jim's reply as Christie and McComb entered the house.

That evening the inspector sat late with Stuart. The spring trade at Sunset House had been little better than that of the year before. It was a great disappointment to Andrew Christie and he made no effort to conceal his chagrin.

"They'll be after me again at Winnipeg when they see yer returns," he said, squinting at Jim through his steel-rimmed glasses. "It's three years now since we set you up at Mitawangama and ye're making little headway against the Frenchman. Ye've been a great disappointment to me, Stuart. Knowing yer father, and yer own record at God's lake, I picked yer name when heat Louis LeBlond at his own game."

Jim's blood heated at the unfairness of the thrust. "Yes," he said, "and how have you backed me up? You've held me to Lake Expanse prices and allowed LeBlond to outbid me for the fur."

"But the Hudson's Bay goods are better—they're worth more."

"That's true; they are; but LeBlond's got a mysterious hold on all the northern hunters who've kept away from us. Omar and I think we've stumbled into a clue. We're going to follow it up this summer."

"Well, it's high time the post was getting its share of that trade. It's beyond me why ye've not done better. Yer father, if alive, would be sore disappointed."

BLAME SUN SPOTS FOR "HARD TIMES"

If the sun didn't put us on the spot, then it put its spots on us. In other words, the sun's spots caused the depression (hard times have been blamed on almost everything else, so why not on the sun?). A study of sun spots made by the Dominion observatory of the department of interior at Ottawa, Can., is reported to have indicated that profound fluctuations in living conditions and life in general accompany fluctuations in these heavenly or solar phenomena. A recent bulletin from that department points out that individual sun spots vary greatly in size, some being as small as the earth while others are five or six times as large. Complete records of sun spots kept by certain countries since 1750 show that each month can be assigned a relative sun spot number. From these monthly numbers a yearly average is figured. The yearly numbers are said to increase from a minimum to a maximum in from nine to fourteen years with an average duration for a cycle of about eleven years. This fluctuation is commonly called the eleven-year sun-spot cycle. These cycles are accompanied on the earth by fluctuations in the amount of sunlight received, precipitation, cloudiness, temperature, chemical composition of the atmosphere, electro-magnetic conditions, etc., all physical elements which control living conditions for all forms of life.—Pathfinder Magazine.

More Wheat Land in Ireland

Half a million acres more of wheat land in Ireland have been put under the plow than last year as a result of the new wheat quota. This was declared by Sir Boyd Merriman, solicitor general, at a Unionist fete at Fort Castle, near Berwick. He said that the remarkable recovery of the country in the last year and the great war loan conversion scheme showed that the country was not down and out. He believed that the wheat quota would end in farmers selling wheat at less than the cost of production.

Devastation by Lemmings

The Norwegian lemmings, small creatures of the mouse tribe that live in the mountainous districts of the Scandinavian countries, are noted for the strange migrations they make at certain intervals. At these times they travel in great masses from the center of Norway to the east and west, leaving desolation in their wake. When they reach the coast they fling themselves into the sea to die. Some are always left behind, however, to propagate their race, but this does not need to be a large number, as they breed very rapidly.

Bats Not Blind

Of the many varieties of bats there are none that cannot see, although, being nocturnal in their habits, their eyes are better suited for seeing in the dark than in a bright light.

Millions of Years Ago

If you want to see what the forests of California and Oregon looked like millions of years ago, just take a trip to South America. There, on the slopes of the Venezuelan Andes, you may see living trees that closely resemble species once native to the western coast of North America, a Carnegie Institute of Washington expedition to this South American region has revealed. This discovery, made by Prof. Ralph W. Chaney of the University of California and Dr. Erling Dorf of Princeton University, was based on a comparison of the foliage of the South American trees with leaf prints of the ancient west coast trees that are found as fossilized remains in the rocks of today. It upholds the theory that the forests that once existed in North America were pushed south as the climate became increasingly cold and dry.—Detroit Free Press.

DAIRY FACTS

SHOWS HIGH VALUE OF DAIRY FINDINGS

Specialist Summarizes Good Results.

By T. A. SUTTON, Dairy Specialist, College of Agriculture, Ohio State University.—WNU Service.

Summarizing some of the results of agricultural experiment stations in various parts of the country, I find that considerable information of practical value to Ohio dairymen has been uncovered recently.

The Missouri agricultural experiment station has found from a study of proven sires that a sire should have ten or more daughters with yearly records in order to predict the average of future daughters with reasonable accuracy.

Workers at the Illinois station report that while green feed enriches the color of milk, proteins from different sources fed in concentrates did not affect the color.

The same experiment station also finds that soybeans are best cut for hay when the pods are well filled. This conclusion is based on the fact that the highest total yield per acre was obtained by cutting at this time, 41 per cent of the total weight was leaves and 59 per cent was pods. Other investigators in Indiana discovered that soybean hay cut when the pods were completely formed, the beans well formed, and the lower leaves turning yellow, is superior for both milk and fat production to hays cut in earlier stages of maturity.

Still other workers in Nebraska have reported some important data concerning the influence of the number of milkings on the production of dairy cows. Analysis of their records show that high-producing Holstein, Jersey, Guernsey, and Ayrshire cows of different ages milked three times a day produced from 39 to 52 per cent more fat and 44 to 65 per cent more milk than do cows milked twice daily. Cows milked four times daily produced from 110 to 127 per cent more fat and from 149 to 160 per cent more milk than do cows milked twice a day.

Herd Tests Valuable to Owners of Dairy Cows

The herd test, says Professor Brownell, New York State College of Agriculture, is popular because it is an economical way to get records on all the cows in a herd. It is possible for members of dairy herd improvement associations to have their records accepted and published in the herd book of the national association. These records are preserved and published in a book each year and serve as an invaluable aid in proving herd sires and in building a sound breeding program. Provision is made by the association for the voluntary cancellation of registration papers on the low-producing purebreds, and to remove them from the herd books to raise the general average quality of the breed. To date, about 11 per cent of the Holsteins tested in the herd test have been weeded out and their registry papers canceled.

Grain Ration

When the pasture grass or green feed is only fair cows will want more grain and to keep them in flesh and producing well they should have more. A good rule to go by at this time is one pound of grain to every four or five pounds of milk produced, depending upon the test and the quantity the cow gives. Most grain rations recommended for use with pasture contain about 15 to 16 per cent protein. There are several good pasture mixtures that will give good results.

For a grain ration to feed when the pasture grass is dry and short and when the green feed has lost most of its succulence, one-half the pasture ration and one-half of a 20 per cent hard ration may be fed during this period.

Clean Utensils

Be sure that milk pails and other utensils used for milk are washed promptly after using. First: Rinse them with lukewarm or cool water. Second: Wash them thoroughly with hot water and washing soda. Third: Scald and let dry without wiping. Fourth: Set utensils on rack so that they will drain thoroughly. Let the sun shine on them as much as possible. Remember: Protect cream when you take it to market. Place a wet burlap sack over the can to keep it cool. Tuck the ears of the burlap sack under the can lid handle. Fill the lid of the can with water. The wet sack acts like a lamp wick and draws the water down around the side of the can. Evaporation does the cooling.

Comparing Milk Color

A machine is being developed to compare the color of milk of one cow with others. This will make possible the elimination of cows that produce pale-colored milk and select those that give a rich-colored milk as demanded by consumers. Breeders will now face the problem of meeting color demand in milk just as they now meet demand for proper breed characteristics, production capacity and individual merit of their animals, a writer in the Prairie Farmer comments.

Lesson for October 23
PROBLEMS OF THE MODERN HOME

Joshua 24:14, 15; Mark 10:3-12; Ephesians 6:1-9.

GOLDEN TEXT—And if it seem evil unto you to serve the Lord, choose you this day whom ye will serve; whether the gods which your fathers served that were on the other side of the flood, or the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell; but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord. Joshua 24:15.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Pleasing God in My Home.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Rules to Live By at Home.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—My Home Problems.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Problems of the Modern Home.

1. A United Home to Serve the Lord (Josh. 24:14, 15).

Joshua had succeeded Moses as Israel's leader. He was conscious of his being taken away soon in death from the people (Josh. 23:1), and of their liability to lapse into idolatry. He reviewed before them the history of God's goodness to them, and appealed to them for a rational consideration of their responsibility, and the exercise of sober judgment (v. 14). He wanted their choice of God as over against the false gods to be a balanced judgment. He followed this appeal with his own example (v. 15). He told them that his mind was already made up. He associated his household with himself. His decision was not a hasty one. It had been talked over at home, therefore, he uttered the united sentiment of his family.

11. The Father and Mother in the Home (Mark 10:2-12).

God constituted the race male and female. His purpose was that they should be united for life in holy wedlock, with love as the bond of union between them.

1. Marriage should not be degraded by divorce (vv. 2-3). God ordained the marriage relation, and intended it to be indissoluble. God, through Moses, suffered, limited, and regulated divorce, because of the hardness of the hearts of the people.

2. Marriage is God's primal law (vv. 6-9). The ideal law of life for the subjects of Christ's kingdom is marriage. This is proven by the fundamental fact of sex, "God made them male and female" (v. 6).

3. Marriage has God's sanction (v. 9). God declared to Adam that man should leave father and mother and cleave unto his wife.

4. Marriage of the divorcer forbidden (vv. 4-12). The marriage relation should be broken only by death, or by sin. The party responsible for divorce, who marries again, is guilty of adultery.

111. Members of the Household (Eph. 6:1-9).

In the home are found father, mother, children, and sometimes servants. Each member has rights and privileges which must be respected.

1. Children (vv. 1-3).

a. They should obey their parents (v. 1). The ground for this obedience is the fact that the parents stand in the place of God with the children.

b. The children should honor their parents (v. 2). Obedience to parents is limited to the period of immaturity. When children take their place in the establishing of new units in society, they are no longer under obligation to obey their parents. Honor means to have in reverence.

2. Parents (v. 4). Doubtless the word "fathers" is intended to be inclusive of the mothers.

a. Provide not your children to wrath. Parents should not irritate or aggravate their children.

b. To bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Nurture denotes means to educate, and admonition to discipline.

3. Servants and masters (vv. 5-9).

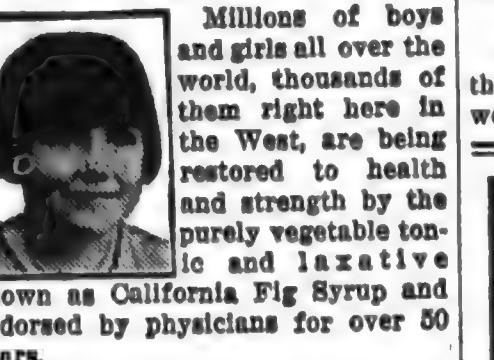

a. Servants are to obey their masters (vv. 5-6). This obedience should be (1) Servants should have proper respect for their masters, and an earnest desire to please them. (2) Servants should perform their tasks as though they were doing them for Christ's sake. (3) The servant's aim should not be merely to please the eyes of the master, but to render honest and acceptable service. (4) With good will. It should not be primarily for approval or pay. Christian servants will perform their duties to their masters with the same fidelity as they would unto Christ. (5) Rewarded by the Lord (v. 8). The Lord takes account of our service in the common ways of life, and will some day reward us accordingly.

b. Masters to be considerate (v. 9). Just as servants are to give wholehearted consideration for their masters, so masters are to look after the best interests of their servants.

Bacillus of Tetanus

During the World war the well cultivated fields in the north of France were found to teem with the bacillus of tetanus, whose ravages among the wounded would have been appallingly heavy but for the timely use of that antitoxin which was available, thanks to the researches of Baron Shibasaburo Kitasato many years earlier. The story of Kitasato, a pioneer of medicine and a microbe hunter, is told by Dr. Claude Lillington in Hygeia Magazine.

Girl at the Top in Health Tests

Millions of boys and girls all over the world, thousands of them right here in the West, are being restored to health and strength by the purely vegetable tonic and laxative known as California Fig Syrup and endorsed by physicians for over 50 years.

Children need no urging to take it. They love its rich, fruity flavor. Nothing can compete with it as a gentle, but certain laxative, and it goes further than this. It gives tone and strength to the stomach and bowels so these organs continue to act normally, of their own accord. It stimulates the appetite, helps digestion.

A Kansas mother, Mrs. Dana Allgire, 610 Monroe St., Topeka, says: "Bonnie B. is absolutely the picture of health, now, with her rosy cheeks, bright eyes and plump but graceful little body and she stands at the top in every health test."

Much of the credit for her perfect condition is due to California Fig Syrup. We have used it since babyhood to keep her bowels active during colds or any children's ailments and she has always had an easy time with them. She always responds to its gentle urging and is quickly back to normal."

Ask your druggist for California Fig Syrup and look for the word "California" on the carton so you'll always get the genuine.

Watch the Birdy

Mr. Marx, of South Bend, was at the school last Thursday and shot every one from the first grade to the twelfth. No! No, it was only with a camera that he shot them. We are all waiting anxiously for the pictures to be developed.

Everyone seems to have recovered from the tests without any serious results—except grades.

The Freshmen are having a class party Wednesday night, October 19 at the home of Harriett Keller. Everyone is wishing them a good time at their first party. Do you suppose they will be initiated? Time will tell.

The Seniors are going to have their graduation photographs taken in the near future. The pictures will be taken at the Ozaki Studio in Fort Wayne.

Sniffle, Sniffle
Due to cold weather, many people have been having coughs and colds since the Auburn Fair.

Grade Activities
Loren Inlow of the second grade had the misfortune of cutting his head open last week. He has been out of school several days.

The primary room made a scrapbook and sent it to little Franklin Shuff, who is in the hospital at Garrett.

The third and fourth grade room has been greatly brightened up by the plants which the mothers have sent in.

The fifth grade pupils have been making an interesting history project of Egypt.

Dick Wasson was absent from school Monday because of a sore knee.

Christine Zonker and Betty Kees were both absent because of illness.

The home economics class was canning Wednesday and Thursday for the hot lunch.

The attendance for the high school was very good last week—probably because everyone was enjoying the tests.

Mrs. Marie P. Ringle, the itinerant teacher of Voc. Home Economics, visited the St. Joe vocational department last week.

The band will play for the Farm Bureau Friday night, October 21.

The girl's chorus has been practicing quite conscientiously in the group and individual rehearsals.

The high school teachers were busy making out the grades this week and the students were all waiting anxiously for them.

SOME LOCAL BRIEFS

The apple harvesting has been delayed this week so far, on account of the rain.

Lucille and Frank Curie, Jr., were Sunday dinner guests in the Chas. Curie home.

John R. Leighty addressed the members of the Masonic lodge at Auburn, Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Waddell and daughter, of North Baltimore were guests in the L. D. Young home Friday and Saturday.

Earl Smith and family, of near Gary, were home over Sunday. Earl expects to be on the extra list of operators within a couple of weeks, and then his family will return to St. Joe.

The St. Joe and Spencerville schools will be closed Thursday and Friday of this week to give the teachers an opportunity to attend the teachers' association meetings at Fort Wayne and Indianapolis.

The Democratic speech at the gym Friday night, drew a very small crowd, probably due to being poorly advertised. The county candidates were present and were introduced by the county chairman, Roy Oberlin. R. C. Parrish, of Fort Wayne, made a talk.

The Hall-Stingle Canning Co., at Waterloo is facing a severe fine, for stream pollution, as evidenced by an affidavit filed by the state department of conservation in DeKalb county. It is charged that refuse from the company is emptied into Cedar Creek. The penalty is a fine of $100 a day.

The Jersey bull owned by Chas. Curie, won first, in the two-year-old class, and also, was given the Senior and Grand Champion ribbons at the Free Fall Fair held at Auburn. He also won one first, two seconds and one third at other fairs where competition was unusually strong, including winners from the Ohio and Michigan State Fairs.

Funeral services for Mrs. Jennie Arthur were held Monday afternoon at the J. R. Clark funeral home in Auburn. Rev. Jos. Ferguson of east of Auburn officiating. Burial was made in Evergreen cemetery. Mrs. Arthur died Friday at the home of her sister, Mrs. Isaac Kutner, residing west of Reed's Hill on State Road No. 27, north of Auburn. Mr. Wm. Pepple attended the funeral services, being a relative.

Make those pennies go farther—school tablets at News Office.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hull spent Sunday in Auburn at the Wm. Quance home. They were all evening guests at the Fred Quance home.

The Ladies Aid Society of the M. P. Church will meet Thursday in an all day meeting with Mrs. Eva Miller. There will be pot luck dinner served.

Little Miss April Bowser has returned home from a week's visit at Delphos, O., with her aunt, Mrs. Velma Mohnsey, and family. Miss Inez Kinsey accompanied Mrs. Mohnsey home Sunday evening for a visit.

Mr. and Mrs. B. V. Widney, of Columbia City, have been enjoying their vacation here assisting in the apple harvest at the Widney orchard. After this week they will return to their work as county agricultural agent.

B. E. Widney returned home Sunday evening from Duluth, Minn., where he has been visiting for some time. Mr. and Mrs. Lester Fiant accompanied him home and will visit this week among relatives in this community.

Announcements are made of Republican meetings in Auburn on October 25th when Congressman Hogg and Senator Arthur Robinson and on October 27th when Raymond Springer, of Connersville, candidate for governor will speak.

Mrs. Elizabeth Stanley, of Liberty, Ind., was re-elected president of the Indiana Woman's Christian Temperance Union at the organization's annual meeting at Columbus, Ind., Saturday. Mrs. Ida M. Mix, of Kokomo, was elected vice president; Miss Mary Woodward, of Fountain City, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Mary C. Connell, of Greensburg, recording secretary, and Mrs. Stella C. Stinson, of Terre Haute, treasurer.

Three remonstrances against township tax levies were filed with County Auditor Frank E. Lyon Saturday by residents of Keyser, Jackson and Smithfield townships. It is going to be a difficult matter to cut down to the limit of $1.50 as authorized by the legislature. The tax levy for St. Joe was cut by the county tax board as follows: Street and alley tax of 10 cents was taken off entirely, and the light rate was reduced 4 cents.

WABASH HAD A BAD WRECK NEAR SPENCERVILLE

A freight train on the Wabash was wrecked at the Allen-DeKalb County Line crossing near the Spencerville cemetery Wednesday morning, October 19, when sixteen freight cars were derailed. It is believed that the accident was caused by a broken axle on a car, containing fancy bricks, which was overloaded.

The extent of damage was estimated to be $50,000.00. One car in the wreckage was loaded with eggs, two with butter, one with smoked hams, one with cement, one with fancy bricks and four with hogs, one hundred of which were killed. Approximately 550 feet of track was torn up and several of the cars were wrecked beyond repair.

Two wreckers and a crew of fifty men were kept busy all day clearing the track of the wreckage and repairing it for use. All trains scheduled to run on this road were detained until about 5:30 o'clock that evening. Many people visited the scene of the accident.

FORT WAYNE DESPERADO CAUGHT HERE SUNDAY

Sheriff John P. Hoff and his deputy, Herbert N. Grimm, arrested two men Sunday that probably were connected with an automobile theft ring and the officers also recovered two cars.

The prisoners are Hubert Myers, alias Wm. Mack, 32, of Fort Wayne and Chicago, and Clarence Irvin, 19, of Stafford township, DeKalb county.

Myers led himself into trouble by stopping at the home of Geo. Baker near St. Joe the night of July 20 and stealing a wheel and tire and an automobile robe from Harold Baker's car, which was parked in the yard. When the theft was reported to Sheriff Hoff, a neighbor youth named Shilling told about observing a model A sport coupe with a nickel plated tire cover parked near the Baker home that night as he was passing. The sheriff began looking for a machine of such a description and on Sunday he learned that one was parked on a St. Joe street.

Mr. Hoff and his deputy proceeded to St. Joe and found that Myers was the driver of the car and that he was at the home of a sister, Mrs. Sherman Zimmerman. He was taken into custody. The officers then began checking up on the car he was driving and found it was stolen at Ft. Wayne June 26 and was the property of Nancy Linn of Detroit. It was further revealed that the Michigan license plates were removed from the car and Indiana plates that were issued to Thad Parker of LaOtto, were placed on it. Myers confessed Monday to the theft of this car.

Taken before Judge Endicott Monday morning, Myers entered a plea of guilty to the charge of petit larceny under advisement pending the development of the other charges.

ELECTRIC RATES TO BE LOWERED SOON

A petition of the Indiana and Michigan Electric Company to reduce electric rates in 11 northern Indiana cities and towns was approved by the Public Service commission at Indianapolis Tuesday last week.

Localities affected include South Bend, Roseland, Osceola, Lakeville, Lapaz, Elkhart, Lionier, Butler, Grabbill, Woodburn, St. Joe, Spencerville and Harlan.

It was estimated by the commission that approximately 37,000 consumers would save $150,000 a year under the reduced schedule.

The reduction has been approved by the city councils of South Bend and Elkhart, but the utility and the commission agreed that the reductions should be ordered into effect for all incorporated cities and towns served by the company, according to Commissioners Ralph Young and Howard Ellis, who wrote the order.

Negotiations for the reduction have been in progress between the company, the commission and cities affected for some time. Final agreement of the company to the new schedules and final approval of the commission was obtained Tuesday.

As far as we are able to learn, the reduction will be one cent per KWH.

ELEVEN LADIES AID SOCI- ETIES ENTERTAINED BY CO- BURN'S CORNERS

The Ladies of the Coburn's Corners Church entertained about one hundred guests with an "Autumn Tea" at the church, Wednesday afternoon, October nineteenth. The guests were received in the main auditorium where a very good program was presented. Many quaint and old fashioned costumes were used which, in connection with the number being given, brought forth the hearty laughter of every one present.

After the program the guests were taken to the basement of the church where, seated at twelve beautifully appointed tables in the midst of a veritable forest of autumn leaves and flowers, they were served with tea, ginger bread and whipped cream.

There were ladies from the Christian Church of Edgerton from the United Brethren and Christian Churches of Newville from the West Milford Christian Church, the Lutheran, Methodist and Christian Churches of St. Joe, the Harlan Christian Church and the Lutheran and Methodist Churches of Spencerville.

All present enjoyed themselves to the utmost and expressed their pleasure in words of sincere praise for the happy occasion.

Questions of utmost importance to the present day high school principal will be included on the conference. The theme of the conference will be "Standards for Secondary Education" and the principal speaker will be Dr. George E. Carrothers, director of high school inspection, University of Michigan.

BI-CENTENNIAL PROGRAM PLANNED FOR ST. JOE

On Thursday night, November 10, the people of St. Joe and surrounding community will present a Washington Bi-Centennial program at the Gymnasium.

The government has been asking for these programs all over the United States in the last few months to honor the memory of George Washington.

At this time of the year, the memories of the World War are freshest in the minds of the present generation, so the committees felt that since they were honoring the veterans of all wars as well as George Washington it would be very appropriate to have such a program on or near Armistice Day.

A large number of people are working on this entertainment and there will be a number of phases of it, readings, pageants, special music and a play.

This affair is everybody's and let us all go, showing our appreciation of the efforts our folks are putting forth to make it a success. And if the right spirit and good will, with which they are going at it are indication the program our community puts on will be one we will all be proud of.

Watch for the program next week.

WORDS AND DEEDS

ROOSEVELT'S HOOPER'S Words Deeds

The Agricultural Tariff.

The claim that two million cotton bales in the northern states of Mexico are seeking a market. The price is about $2.50 per 100 pounds on the south bank of the Rio Grande. It is $4.50 on the north bank. Only the tariff wall stands between.

Farm Mortgages.

It is my purpose, if elected, to formulate definite projects to relieve this distress. Specifically, construction of banks, I am prepared to insist that federal credit be extended to banks, insurance or loan companies or other corporations or individuals holding farm mortgages.

Foreign Trade.

I advocate a policy based in soundness by the large part upon the simple principle of profitable exchange arrived at through negotiation for the sale of United States farm products in foreign markets.

The Bonus and Printing Press Money.

The President Hoover has made no statement on this issue, which was approved by the house of representatives, under Democratic leadership, in the printing press last session of money. Proposal blocked by Republican senate.

Franklin D. Roosevelt International Banker

As Democratic Presidential Candidate, Franklin D. Roosevelt assails "international bankers, exploiting unsuspecting American public with worthless securities." He promises that, if elected, he will seek legislation to curb such activities.

As president of the United European Investors, Ltd., this same Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1922 invited American investors "to participate in the large earnings and dividends of German securities."

The New York Times of September 14, 1922, quoted a statement given out by the new corporation of which Mr. Roosevelt was president, as follows: "It is quite apparent that, in spite of present economic disturbances, Germany is today hard at work and will sooner or later remain her industrial and commercial prosperity. It is, therefore, quite feasible to take advantage of the cheapness of the mark."

Said by Calvin Coolidge Working for the general run of people is exactly what we should expect from President Hoover because he knows them by being one of them. He was not born to the enjoyment of generations of inherited wealth. He was never carried into political office by the way of family influence.

OBITUARY

William Henry Harrison Fairfield, oldest son of Harrison and

Calvin C. Kain Democrat

Solicits your support for re-election to the office of COUNTY SURVEYOR

Born and reared in DeKalb County. Graduate Engineer, Tri-State College of Engineering. Registered Professional Engineer No. 818, State of Indiana. World War veteran. Nineteen years experience in Engineering, Surveying and General Constructive work.

ELECTION NOVEMBER 8th

Lucy Ann Beams Fairfield, was born at Leo, Allen County, Indiana, on March 4, 1861. He passed away at the Methodist Hospital, October 20, 1932, following an accident at Fort Wayne last Wednesday when run down by an automobile in crossing the street, at the age of 71 years, 7 months and 16 days. He has been a devoted member of the Lutheran Church since childhood. Once during his early life, he attended Sunday School for a period of seven years, never missing a single Sunday; and on many occasions won prizes on memory contests of bible verses.

In 1887, Mr. Fairfield joined the Order of Free Masonry. On December 30, 1897, he was united in marriage to Hattie Hollabaugh. To this union were born three children; two of whom, a son and a daughter, died in infancy. One daughter, Anna Helena, with the wife survive.

Mr. Fairfield and his parents lived at Leo for a few years, then removed to Hurshtown where they resided until the farm was sold. They then moved to Sedalia, Missouri, while living here Mr. Fairfield saw the first steam engine pull in Springfield, Missouri, residing there until 1870. Later they came to Indiana and located near Spencererville.

Since 1903, however, Mr. Fairfield has lived at the present residence. He was a mason by trade, having helped to build the Lutheran Church and the parsonage in Spencererville, as well as many other buildings in the adjoining communities.

Surviving are the following relatives and friends: the wife and daughter, one brother, John D. Fairfield of Fort Wayne, two half sisters, Emma Sinemaker of Peoria, Ill., and Elizabeth O'Connell of the West, one nephew, Doris Fairfield of Youngstown, Ohio, and two aunts, Mrs. Kate Walker of Hicksville, Ohio and Mrs. Fanny Beams of Fort Wayne; with many cousins and a host of other friends who knew, respected, and loved Mr. Fairfield, and who will miss his friendly greeting and genial manner from this community.

Though his earthly toll has ceased, the buildings wrought by his hand endure. Though his work on earth is done, his memory is secure.

The funeral was held from the Lutheran Church at Spencererville, Sunday afternoon conducted by Rev. Fabianske of the Lutheran Church and Rev. Howard Brown of the M. E. Church. The Masonic lodge had charge at the cemetery. Roscoe Walter had charge of the burial in White City cemetery.

LOCHNER

Mrs. Mary Lochner, aged 63, died of indigestion Wednesday afternoon, October 19, at her home in Spencererville, after having been confined to her bed for the past four months by a broken leg, which was caused by an auto accident.

Surviving are the husband, George Lochner, three foster daughters, Mrs. Joe Stuckey, of Leo, Mrs. Eli Amstutz, of Fort Wayne and Mrs. Harry Peters, of Auburn; a brother, Mr. Sol Goldsmith; two sisters, Mrs. Emma Conner, of Auburn and Mrs. Lily Gerig, of Leo.

Funeral services were held at the residence Saturday afternoon at 1:00 o'clock and at the M. E. Church of Leo at 2:00 o'clock. Rev. I. L. Pusey officiated. Burial was made in the Leo cemetery. Mrs. Lochner resided in Leo until moving to Spencererville two years ago.

Senator Urges Produce Kept Off Free List

Republicans Aid Agriculture by Raising Tariff on Foreign Farm Products.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — Senator James E. Watson, Republican nominee for re-election to the United States Senate, in a statement issued at Republican state headquarters today urged the farmers "not to vote to turn control of Congress over to the Democratic Party with its record of denying tariff protection to the farmer."

Senator Watson charged that Governor Roosevelt's stand for reciprocal tariff agreements "can only mean that the Democratic nominee for President, and the Democratic nominees for the Senate and House who would follow his leadership in the event of his election, would at least be willing to listen to the pleas of European and South American nations that we admit their farm products to the free list. This was done under the Underwood Tariff Act, which was enacted in 1913 and removed a law until control of the government again came into the hands of the Republican Party in 1921."

The statement contained a table showing a list of agricultural products, which were either removed from the free list after the Republican Party regained control of Congress or on which the duties imposed by the Underwood Tariff Act were increased, together with the existing duties under the Hawley-Smoot Tariff Act.

The table follows:

COMMODITIES	Underwood Tariff Act	Hawley-Smoot Tariff Act
Wheat	Free list	45c bu.
Corn	Free list	25c bu.
Corn meal, grits, flour	Free list	$60. 100 lb.
Rye	Free list	15c bu.
Oats	Free list	15c bu.
Barley	Free list	25c bu.
Buckwheat	Free list	$25. 100 lb.
Cattle	Free list	2 1/2 to 3c lb.
Beef and veal	Free list	6c lb.
Mutton	Free list	8c lb.
Lamb	Free list	7c lb.
Swine	Free list	5c lb.
Pork	Free list	3 1/2c lb.
Bacon, hams, shoulders	Free list	3 1/2c lb.
Lard	Free list	5c lb.
Butter	Free list	14c lb.
Olives	Free list	14c lb.
Live poultry	Free list	1c lb.
Baby chicks	Free list	4c each
Dressed poultry	Free list	10c lb.
Fresh eggs	Free list	10c dozen
Frozen eggs	Free list	11c lb.

"Similar comparisons may be made on many other items, which may not be cited here lest the list become too long. But this list is sufficiently inclusive to show which party is the real friend of the farmer," Senator Watson said. "The Democrats, in the Underwood Tariff Act, even put long staple cotton on the free list, whereas the Republican Party, in the Hawley-Smoot Tariff Act, gave the cotton farmers of the South a duty of 7 cents per pound."

Vote for JOHN W. MERTZ For State Representative Democratic Ticket

Born and reared on a farm in Fairfield Township, ill-health compelled Mr. Mertz to give his studies to liberal arts at Michigan University after completing three years, and return to the farm. He worked in a general store for six months and then as a farm hand for more than a year.

During the last 27 years he has operated the same farm, has owned it for a number of years and depends upon it solely for a livelihood. He believes in education. He gave his two daughters and son as well as his step-son a high school education. His step-son is a toolmaker and a member of Machinist Union No. 70 at Fort Wayne.

Mr. Mertz has given much of his time and energy for the betterment of agriculture, the chief industry of DeKalb County, has been active in civic and social affairs of his community, and has come in contact with men in many walks of life and learned to understand their problems. In 1919 he led a fight against the state taxboard that became almost state-wide and his contention was upheld by the state supreme court. He is a born fighter for honesty in valuations and economy in government.

The many friends of Mr. Mertz who know him best strongly believe that no man in DeKalb County is better qualified to cope with legislative problems as they present themselves in the committee room and around the counsel tables of the legislature. He is especially well fitted for this most important phase of legislative work as his record and experience in civic activities has many times proven.

"If the income tax amendment to the state constitution, which will be voted upon in the general election, November 3, receives a favorable vote, it will settle for all time the constitutionality of a law to tax incomes," says Larry Brandon, Democratic candidate for Joint Senator. "He is urging all farm people and other classes who possess property to register a heavy vote favoring the referendum." It takes a majority of all votes cast in the state election to adopt the amendment. If adopted, it will clear up the matter of whether the general assembly can legally pass an income tax measure.

First Basketball Game of Season

On this Friday evening the girls and boys will invade Ashley to inaugurate the 1932-33 basketball season. Little is known about the strength of the Ashley team this year but both St. Joe teams realize that they will have to extend themselves to the limit in order to make an auspicious introduction to the season.

The starting whistle will probably find Kenneth Gaff at center, John Woodcock right forward, Robert Wiers left forward, and John Dilley and Keith Dailey at the guard positions. Very little reserve strength can be summoned to the aid of these boys, the remaining ones lacking both experience and size. Merlin Simanton, Clayton Baker, Keith Wilmot, and others not selected yet will probably be in readiness to take their places in the lineup when the opportunity arrives.

The six girls to start the game will probably be Enid Curie and Ethelmae Freeburn as forwards, Beatrice Storer and Helen Lake as centers, and Dorothy Wasson and Violet Baker as guards. The other girls to receive first team suits are Virginia Shull, Josephine Bachtel, Mary Curie, Beulah Storer, Eloise Draggoo, and Jean Myres. All of these girls will probably see action before the game is over Friday night.

Miss Poland went home to North Manchester last Wednesday evening and from there attended the Teachers Institute at Fort Wayne.

---FOR--- TREASURER DeKalb County

Mrs. Carrie P. Weaver

The voters of DeKalb County are solicited to cast their votes for Mrs. Weaver for County Treasurer. Many of them did so on previous occasions when she was elected to that office, and she again consented to be a candidate, at the urgent request of many of the tax payers of the county. The same Mrs. Weaver, the same efficiency in office, the same courtesy to tax payers and the same effort toward economy will be had if she is elected on November 8th.

AND JUST HOW DOES HE FEEL?

Just to what extent Franklin Roosevelt's chances have been advanced by Al Smith's Newark, New Jersey speech over "radio's" national hookup is problematical. It must be painfully evident to an unprejudiced audience, that Mr. Smith has not gotten over that terrible lambasting given him four years ago by the nation's electorate; for fully three fourths of the time he was on the air, he filled the same with violent static concerning the abuses perpetrated by the W. C. T. U., Anti Saloon League, Mabel Wilbrandt, President Hoover, Ku Klux Klan, and all other agencies of "bigotry and intolerance." On the question of the depression he dwelt but a short time; this, in the beginning of his address. Inasmuch as this was supposed to be a speech to advance the interests of the Democratic nominee, it may be pertinent to inquire just how a tirade of this sort would help Mr. Roosevelt. Are we to infer that the restoration of the liquor traffic is the best democracy has to offer?

Mr. Smith blandly, and with much pride, if we are to judge by his tone, informs his invisible as well as visible audience that "I wrote that 'platform,' referring to the liquor section. In fact, 'I did many things, as all listeners who heard the address will testify in reality 'I' was given more prominence than Mr. Roosevelt. That Mr. Smith's speech aroused much enthusiasm among 'New Jolsey's' elite, there is no gain-saying. The delight of his thirty auditors knew no bounds, for at each mention of the name of a dry advocate, the air was punctuated by a chorus of boos, the same was true when the forces of 'bigotry and intolerance' was spoken of.

Taken as a whole, the entire effort was not so much a labor of love in the cause of democracy, as it was a proof of what a man, smarting under a second defeat, will inflict upon his listeners when he feels his ego needs an airing. Indeed, Mr. Roosevelt must feel highly flattered.

SPORTING NEWS

NEW BASKET BALL RULES

Basket ball spectators may be somewhat bewildered this year over a few of the more drastic changes in the rules. Perhaps a brief discussion on the interpretation of these rules might clear up a few of these points.

The most outstanding rule change this year, from that of the spectator's standpoint is what is known as the 10 second rule. The court is divided into two equal zones by a line drawn thru the center circle and parallel to the end lines. A team, upon gaining possession of the ball in its back court is allowed but 10 seconds to advance the ball past the center line. Failure to do so is forfeiture of possession of the ball to the other team out of bounds.

Upon advancing the ball past the center line, the team in possession of the ball can not retreat across said line only after (1) a shot at the basket has been taken, (2) a held ball, (3) regaining possession of the ball from the opponents, or (4) out of bounds. Following one of these above conditions, a player may retreat with the ball once across the line and then the 10 second time element goes into effect again.

The rule is an obvious attempt to discourage stalling on the part of the team in possession of the ball. It should be quite effective.

The 3 second rule is in regard to the center pivot man who can hold the ball no more than 3 seconds as long as his back is towards his own basket. This rule will necessitate minor changes in many pivot plays which have experienced much success the last few years.

VOTERS NEED NOT REGISTER THIS YEAR

Residence and age is the only qualification for voters in the coming election. No registration is necessary.

The registration law in Indiana was abolished several years ago and registration to vote is no longer necessary in this state. The requirements of a voter in Indiana, according to the Indiana election laws, are that a voter must have resided in the state six months, in the township 60 days, and in the precinct where he or she will vote, 30 days before the day of election.

It is also reported many voters are unfamiliar with the splitting of the state and national ballot. To vote a straight Republican or Democrat ticket it is only necessary to place a small cross within the circle at the head of the list of party candidates. The name of the presidential candidates do not appear on the ballot but, as in the past, the names of the presidential electors, one from each of the twelve districts and two electors-at-large. In splitting your vote it is necessary to place a cross in front of the name of each presidential elector of the party you wish to support and not only in front of the names of the electors-at-large and the elector of your congressional district.

YOUNG PEOPLE TO GATHER AT AUBURN

Final plans are nearing completion for the Fall Conference of the DeKalb County Young People's Council of Religious Education which will be held in St. Mark's Lutheran Church, Auburn, Indiana, beginning on Friday evening November 4th and continuing through Saturday and Sunday closing with an inspirational mass meeting on Sunday afternoon, November 6th.

Nothing has been spared of time and effort to make this 1932 Conference one of the most successful the Young People of the County have ever held.

Rev. Howard Anderson, of Indianapolis, and Miss Myron Simpson, of Franklin, Indiana, will be the state workers in charge of the Conference. Both these people have had a great deal of experience with young people and it will be well worth your while to hear them at this Conference.

Both of these State Workers will be instrumental in carrying out the Theme of the Conference which is "Whither Goest Thou?" Variations of this theme will be presented through drama, discussion groups and major addresses, and the Sunday morning sermon which will be preached by Rev. Craven of the Auburn First Presbyterian Church where the delegates of the Conference will attend the morning worship service in a body.

The registration fee for the Conference has been reduced to twenty-five cents this year as has been the price of the Banquet, which will be thirty cents. The Fellowship Banquet will be held in the St. Mark's Lutheran Dining Room on Saturday evening and a most inspiring fellowship program has been arranged.

The Township Young People's Superintendents are in charge of registrations in their particular township and every young person or adult who is interested in young people is urged to register. You cannot, for the price of twenty-five cents afford to miss this program of fellowship and inspiration. SEND IN YOUR REGISTRATION NOW!

Entertainment will be on the Harvard plan: that is, lodging and breakfast free and the homes of Auburn have been generously opened for entertainment.

All roads lead to Auburn, November 4, 5, and 6th.

P. T. A. MEETING HELD ON ELECTION DAY

The November P. T. A. meeting, which will be held on the afternoon of Election Day, at the gymnasium, is going to be something new and different. Be sure to come and bring your neighbors. The first feature, beginning promptly at 2:00 o'clock, standard time, will be an informal tea, during which you and your friends may enjoy a short period of relaxation and refreshment on a busy day. After the tea you will have an opportunity to get and give ideas, as Principal Willis Cox will conduct a Round Table discussion with a subject which surely invites one's curiosity: "If the Parents Only Would—". Parents are urged to take part in this discussion, and feel free to present any ideas or problems.

Our good friend Clyde Hart will present "As an Ex-teacher Sees It." All who are interested in home, school, and community betterment are welcome, whether or not they have children.

Come to town to vote, visit school, attend P. T. A., and have a cup of tea.

TWO AMENDMENTS TO BE VOTED ON NOVEMBER 8

Two amendments to the constitution of Indiana to be voted upon at the November election have been almost completely overshadowed by the hotly contested battle of candidates.

The amendments are as follows:

Amendment 1: Authorizing the taxing of incomes. The general assembly may levy and collect a tax upon income from whatever source derived, at such rates, in such manner and with such exceptions as may be prescribed by law.

Amendment 2: Proposed amendment striking out section 21 of Article VII.

Section 21: Every person of good moral character, being a voter, shall be entitled to admission to practice law in all courts of justice. That the constitution of the state of Indiana be amended by striking out all of section of Article VII.

The income tax amendment is designed to allay for all time the constitutional objections against this form of taxation. Its passage is supported by the Indiana Farm Bureau federation and others who are backing income tax legislation.

The second amendment is supported by lawyers. It is backed by the bar association to permit more drastic regulation of bar admissions, although an examination system already has been established with the co-operation of the supreme court.

IT'S GOING TO BE A BUSY WEEK

Practically everything has been given over to political meetings for the week, and if there are voters still undecided they better study the matter thoroughly and be ready to cast an intelligent ballot on next Tuesday.

The casting of a ballot is not an opportunity to express a prejudice, but should carry with it a desire to uplift rather than destroy, pick men of character and stability, and when one honestly does this, no fault can be found in him.

Two political gatherings are billed for the Tri-Township territory of DeKalb county, this week. Thursday evening at 7:30 the Hon. David Hogg, now Congressman, will be at the community gym and deliver an address of importance to all voters. He will be followed by Col. A. L. Moody, Republican candidate for representative in the state legislature. For the music, the Waterloo American Legion drummers will be here at 7:00 o'clock. Some special quartet music will be furnished.

On Saturday night at 7:30 Mr. Oliver W. Stewart, of Chicago, will address the voters, and the public will be welcome.

BURY WAR HERO WITH MILITARY HONORS

Harry Wasson, 42, Was Honored by Patriotic Groups of Allen County

Full military honors were accorded in Fort Wayne Saturday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock for Harry Wasson, 42, who died Thursday afternoon at St. Joseph's hospital where he has been a patient for the last month. He had been accorded the Congressional Medal of Honor for valor during the World War.

Funeral services were held at 1:30 at Munkovan & Sons' funeral parlors at 2114-16 South Calhoun Street. Burial was made in the cemetery at Spencer, Ind.

The body was accompanied from the funeral chapel to Anthony boulevard and East Lewis Street, by a number of military organizations of Allen county. From there the funeral cortege continued to Spencer, Ind.

In the funeral march was included a platoon of Fort Wayne police under the direction of Chief of Police Michael W. Laughlin and Capt. Donald Merchant; Concordia cadets, national guard unit, Veterans of Foreign Wars No. 857, American Legion Post No. 47, and the Reserve Officers of the U. S. Army. The line of march was north on Calhoun Street to Lewis, east on Lewis Street to Anthony boulevard.

American Legion Post No. 47 had charge of the services at the grave with State Chaplain Joachim Ryder in charge. A color guard and firing squad accorded full military honors at the grave, and "Taps" were sounded. The services were in charge of Chas. P. DuWan, state commander of the Ex-Soldiers' league.

Mr. Wasson was wounded while serving with the A. E. F. in France. His war injuries are believed to have caused his death.

He was born in Spencer, Ind. and had lived in Allen county until entering the army.

HEAR STEWART AT ST. JOE SATURDAY NIGHT

You want to hear the address at the gym Saturday night by Oliver W. Stewart, a member of the Flying Squadron. Mr. Stewart is a national speaker of note, and will discuss the 18th amendment from all angles, and in a way that will be educational to his hearers. Special music by a quartet is being arranged. Everybody is welcome. Time 7:30.

OBSERVE FATHER'S DAY

Father's Day will be observed at Concord next Sunday with an all day's meeting. Sunday School will be at 9:30 in the morning followed by a message by the pastor, Rev. V. O. Harrold. At 12:00 o'clock a pot luck lunch will be served in the basement of the church. A special speaker will address the people in the afternoon. A male quartet from the Fort Wayne Bible Institute will furnish music at both the morning and afternoon services. The evening service will begin at 7:30 with the Men's Quartet taking charge. They will speak and furnish special music at this service.

Do not miss any of these services as they will be of special interest and help.

TO SERVE SUPPER

The Ladies of the Lutheran Church will serve lunch in the basement Tuesday eve, Nov. 8th. Through the courtesy of E. R. Kinsey a radio will be installed and all will be welcome to spend the evening there and listen to the election returns. Ham and other sandwiches, soup, pie, chicken pie, and coffee, 5 cents each. Come get your supper and listen to the results of the election.

THE HORSE AND BUGGY AGE

I believe in Prohibition because I believe in the new industrial order that America is creating. Booze is as much out of place in that new order as a horse and buggy in downtown Detroit—and a lot more dangerous.

The horse and buggy order is gone and liquor had to go with it. Society could take chances back of a dashboard that it can't afford to take behind a steering wheel.

Perhaps you don't recall the old hitching post days. Well, a lot of folks seem to have forgotten them. They shouldn't. The streets on Saturday nights were lined with wagons and buggies and the saloons were filled with customers. At closing time a crowd of irresponsible men backed their rigs, into the streets, the horses were headed home, the reins dropped over the dash and forgotten. The horses were sober.

Well, if you want our streets lined again with shops that do that kind of business, we shall have to put up our automobiles and go back to hitching posts. Automobiles won't go straight and they don't know the way home.

An industrial order that has discarded the reins, dash boards, and a team that knows the way home, can't afford to line its highways with "regulated liquor shops"—not with a forty horsepower motor under the toe of the drinking citizen.—Henry Ford.

ON UP THE GRADE

Optimism concerning the business outlook and employment situation is not without foundation. There have been recent gains in industrial activity and employment; gains that augur further improvement during the fall and winter.

New York state reports a 6.5 per cent rise in factory employment in one month. The returning to work of 40,000 wage-earners was 4 per cent above the seasonal gain and was not followed by losses. Factory payrolls increased 9.3 per cent during the same period. Especially significant is the fact that the upturn was not confined to one or two lines of business, clothing, mill-nery, textiles, food, tobacco and the metal industries all reporting substantial gains.

While general business was picking up in New York the metal industries were returning to work in four New England states and industrial power consumption throughout New England reached its peak for the year.

America no longer goes barefoot in summer to save shoe leather, but the coming of fall has given the shoe industry 60 per cent more work to do. Some of the percentages of increase in output by individual states in a single month were: Massachusetts, 75.8 per cent; New Hampshire, 72.1 per cent; Pennsylvania, 48.7; Missouri, 32.4, and Ohio, 32.

This isn't prosperity returning with a bang, but it is most welcome news after many months of ever increasing unemployment and factory closings.

TODAY

By Arthur Brisbane

Cleveland, Oct. 24—Those that doubt the importance of protection for American labor and industry might muse on these facts.

General Electric closed its big lamp works in Buffalo the other day and 600 men were automatically out of work.

This happened because American wages cannot compete with cheap production of certain kinds of electric light bulbs in Japan.

This year United States citizens will buy and use 54,000,000 lamps made with the cheapest of labor in foreign countries, principally Japan. At least 1,500 American workers will lose their jobs. In addition to the loss of labor there is the loss of warehousing, distributing, selling.

People that buy cheap bulbs pay more, in reality, because they use more current than do domestic lamps. The extra expense amounts to about $11,000,000.

There is more in the tariff than mere politics.

APPLE HARVEST IS PRACTICALLY OVER

Bad weather hindered the harvesting of the apples in this community considerably this year, but last week finished the picking at the Leighty orchard, and another week will see the crop safely harvested at the Widney orchard.

Practically 22,000 bushels were harvested in the two orchards and nearly all disposed of at this time.

The farm sales are reported as extra this year, and with the prices of apples being reduced, shows that the general run of customers has been maintained.

Probably an added force of laborers would average 70 and this is no small item in the expense budget for the orchards each year. In addition to the daily list of farm hands employed throughout the year, which means that our two fruit growers are an asset to our community in many ways.

For the first time, the Leighty orchard made an attractive display at the Auburn fair, and already results were in evidence at the orchard, of this unique bit of advertising.

RUNAWAY CAUSES THE DEATH OF HORSE

Yesterday John and Lester Coburn took a load of apples to the Widney cider mill, northeast of town. While waiting for the apples to be ground, their team, for some cause became frightened and proceeded to run away. After executing a difficult turn from the mill to the road, they proceeded south, crossing the railroad, the Hadsell bridge never stopping until they reached the O. K. Shull farm house, occupied by Carleton Shull. There they were driven back as far as the bridge, when the animal, a good gray mare, toppled over dead, due to a hemorrhage of the lungs.

NORTHUP FARM SALE LAST FRIDAY

A fair sized crowd attended the selling of the Howard Northrup farm last Friday by auction. The farm was sold, but terms were not complied with by the purchaser, hence the court will term it "no sale."

Burke & Drake, of Montpelier were the auctioneers.

The Advantage of PRACTICAL EXPERIENCE

These are trying times. Petty thievery, holdups and general crime have increased with unemployment.

The experience of John P. Hoff in the office of sheriff makes it possible for him to meet this problem. Law and order have been maintained in DeKalb county.

Ask the attorneys of the county and they will tell you that the sheriff has given 100 per cent service. No warrants have been pigeon-holed. Sheriff Hoff has acted without fear or favor in the performance of his many and trying duties. He has been on the job day and night, at your service and to see that you are protected. Crimes have been solved and the guilty punished. Thievery has been reduced to a minimum.

Mrs. Ray Gustin, of Farmer, O., sister of Mrs. Inez Hadsell, is a very sick lady and her passing away is expected at any time. Mrs. Hadsell makes the trip every other day to be at her bedside.

Mrs. Russell Griffin was taken to the Garrett hospital Saturday morning, after an illness of several months, following yellow jaundice. As yet, the doctors are unable to locate her trouble but are making tests in order to make a decision.

A Ford Coupe went over the bank at the Mrs. Jennie Sechler corner in town Saturday morning. Three young men, bound for Detroit, were making 60, when they came to the turn and they failed to control the car, so it made a plunge down the bank and landed near the chicken house. No one was injured, but were considerably shaken up. When they got straightened up they went on their way.

HOGG LEADS IN ALLEN COUNTY POLL

(Special to St. Joe News)
Fort Wayne, Ind., November 1st—Old-time campaign observers in Allen County are predicting an exceedingly heavy vote for Congressman David Hogg in the election one week from today. It is pointed out that the railroad men and labor people generally are united behind his candidacy because of his record in Congress. The farmers in Allen County are giving him unusual support in this election, and Party lines are not generally followed.

While there are powerful interests opposing Congressman Hogg, it is generally conceded that he will be given a record vote on November 8th.

A school in a Democratic ward, 374 children were asked for whom their parents intended to vote. 244 said their parents would vote for Congressman Hogg, and 130 said that their parents would vote for his opponent.

The Honor Roll

The grade system for this year has been changed somewhat. The letter E has been added to last year's list which was A, B, C, and D. The average student receives a C, those above average A or B and those below average D or E. An F is given for failing work.

The following names appear in order of their ranking: Ethelmae Freeburn, Earl Kinsey, Jean Goodwin, Glenn Likes, Erna Reidenbach, Violet Baker, Ethelmae Freeburn, John Kaelner, Geraldine Thornton, Iris Wilmot, John Woodcox, Kathryn Young, Evelyn Dermott, Helen Like, Bonnie McSorley, Robert Ridlen, Louise Sechler, Virginia Shull, Helen Washler, Enid Curie, Eloise Draggoo, Beatrice Storer.

Ethelmae Freeburn is deserving of special commendation, as her grades place her at the head of the list, although she is carrying six subjects and "made the team" in basketball. In addition to an A in school citizenship she earned five A's and an B.

First Games a Success

Although the score shows that the boys lost to Ashley last Friday night 19-21, they deserve much credit for their fast playing and thinking. The game was close all the way through and finally ended 19-19. After playing a three minute overtime the score was still tied, but during the second overtime period Ashley made two foul shots which decided the game. Keith Dailey was put out of the game on fouls during the last quarter and Orylle Coburn replaced him as back-guard.

After a hard earned battle the girls won with a score of 7-12. The Ashley girls proved to be a much faster team than was expected, but in spite of the strong competition the St. Joe girls proved themselves quite worthy of winning. Virginia Shull was substituted for Helen Like as center when she went out of the game on fouls the second quarter. Later in the game Beulah Storer substituted for Virginia.

The boys will play the Butler team this weekend but the girls will take a rest this week. Next week they have a heavy schedule, playing Pleasant Lake on Friday night and Avilla on Saturday.

---FOR--- TREASURER DeKalb County

Mrs. Carrie P. Weaver

The voters of DeKalb County are solicited to cast their vote for Mrs. Weaver for County Treasurer. Many of them did so on previous occasions when she was elected to that office, and she again consented to be a candidate, at the urgent request of many of the tax payers of the county. The same Mrs. Weaver, the same efficiency in office, the same courtesy to tax payers and the same effort toward economy will be had if she is elected on November 8th.

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE

The Seniors have selected "Little Sherlock" for their class play which will be given sometime in December. The characters have been chosen as follows: Barbara Benton, Beatrice Storer; Mrs. Benton, Dorothea Watson; Mr. Benton, Kenneth Gaff; Katherine Benton, Enid Curie; Kenneth Brand, John Woodcox; Jeffrey, Robert Wiers; Doctor Thayer, Robert Morris; Officer King, Walter Ges. Mr. and Mrs. Cox will direct the play.

Last Saturday night Violet Baker entertained a number of young people at a Halloween party. The house was decorated in orange and black and the guests were in costumes. Those present were: Jean Goodwin, Eloise Draggoo, Geraldine Thornton, Virginia Shull, Beatrice Storer, Beulah Storer, Dale Collins, Merdin Simanton, Earl Kinsey, Marshall Morr, John Dilley, Coral Platter and Russell Pfauwer.

The grades are doing fine in the special music which is being given to them this year.

St. Joe's cheering section is to be complimented on the support they gave the teams. The St. Joe fans did more cheering than did those of Ashley, in spite of the fact that they had to journey 23 miles to do it.

The High School Band rendered some striking musical selections at the program of the Home Bureau October 21.

It is the first meeting between Butler, the new member of the Missouri Valley Conference, and Drake, one of the outstanding exponents of the league.

"The Forgotten Man"

"A Myth," Says Al Smith

While Al Smith may have shaken hands with Franklin D. Roosevelt, he is far from agreement with him that the "Forgotten Man" is the prime issue in this year's campaign.

"We should stop talking about the Forgotten Man and about class distinctions," Smith declares. "The Forgotten Man is a myth and the sooner he disappears from the campaign the better it will be for the country."

Despite the so-called "peace" brought about between Smith and Roosevelt, with which the Democrats seek to win the support of the old Tammany machine for their ticket in New York, this "harmony" appears to be merely on the surface and for public effect. As rival party leaders, there still exists between Smith and Roosevelt widespread difference as to party policy. Smith, for instance, frankly avows his opposition to some of the alliances to which the Roosevelt cause is committed. Among these may be mentioned the Hearst-McAdoo combination, through which the Roosevelt-Garner nominations were engineered at Chicago.

The real question, Smith declares, is what the Democratic party would do with its victory? "The first issue to be decided," he says, "is what elements will control the party. Because it must be admitted that the party is not united and that it is composed of a number of conflicting elements."

"With some of the elements and forces in the party I am completely out of sympathy, not for personal reasons but because I believe them to be inimical to the best interests of the country. In my opinion, the Democratic party must purge itself of these influences if it is to serve the nation in this crisis."

FARM-PROGRESS WILL BE DRAMATIZED AT CHICAGO

Dramatizing in spectacular manner the year's progress in American agriculture, the far-famed International Live Stock Exposition will open its doors for its 33rd anniversary celebration at the Chicago Stock Yards November 26 to December 3.

Secretary-manager B. H. Helde asserts that the 1932 International Exposition of the remarkable forward strides made in American farming since the birth of 200 years ago of the nation's first president farmer, George Washington.

Rush of Early Entries - Early entries arriving the Exposition headquarters indicate that every foot of exhibit space, every stall in the mammoth Exposition amphitheatre and 22 adjoining buildings, will be filled to capacity with the finest specimens of the fields and feed-lots of the land.

The fact that the prize money will remain the same in most all departments of the show, and in a few instances will even be higher than in past years, is attracting the patronage of livestockmen and farmers throughout the continent to the Chicago Exposition, where a blue ribbon carries with it the stamp of national superiority and prestige.

Lift Ban on Corn Borer Area - Because the ban on corn from corn borer infested regions of the continent will be entirely lifted this year, officials of the International Live Stock Exposition, look for the 1932 display of that crop to be the biggest ever seen anywhere. Corn from infested territory will be admitted to competition subject to the inspection of the Illinois Department of Agriculture.

Entries for individual livestock classes will close on November 1st, the management announces; on November 10th for the International Grain and Hay Show; and on November 19th for the carload lot classes of cattle, sheep, and swine, - the latter show in itself being the world's largest display of prime market animals.

How much alike people are in general outline but how different in detail!

Your Representative In Congress

Actively supported every measure to benefit Agriculture.

Believes that the American Farmer should furnish the food supply for America and American Labor the manufactured goods for America.

Helped reduce operating expenses of national government hundreds of millions of dollars. Advocates and supports every possible reduction.

Defeated the Sales Tax which placed the burden of federal taxes on the working man and farmer. Opposed tax on checks and increases in letter postage.

Put a 63% tax on big incomes; 45% tax on big inheritances; and a $50,000,000.00 tax on stock exchanges.

Enacted a humane anti-injunction law.

Stands for guaranty of bank deposits, lower interest rates. Federal loans for home-owners, restoration of purchasing power, elimination of speculation in farm and factory products, and the rights of the common man against organized greed.

William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor says: "David Hogg is a true friend of Labor and all should aid in his reelection." Senator L. J. Dickinson, national farm leader in Congress says: "David Hogg has the complete confidence of the membership of the House and is of tested loyalty for progressive legislation."

His candidacy is opposed by certain selfish and powerful interests.

His record is unqualifiedly endorsed by Farm Associations throughout the Nation and by every Labor organization at Washington.

WHERE DID I PLACE THAT PAPER

How many times during a year do you ask yourself this question?

How much time do you spend searching through drawers and pigeonholes for some valuable paper or document you have mislaid?

Then, too, there is the constant danger of absolute loss of something that is valuable by theft or careless destruction.

A safe deposit box in our vault relieves you of all this uncertainty, worry and loss of time.

Get the safe deposit box habit. It is a constant comfort.

RELIEF WORK of the AMERICAN RED CROSS

Student nurses are taught Red Cross first aid and water safety methods.

A quarter million tons of free feed was given to save the livestock of the north-west.

Use of trucks was donated and unemployed men distributed free Red Cross flour in many counties.

The American Red Cross gave unemployment relief to 3,000,000 families during winter, spring and summer of 1931-1932.

This relief included:

Red Cross flour made from Farm Board wheat, distributed free to more than 2,500,000 families.

Garden seeds to plant a quarter acre, given free to more than 315,000 families.

Food, clothing, medical aid, school lunches and milk for children and other necessities to 300,000 families, including aid in military communities.

2,200 Red Cross Chapters participated in unemployment relief.

More than 400,000 war veterans and their families were aided by 3,118 Red Cross Chapters.

750 Red Cross public health nurses made 1,335,000 visits to aid the sick and teach health methods.

Thousands of unemployed are dependent upon Red Cross services in times of stress.

Red Cross volunteers made 336,000 new garments for the needy.

The Red Cross also gave relief in 60 disasters during the year—several of major proportions, including floods in Mississippi and Louisiana where 50,000 persons were fed and a tornado in southeastern states where 368 persons were killed and aid was given 2,000 injured. More than $250,000 was expended by Red Cross in tornado relief.

In addition to these extraordinary demands upon its resources:

7,000,000 school children were enrolled in Junior Red Cross.

12,000 persons were enrolled as Life Savers.

69,000 persons received First Aid certificates.

30,000 persons took Home Hygiene courses.

Aid was sent in 22 disasters in insular and foreign countries.

Volunteers made 3,700,000 surgical dressings; transcribed 340,000 pages of health; served 129,000 persons in canteens and made 54,000 motor calls.

Your membership in the annual roll call—November 11 to 24—will support this work.

Home of a family of 13 razed by tornado. The mother was killed. The new home was provided by the Red Cross.

Thousands of children come under care of Red Cross public health nurses.

Chairman John Barton Payne of the Red Cross receives thanks of the north-west through Governor Shafert of North Dakota for drought aid.

For sheriff, John P. Hoff, 8,017; T. L. Marks, 4,793; Hoff's majority 3,224.

For coroner, Dr. Benjamin Shook, 6,322; John R. Clark, 5,517; Shook's majority 1,805.

For surveyor, Calvin C. Kain, 7,087; Chas. T. Miser, 5,494; Kain's majority 1,593.

For commissioner southeast, Cleve H. Grube, 7,461; Harry S. Glender, 5,004; Grube's majority 2,457.

For commissioner southwest, Arthur Grube, 7,327; Ralph Yarde, 5,165; Grube's majority 2,162.

Leroy Swartz, running for congress on the National party ticket, received 13 votes in the county.

Emory Johnston, prohibition candidate for joint senator, was given 51 votes in DeKalb county.

Richard W. Sharpless was re-elected prosecuting attorney on the democratic ticket without opposition. His vote was 3,718.

For the first time in many years, all of the fifty-one precinct inspectors in the county had made their reports to the county election commissioners by 8 o'clock the morning following election day. The first returns were in by 11:15 Tuesday night. The commissioners commend the precinct boards for their expeditious work, especially considering the heavy vote cast. The total number of ballots was nearly 13,000, setting a new record in the county. Practically every precinct board was busy throughout the day handling the unusual number of voters who came and in some of the more populous precincts there were lines of voters waiting at different times during the day.

Larry Brandon, whose home is near Auburn, was given pluralities in both Steuben and LaGrange counties, assuring his election as joint senator representing DeKalb, Steuben and LaGrange counties.

Franklin D. Roosevelt

OUR NEXT PRESIDENT

DeKalb county voted in favor of both proposed amendments to the state constitution.

On No. 1 amendment, giving the legislature authority to enact an income tax law, the vote was 7,719 to 3,195, a majority of 4,614.

On No. 2 amendment, relating to qualifications for admission to practice law, the vote was 5,361 to 3,159, a majority of 2,202.

Upset in Steuben County

Angola, Ind., Nov. 9.—David Hogg, congressional candidate, was the only republican given a majority in the national, state and county ballots here Tuesday. Hogg defeated his opponent, James I. Farley, of Auburn, by 100 votes.

The democratic victory in Steuben county is the first since 1876.

Win in Whitley

Columbia City, Ind., Nov. 9.—Although tabulated returns were available in only the presidential and congressional contests, it was indicated here today that democratic candidates had made a clean sweep of all offices in Whitley county in Tuesday's election.

Clean Sweep in Noble
Albion, Ind., Nov. 9.—Democrats were successful in electing their candidates to every office on the national, state and county tickets here Tuesday.

One Republican Elected
LaGrange, Ind., Nov. 9.—Complete election returns here today showed that democratic candidates for national, state and county offices won in every case except that of surveyor, which was won by James Ray Bridges, republican, who was unopposed.

Sweep Allen County
Fort Wayne, Ind., Nov. 9.—Allen county democrats swept their nominees into county offices here Tuesday by majorities that even exceeded their most optimistic hopes in a landslide that left nothing to comfort the badly-defeated republicans.

A new record vote was set, breaking the high mark of four years ago when the presidential fight between President Hoover and Alfred E. Smith brought about what was regarded as an avalanche of ballots. The official total vote four years ago as obtained by adding the ballots cast for both the republican and democratic nominees for secretary of state was 60,457. With 81 out of the 33 precincts having already reported today, the total vote on the secretary of state's office is 64,570.

TWO AMENDMENTS IN INDIANA FAIL

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 9.—Two amendments to the Indiana constitution, voted on in yesterday's general election, apparently have met defeat.

The first would have authorized the state legislature to place a tax on incomes. The other would have amended that section of the constitution providing that any qualified voter is eligible to practice law in the state.

Lack of interest rather than opposition to the proposals was blamed for their expected defeat.

In many cases the income tax amendment was approved, but a constitutional amendment, to become effective, must be approved by a majority of all the votes cast.

There were instances where only half as many persons voted on the amendments as for candidates. This made it almost impossible to obtain the necessary majority.

The issues probably will not be decided until the official vote has been recorded.

New York, Nov. 9.—Franklin D. Roosevelt, governor of New York, has been elected president of the United States by one of the greatest landslides in history.

The same landslide which carried the democratic nominee to the White House swept a democratic majority into both houses of congress, and returned democratic governors in state after state.

HE KNOWS HIS POLITICS ALL RIGHT

Dr. C. R. Price is quite a prophet all right, when it comes to votes. Tuesday evening he gave The News the following figures as to the results of the vote:

Hoover	56
Roosevelt	475
Total	531

This prophecy was given at the time of closing the polls and the actual electoral vote on Wednesday evening was:

Hoover	59
Roosevelt	472
Total	531

ROAD NEWSPAPERS

The woman who knows her paper from the date line to the want ads can pick an argument with her husband about blondes becoming extinct, or a candidate's chances, and the result is that she gets all the argument she wants without interfering in the least with her domestic happiness.

Instead of panning one of her husband's associates' wives she can lam the harpoon into some dame who is dragging her husband through the divorce courts, or she can grill the dramatic critic who doesn't like a certain show as much as she does. She can voice an opinion about a bit of news and throw more of a scare into her husband than if she tried to crown him with the goldfish.

Women read the papers more carefully than men do. At least this is the consensus of opinion in newspaper circles, where a close tab is kept on the tastes of people and the things that interest people.

Three-fourths of all motor vehicles are sold on credit. Riders pay as they go.

Paradoxically, the Limited, on time at the crossing, has made many a late auto speeder. Courtesy is just a subtle business of leaving the other fellow's sense of importance undisturbed.

THE DISAPPEARING CENT

Is your family one of those in which, after the first baby came, every stray penny was to go into the baby's bank? If so you will agree with the treasury department in wondering what becomes of all the pennies. Every year some 80,000,000 of them are coined, and while a certain number keep in circulation and others return to the treasury in one form or another, most of them disappear.

It is wrong to speak of pennies in this country's coinage, treasury officials have always insisted, as the penny is a British coin, normally of twice the value of one of our cents. But the cent has ever been a penny to most people, and it is hard to educate them to say cent.

The cent is the barometer of business. It is interesting to note that during financial depression a large number accumulate in the treasury. Even a big storm or a strike will cut down the number of cents in circulation, for a penny-spending public is indoors, or else forced to save for a "rainy day." Bankers say it is a sign of prosperity when there are plenty of cents in circulation.

ARMISTICE DAY

It's so easy to forget; and 1918 was 14 long years ago.

Yet there are some things that we must never let ourselves forget. And Armistice Day brings some of them to our minds.

There is no danger, of course, that we will actually forget the war. Yet already the details of it are getting a bit hazy for some of us; already memory is beginning to play her old trick on us, softening the harsh outlines of past events and bathing unpleasant happenings in a soft, rosy light that makes them seem actually enjoyable, in retrospect.

When the average non-combatant thinks of the war, for instance, what are his emotions? He thinks of the easy money that prevailed then. He thinks of the waving flags, of the pleasant, spine-tingling thrills of patriotism that came to him so often. He thinks of the wave of idealism that swept the land in those days under which the humblest citizen could feel that he was part of a great army of brothers. All in all, the war doesn't seem half bad, in retrospect.

And the former service man; how does he feel about it?

As like as not, he, too, has memories that, on the whole, are not unpleasant. The horror and the terror that were part of his life do not intrude themselves so much nowadays. Instead he remembers the easy comradeship, the happy-go-lucky good fellowship of the army.

This is as it should be. Yet today, the fourteenth anniversary of the war, is a good day for jogging our memories, for reminding ourselves that the war wasn't all skittles and beer.

War is quite all that General Sherman said it is and a casual inspection of one's memory of the days of 1917 and 1918 will bear out that statement.

The non-combatant might recall the daily casualty lists; the worry and anxiety over absent loved ones; the unsightly spectacle of profiteers waxing fat on the situation that was bringing grief and destruction to all of Europe; the sky-rocketing prices, so often rising faster than wages and salaries rose.

And the soldier might recall—well, he knows what scenes of horror he can turn his mind to, without our telling him. He can recall the mud, the filth, the hard-boiled officers, the machine guns, the shrapnel and the rest; and he knows that, however many tricks his memory may play on him, these things are not pleasant.

Such are the memories we might stir up for today. And why? Simply to remind ourselves that we went through a terrible experience a few years ago, and that experience had a definite purpose. If we pledge ourselves again to the task of seeing to it that that purpose—the bringing of freedom and peace closer to every man on earth—is brought nearer fulfillment, it will be well. If we do not, our memories may rise to torture us again.

P. T. A. PROGRAM

A very interesting and beneficial program was given by the P. T. A. at their second meeting held Tuesday afternoon at the gymnasium.

Between two and two-thirty a social time was enjoyed by having an informal tea, and music being furnished during the tea by Mrs. Lora Leighty.

The program, in charge of Mrs. Cox, was opened with a vocal solo by Geraldine Thornton, followed by prayer by Mr. Guy Platter.

A very beneficial round table discussion was conducted by Principal Willis Cox on the subject: "If the Parents Only Would—"

Clyde Hart, an ex-teacher of St. Joe gave a very interesting talk on, "As an Ex-Teacher Sees It." A P. T. A. poem was given by Derwood Ridgway.

After the business session conducted by the president, Mrs. Grace Dille, meeting adjourned.

A Trip Through the Aquarium

(By M. J. Walter)

The aquarium which I visited is quite a large one and contains many varieties of living water animals. The fish were in tanks with glass sides so they could be easily seen. As I walked along, I noticed the information card at the top of each tank, which told the scientific name for the fish, and also the name by which it was commonly known. The temperature of the water was exactly the same as it was in the fish's natural environment. The pebbles, sand, rocks, and sea weed were different for each fish. You see there is more to keeping a water animal than just putting it in water. There were many fish which I had never seen or heard of before. I saw many aquatic animals from the drab turtles to the brightly colored Japanese goldfish. In size, there was everything from a giant shark to a small, almost transparent fish, that was totally unknown to me. The hour I spent in the aquarium was well worth my time; and I would like it as well if I could go a second time.

And good bye till next week.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Gerig and daughter Flossie had as their dinner guests Sunday Rev. and Mrs. C. J. Gerig and family, of Woodburn, Mr. and Mrs. David Grosh and son, Marion, and daughter, Ruth, and Mr. and Mrs. Abner F. Gerig and son, Dwain Lee.

A kitchen as bright and cheerful as a SUNROOM

Wouldn't you like to have your kitchen so light and free from shadows that work seems to hurry itself along? You can quickly have such a kitchen. Securing it is neither difficult nor expensive. Simply put a new 150-watt Edison Mazda Daylight lamp in the central ceiling fixture (which should be of the totally enclosing type) and a 60-watt Edison Mazda lamp in the shaded fixture above the sink* and in the one above the range.*

*If you haven't these fixtures, ask us to tell you how little it will cost to have them installed.

Now even washing dishes will be easier and less tiresome. For now you can see clearly, quickly and easily. What's that? You'd like to try it? Well, we're ready.

Vol. 1 No. 7 Thursday, November 10, 1932

Miss Opal Poland went home over last Sunday after the institute at Auburn.

Several pupils were absent Monday to attend the funeral of Joseph Kniesly.

Kent Curie is still out of school suffering with blood poisoning in his arm.

The Sophomore English class enjoyed writing character sketches of different people in the high school, and then guessing who they were about when read in class.

Boys Lose to Butler

The boys were defeated in a hard fought game with Butler last Friday night. The game was very close all the way through, although Butler was leading by a score of 11 to 15 at the half. During the second half St. Joe increased their score within two points of that of Butler, but of no avail. The game ended 17-23.

The second team lost 6-15. This too was a close game until the last quarter when Butler forged ahead and St. Joe could not regain the lead.

The boys and girls will play at Pleasant Lake this Friday night and at home on Saturday night. The teams will need plenty of support from the fans when they play Avilla on Saturday night. Let's see everybody cheering for St. Joe.

MORTUARY

OBITUARY

Joseph Rudy Kniesly was born October 31, 1857, near Spencer-ville, Indiana, and departed this world after five weeks of illness, and long suffering he went home to be with Jesus November 4, 1932, being at the age of 75 years, and 4 days.

On November 21, 1879 he stood at the marriage altar and hand in hand with Sarah E. Cooley, of near Antwerp, Ohio, took the vows of marriage.

To this happy couple were born seven children, three boys and four girls. Two of the boys deceased and are at rest with their father.

In 1881 he and his family moved from Antwerp, Ohio to St. Joe, where they lived until 1896, then moving back to Ohio residing until 1903 then returning to St. Joe.

Mr. Kniesly is survived by his aged companion and five children: George of Auburn, Grace at home, Mary Snellenberger of Breckenridge Mich., Viola Meiser of Auburn, Dan of Quincy, Mich., Jane Phillips of Hicksville, O., Barbara Papenfuss of Fostoria, O., Lydia Sales of Rising Sun, Ella Harris of Carey, O., Genevieve Pearson of Scipio, Ind., and a host of neighbors and friends.

The funeral was held from the Kinsey funeral home Monday forenoon, Rev. V. O. Harold officiating. Interment in Riverside cemetery.

ANOTHER CHANCE TO VOTE IT STRAIGHT.

Hoosiers were asked to vote the straight ticket against their one-time worst enemy—tuberculosis! The Indiana Tuberculosis Association, shipping out approximately 65,000,000 Tuberculosis Christmas Seals to anti-tuberculosis associations in every county, warned that "the struggle to keep the death rate from tuberculosis going downward in this year of extreme adversity is even of greater importance than partisan politics."

In a bulletin going forward with the vast shipments of Christmas Seals, the state association said: "Never before in the history of Indiana has the success of a Christmas Seal Sale been quite so vital to the citizenship. For more than twenty years the organized struggle to slowly control this disease has been crowned with success. The death rate has been on the run a little more each year, until recently there was a saving of lives annually that equaled one-half of those who died each year before the anti-disease struggle began. This condition has come now. Already word has come that thirteen great cities of the nation registered a higher death rate in 1931 than in the previous year. That undoubtedly was due to the economic conditions in which the depression has plunged the country. New and intense effort is necessary from now on to keep tuberculosis in check. This effort is financed only by the Christmas Seal. Indiana is on the fence, figuratively and literally, just now in the anti-tuberculosis fight. She can go backward, toward a higher death rate—or forward with courage. Christmas Seals will be on sale throughout the state from Thanksgiving to Christmas. On the fate of that sale, in each of many communities, rests the fate of the next few years of anti-disease work among us. It is up to the voters of Indiana. Some believe the problem is even more important than politics at this moment. But every man, woman and child in the state has opportunity to vote in this fight. Each should buy Christmas Seals and thus Vote the Straight Ticket against their one-time worst enemy—tuberculosis.

REPORT MADE BY COUNTY NURSE

During the month of October the Nurse continued her rapid inspections in schools. 20 schools were visited, including 29 first visits, and 11 re-visits reaching 1,050 children. 20 children were found with skin infections, 30 children with poor vision were tested and letters written to parents. 5 of these are cared for and are now wearing glasses. 20 children with vision defects and 150 with dental defects were cared for by their parents this summer. 35 health talks were given in the class rooms. 3 infants, 8 pre-school and 15 school children were visited in their homes. A layette was taken to a mother with a small infant. 57 calls and 60 office interviews were made in behalf of general activities and 72 in behalf of patients.

A young man suffering from tuberculosis was placed in the Irene Byron Hospital and a patient was returned to his home. 4 in this hospital were visited at the same time. Arrangements are under way to take another young man and a young woman to this hospital in the near future.

The Child Health Contest held two days during fair week was very successful. 56 children were examined by Dr. Teal. Ribbons were presented to the three healthiest boys each day, and a championship ribbon given to a little girl 2½ years old. A certificate of attendance was given to each mother. The following week a T. B. Clinic was conducted and 13 persons examined. A Baby Station was also conducted and 13 examined by Dr. Teal. The nurse assisted Dr. Reynolds and Dr. Symons at a baby contest sponsored by the Lions Club at Garrett. 18 were examined, and two prizes given.

At a meeting of the Business & Professional Women's Club the Nurse gave a talk on the work of the Red Cross for the purpose of interesting them in the Red Cross Roll Call. They are now busy organizing this work in Auburn. Mrs. Steckley was interviewed and consented to act as chairman of the Red Cross Roll Call in the townships.

Catherine E. Eoll, DeKalb Co., and Red Cross Nurse.

Bi-Centennial Celebration

Drew a Large and Appreciative Audience at the Community Gymnasium Last Thursday Evening—Everybody Worked Hard for Its Success—Varied Program Proved to be Very Popular.

In pursuance of a nation wide program which began January 1, 1932, and ends on Thanksgiving Day, this year, the citizens of our community met at the High School Gymnasium on the eve of November 10, to listen to a patriotic program in honor of the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of George Washington, in other words, the Bi-centennial.

The purpose of these programs is to instill in, and refresh in our minds a proper sense of the debt of gratitude we owe to him, who bore a great part of the trials and tribulations which beset our nation in the pioneer days of its history.

Truly it can be said, "He was first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen."

The arrangement of the local program, gave a retrospective view of our country, commencing at the period of the World War, it hearkened back to the Spanish-American War, Civil War, and finally, the Revolution; the war that broke the shackles of Great Britain, thus severing us from the Mother country. This is the theme of this program but was not the first part, in the order in which it was given. The program in its proper order follows: Promptly, just exactly at 7:30 o'clock, there burst forth strains of patriotic music by the High School Band, under the direction of C. A. Woodcox. A well drilled chorus gave us America as the next number, as the last notes died away, the curtains were parted, revealing, in resplendent regalia, to impersonate George Washington the general, Rev. A. H. Fabianske, of the Lutheran Church, who said, "Before a battle George Washington always offered prayer." The audience then stood for the invocation.

Fitting indeed were the tableaux presented. They depicted six scenes relating to the World War and one each for three other wars. The characters seemed particularly suited to their respective parts and appropriate music accompanied the tableaux.

Reveille by C. A. Woodcox opened the group which was as follows: "When a Boy Says Goodbye to His Mother," Mrs. Arline Koch, Merritt Millman—Music, Helen Dittmars.

"There's a Little Blue Star in the Window," portrayed by the appearance of a Service Flag bearing one star. Music, Mrs. Avis Staman, Mrs. Edith Cole. "Mother Knitting Sweaters," Mrs. Lillian Buckingham—Music, Men's Chorus.

"Say a Prayer for the Boys Out There," Mrs. Lela Northrup, Eloise Draggoo, Frank Curie—Music, Mrs. Blanche Leighty.

"Just a Baby's Prayer at Twilight," Frances Reidenbach—Music, Mrs. Gladys Cox.

"Over There," C. W. Hanna, Harry Shuff, Charles Bassett, Harvey Hull, Ralph Sechler, Grant Baltz, Merritt Millman. Music by the chorus included also, "A Long, Long Trail," and "Keep the Home Fires Burning" was sung by Joe Woodcox and chorus.

Fourteen years ago all of us were drawn closer together because whistles blew, bells rang and bands played, our hearts beat in unison in celebration of the Armistice; and across our land, "peace" was breathed upon every lip, with a prayer of gratitude.

At this time of stress in our nation, when in our own community, yes, in our own homes, times are hard, no one has any money, many have no jobs and the outlook is not promising—at such a time is it not good for us to travel back to war time days?

The Spanish-American War was vividly recalled to our mind by a group of local veterans: Morris Curie, H. H. Squires, George Walter, Nicholas Funk, Abner Trosel and Curtis Harris, who stood "in salute" in the presence of a picture of President McKinley, a placard bearing the famous slogan: "Remember the Maine," and a gun stack. "Just Break the News to Mother," a song born during that short conflict, was sung by the chorus.

A lone Civil War veteran, Mr. Silents, of Butler, occupied the center of the stage while the chorus sang, "The Battle Hymn of the Republic." As if in response to the thoughts of this aged veteran, came the voice of Derwood Ridgway reading in a forceful manner Lincoln's Gettysburg address. Doubtless many reflected with misty eyes that not a survivor of the Civil War yet remains in the immediate community—our own "boys in blue" have answered the last roll call.

In observance of "the Revolutionary War" "The Spirit of '76" was portrayed most impressively by Harvey Hull and Charles Bassett, with their drums and Curtis Harris with his fife. "Yankee Doodle" by the chorus, carried us back a century and a half to the war when the steps of the patriots were first enlivened by that stirring tune.

Taps by C. A. Woodcox closed this group of patriotic scenes. The introductory ode was given by Charles Thornton.

"Memories of Washington" was interestingly presented by word and picture. Six "memories" gownned in lavender introduced us to George Washington as a boy, a young man, surveyor, soldier, statesman and retired President. The readings were given by Mrs. Harriett Oberlin, Miss Opal Poland, Mrs. Myrtle Pugsley, Miss Virginia Shull, Miss Priscilla Borthwick and Mrs. Parilla Hull. They were portrayed by Robert Schondelmeyer, Dale Collins, Walter Kessler, Rev. Fabianske, Roy Reidenbach and Roy Maxwell.

The Tribute to Washington was given by Miss Evelyn Dermott and was given in a most effective and pleasing manner.

Mrs. Estelle Baker read a tribute to Washington in which some of Washington's Maxims were given, these, while good, were given, these, while good, sound quaint in our day and generation. At the close of this reading, the chorus rendered a medley of patriotic airs, this was in keeping with the spirit of the entire program and was a fitting introductory to the play which followed.

The play, a one act drama, "Twixt Cup and Lip, was awarded first prize by the Daughters of the American Revolution in the Bi-Centennial play contest.

The actors were drilled by Mrs. Esther Bowman. Persons of the play were:

Gen. George Washington, Rev. Fabianske; Gen. Israel Putnam, F. B. Leighty; Lord Sterling, Roy Reidenbach; Gen. Hugh Mercer, Roy Maxwell; Col. John Glover, Basil Sheffer; Gen. Nathaniel Greene, John Crothers; Samuel Fraunces, Innkeeper, Derwood Ridgway; Phoebe Fraunces, his daughter, Mrs. Kate Bowser; Thos. Hickey, one of Washington's body guards, Earl Kinsey; Billy Lee, Washington's Negro Body Servant, Harvey Hull.

The scene of the play in Fraunces' Tavern, New York City: the time, very late afternoon, June 20, 1776. The play revolves around a love affair between Phoebe Fraunces, the tavern keeper's daughter, and Thos. Hickey, one of Washington's body guards, a person who deserted the British Army, and who, while loving the innkeeper's daughter, yet lends his assistance to a plot to assassinate the commander in chief. How the plot is thwarted by the keen wit and cleverness of Phoebe Fraunces, lends spice and charm to the play.

Throughout all, the character of Washington stands clear as crystal. As a play it does not pretend to be correct as regard to historical accuracy, it does, however, reflect the character of our first President.

In regard to costuming and rendition the play was a success.

The closing was a chorus: "The Star Spangled Banner." The audience stood as this number was given.

A capacity house greeted this performance, and we feel safe in saying all appreciated the program. Those who sponsored it gave of their time and spent hours to make it a success. To them we owe a debt of gratitude for their undying devotion and sacrifice of time to please us in giving this beautiful program, and the result of their efforts, place the seal of approval of our citizens upon same.

The chorus was composed of Mrs. Gladys Cox, Mrs. Avis Staman, Mrs. Blanch Leighty, Miss Helen Dittmars, Mrs. Edith Cole, Mrs. Cora Curie, Mrs. Daisy Woodcox, Mark Williams, Joe Woodcox, A. M. Baker, Wm. Staman, Ed Storer and C. A. Woodcox. Willis B. Cox, pianist.

The tableaux committee was composed of Mrs. Mabel Thornton, Mrs. Lora Leighty, Miss Cleota Morr and Miss Priscilla Borthwick.

The music committee, C. A. Woodcox, Mrs. Cora Curie and W. B. Cox.

Committee on readings, Mrs. Estelle Baker.

The general committee for the plans was composed of Ralph Sechler, Roy Maxwell and Meade Baker.

COUNTY OFFICIALS TO START JANUARY 1

The terms of all the county of Acers elected last Tuesday take effect January 1, 1933, excepting that of Arthur Grube, whose second term as commissioner from the southwest district will not begin until a year later.

Glenn Potter became county clerk on December 1, 1932, but since that time the law has been changed to make the time of the expiration of terms of all county office holders uniform. He will be succeeded January 1, 1933, by his present deputy, Carl Walter.

Merritt M. Maxwell will succeed himself as treasurer January 1 for a two year term. John P. Hoff will on that date start his fourth term of two years as sheriff. Calvin C. Kain will continue as surveyor for a new term of two years.

Cleve H. Grube of Stafford township, will take the place of Nicholas Funk of Wilmington township, as commissioner from the southeast district the coming January 1. The term is three years. The majority of the board will then be democratic. Chas. G. Potter, republican, commissioner from the north district, still has two years to serve of his second term.

Richard W. Sharpless will begin his new term as prosecuting attorney January 1.

The term of Larry Brandon as joint state senator is four years. John W. Mertz was elected for a two year term as state representative. They will assume their duties when the legislature convenes in January for its regular biennial session.

Dr. B. O. Shook of Spencerville will take the place of John R. Clark of Auburn, as coroner next January 1. The term is two years.

ENTERS HURSH STORE

Deputy Sheriff Herbert N. Grimm was at Spencerville Thursday investigating the burglary of Harry G. Hursh's grocery. Entrance was gained some time Wednesday night by forcing the transom of a rear door and the thief apparently was well acquainted with the store as he stole $24.98 in cash from a hiding place. Mr. Grimm could find no clue.

THANKS!

I wish to thank the people of the county for their liberal support in my election, and particularly St. Joe and Concord Township for their liberal support.

Dr. B. O. Shook.

SOME TURNIP

Measuring 22 inches around and weighing 4 pounds—what is it? That is a turnip presented The News by S. W. Armstrong and guaranteed to be sweet. Sam raised 14 bushels. But this one will last us for a few days.

AFTER POSTOFFICE

At Hicksville there are two enthusiastic democrats working for the appointment as postmaster: A. C. Battarshell, printer and Frank Fee, furniture dealer. J. E. Mercer was the last democratic postmaster, serving under Woodrow Wilson.

The young people's class of the Lutheran Church will hold a bake sale Saturday at 10 o'clock, at Zonker's Store.

FORMER SHERIFF TAKES HIS OWN LIFE

Wm. G. Morr, 57, former sheriff of DeKalb county, shot his wife, Mary, Provinces Morr, 56, and probably fatally wounded her Wednesday night at their home at Van Buren and Eighth Streets in Auburn.

He then laid down in the bathtub and slashed his throat from ear to ear with a razor. He severed the jugular vein and quickly died to death.

Apparently the couple had some domestic trouble. Mrs. Morr said afterward her husband was reading a newspaper in the bath room a little after 6 o'clock and she wanted it. They had an argument and she broke the panel of the outside of the bath room door. He then went across the hall to a closet and seized an old 32 calibre revolver. He pulled the trigger four times.

One bullet struck Mrs. Morr in the upper right chest and another in the back. Mrs. Morr said afterward that she heard another bullet pass her head. The fourth bullet in the gun missed fire.

Mrs. Morr, screaming, ran downstairs and onto the front porch. A neighbor, Frank Draggoo, heard her and ran to her aid. Her dress was burning where the bullet pierced it and Mr. Draggoo extinguished the blaze. He called to Mrs. Philip Krets, another neighbor, and they helped Mrs. Morr back into the library of her home. Mr. Draggoo summoned Sheriff John P. Hoff.

In the meantime Morr had not been heard. When the sheriff arrived he went upstairs and found Morr dead in a pool of blood in the bath tub. An investigation revealed that after he shot his wife he replaced the revolver under some towels on a shelf in the closet near the bath room. Then he climbed into the bath tub and took his own life.

Mrs. Morr was removed to the Souder hospital and her condition was such that it was not deemed advisable to probe for the bullets.

Morr served two terms as sheriff, from Jan. 1, 1923, to Jan. 1, 1927. Since that time he had spent much of his time on his farm. His wife was a daughter of the late James Provinces. They had one son, Arthur, who is supervisor of athletics in the public schools of Camden, N. J.

Also surviving Morr are two brothers, Chas. and Sam Morr, of Concord, and two sisters, Mrs. J. E. Showalter, and Mrs. Getts, of Waterloo.

The funeral of Mr. Morr was held Saturday forenoon from the Clark funeral home, with Joe Ferguson officiating.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kinsey, of Auburn called at the George Kinsey home Sunday evening.

SPENCERVILLE School News

Chapel exercises were conducted Tuesday morning by the Rev. Walter Coburn of Coburntown Church. The subject of his talk was the story of the four gospels. He said in part: There are four arms to the cross. Four is the perfect number and the four gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John form the perfect history of the life of Christ. Matthew wrote to the Jews. If you would understand Matthew, you must know the old testament. He wrote to prove to the Jews that Jesus was the Messiah the anointed one.

Mark wrote the gospel—good story—to the Romans to convince them that Jesus was the World Conqueror. This was in line with their thinking. They worshipped power.

Luke—a Greek and the only Greek writer in the whole bible—wrote to Theopollis, a lover of God, to show him that Jesus was the perfect man for whom the Greeks were then looking.

In the gospel of Luke are more of Jesus' prayers than in any other book in the bible.

John was very old when he wrote, probably 95. The church had been well established but was in grave danger of forgetting the manhood of Jesus. So John's writing was to the Church to warn it of its negligence. He said that love was the keynote of the Christian life then just as now. Jesus had said that when this sign—love—would the world know those who were his disciples. Love is the greatest force for the Brotherhood of Man.

The Eighth Grade held their first party on the evening of November 11, at the home of their president, William D. Erick. Those present were William Allen, Elowene Bamer, Harold Kagay, Dorothy Keller, Loren D. Laub, Gladys Maurer, Marcella Moore, Charles Washler, Roy Shilling, Alice Hart, Doris Furish, Roy Hensley, William Erick, Mr. and Mrs. Beeks Erick and Ida Reed. Guests were Mary Callaway Gladys Hart, Carol Reed and Dick Reed.

After an evening of delightful games, the group enjoyed the delicious lunch of roasted weiners, hot baked beans, buns, pumpkin tarts and cider. All left about ten o'clock, well pleased with their Armistice Day party.

Mr. Stallman and State Inspector Murry called at our school last week.

Due to certain school houses being used for polling places on election day, our classes enjoyed a number of visitors on Tuesday.

The 3 R's Club will hold its first meeting for installation of officers and initiation of charter members on Saturday evening at the home of LaNore Laub.

One section of the Biology class enjoyed a hike recently. The purpose was to study weeds and collect specimens of seeds.

Dallas Zimmerman was unable to be present at the party of the Eighth Graders because of illness.

Home Economics Class Launches Big Idea

For some time the girls of the Home Economics class have been serving soup one day each week at five cents per bowl. This plan seemed good as far as it went but there was a general feeling that if hot soup was good one day out of five it might be better two days out of five. Also under the present financial situation there was a desire to reduce the price so that all could reap the benefits of a hot lunch without feeling a financial burden. Another matter which is always serious in the consideration of school lunches is the question of the actual work and time of their preparation. It was not thought wise to ask the girls in the class to give up too much school time in preparing the noon day lunch.

After much consideration on the part of the Home Economics girls as well as a series of conferences with various faculty members the following plan was put in operation.

Soup will be served Tuesdays and Thursdays at one cent per bowl. Possibly the reader is asking "How can good soup be sold at such a price?" Well, its this way—much of the material is donated. Even the labor is donated. Two ladies of the community have offered their services two days each week until the plan is well established. The vegetables so far have been donated—in fact all that has been purchased is milk and butter.

Really this big idea is to use all the produce in the community for the betterment of the children of the community. Every year large quantities of vegetables go to waste because a garden produces more than one family can eat. This year the Home Economics Department proposes to gather this excess together and serve it to the school children.

It is not proposed to make a personal canvass of the community. If you have anything you would like to donate for this purpose call the school. Or if any lady cares to donate a half day's time we will be pleased indeed. And here is just one more suggestion—Every patron or friend of the school is invited to call at 11:30 any Tuesday or Thursday and eat soup with us. We always have an extra bowl. Let's get acquainted!

S. AMERICA'S LOCATION TESTS MEMORY OF MANY

There is a general belief, especially among adults who have not studied geography for years, that South America is directly south of the United States.

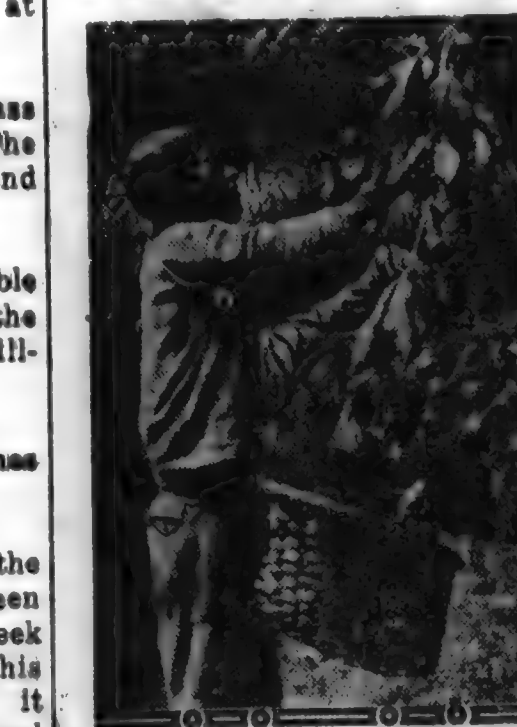

A glance at a map, however, will reveal that only the far northwestern part of that continent lies due south of the extreme eastern section of this country, the main portion of South America protruding farther eastward than the United States into the Atlantic ocean.

In fact, a straight line drawn on a map from Cleveland, Ohio, through Jacksonville, Fla., and downward into the Pacific ocean, will just touch the extreme western tip of South America.

Another revelation to many, after glancing at a map, will be that the nearest South American neighbor of this country is the Republic of Colombia, from which the United States obtains practically all of the finest coffee used for domestic consumption. Colombia is the second largest coffee producer in the world.

U. S. BUYS 90% OF COLOMBIA'S COFFEES

Coffee is Colombia's aristocrat, both as a beverage and as a raw product. In other words, Colombians take as much care and pride in preparing their "cafe" as a drink as they do in cultivating the trees which produce coffees famed throughout the world for their fine full flavor and aroma.

Picking Coffee Cherries.

In that republic, all coffee cherries are hand-picked, not stripped, from the branches.

During either a social or business visit, Colombians always serve their guests "cafes"—small cups of coffee without cream or sugar. This custom is becoming increasingly popular throughout America in the serving of demi-tasse.

Colombia is the world's largest quantity producer of the best grades of coffee, known as "ultra." More than nine-tenths of Colombia's coffee output is purchased in the United States for domestic consumption.

Materials Evolved by Acids Drawn From Air

Silk stockings have actually been made from air! They look very well indeed, but they have one drawback: they melt in hot weather. Still, that is a disadvantage which will doubtless be overcome in time, for the science of making silk from air is still in its infancy.

Wonderful work has been done by Mr. Wallace Carothers, who has discovered that about twenty substances can be extracted from the air, each of which can be turned into a material very like those silk in appearance. A synthetic cloth has even been evolved by treating various acids drawn from the air with a waste product of ordinary petrol.

Air plays a very important part, for we could not live for an instant without it. In the future, though, it is likely to provide us with a good many other things beside breath. Saltpeter, one of the most valuable fertilizers known, is already manufactured from air, and the neon gas used for filling certain kinds of electric lamp bulbs can be obtained in the same way. Not long ago, a method of extracting carbon from air was discovered, and it was predicted that from this might develop methods of obtaining both fuel and food from the atmosphere.—London Times.

Phonograph Not Direct Idea in Edison's Mind

Edison admitted he was working on another subject when he stumbled on to the principle which made the phonograph possible. He said, "I was engaged upon a machine intended to record Morse characters which were recorded on paper by indications that transformed their message to another circuit automatically when passed under a tracing point connected with the circuit-closing apparatus. In manipulating this machine I found that when the cylinder carrying the intended paper was turned with great swiftness it gave off a humming noise from the indentation, resembling that of human talk heard indirectly. This led me to try fitting a diaphragm to the machine which would receive the sound waves made by my voice when I talked to it, and register them upon an incompressible material placed on the cylinder. I saw at once that the problem of registering the human speech, so that it would be repeated by mechanical means as often as might be desired was solved."—Washington Star.

Early Motion Pictures

The modern motion picture dates from about the year 1893, when Edison produced his kinesiograph, the first machine of the kind using film. Edward Muybridge, often called the "father of moving pictures," had preceded him by about 30 years, but was handicapped by the fact that he had to use glass plates. Other pioneers before Edison were Sellers, Lincoln, Marey, etc. In 1904 C. Francis Jenkins was the first to produce moving pictures by modern methods. The first public showing of moving pictures was made in June, 1894.

Island of Human Woe

The Indian name for Blackwell's Island was Minnahanock, meaning "long island." In 1924 the island was granted to Capt. John Manning, and was known as Manning's Island. His stepdaughter, who inherited it, married Robert Blackwell, for whom it was then named. In 1928 the city of New York bought it for $50,000. Recently the name has been changed to Welfare Island. It now contains the Metropolitan hospital, home for the aged, the workhouse and the penitentiary.

Wanted Movies

Nobody knows where she got her pass to the symphony concert at Severance hall, or why she thought of crashing the portals of that dignified concert hall.

She was obviously not the symphony type. She sat and squirmed throughout the first part of the program, looking very bored and very puzzled. At the intermission she left her seat and went in search of an usher.

"Say," she demanded, "when do the movies start?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Tabloid

A tabloid newspaper is one that expresses the news briefly. It is usually of smaller size than the ordinary newspaper because the news has been condensed. The firm of Burroughs, Wellcome & Co., London, England, coined the word and applied it to a preparation of drugs in a concentrated and condensed form. Although the term is a copyrighted trade mark of that firm, it is now widely used with reference to anything concise or condensed, especially newspapers that summarize or condense the news.

Liquid Long Preserved

Liquid, at least 1,000,000 years old, is contained in a sealed cavity in the center of a beautiful crystal of a mineral known as calcite, recently acquired by the Academy of Natural Sciences at Philadelphia. The cavity contains one-half gill of what is believed to be water with some minerals in solution. The crystal came from lead mines near Rome, N. Y. Bubbles and small drops of liquid have been found in crystals previously, but not in such a large quantity.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

THE SITUATION MAY PROVE MORE SERIOUS

Many of the good people are taking the results of the political pledges very lightly these days.

We quote from numerous sources to show the attitude now prevalent.

Cheered by the landslide that insures a predominantly wet democratic congress under a democratic president pledged to a wet platform, wet leaders talked "beer by Christmas."

The Berghoff Brewing Co., of Fort Wayne says: "All we need is the word. We could start selling real beer tomorrow."

William A. Comstock, Michigan's democratic governor-elect, declared that "if it is legally possible" he will release all offenders against the state prohibition law in Michigan prisons. Records show there are now 297 such prisoners. Twenty-three are women.

"The people have discarded the state's prohibition amendment by a vote of 3 to 1," he said. "It seems to me that to release those convicted under the laws that the people now demand be repealed. It is my belief that the enforcement laws now have no standing. If this story needed a title, it might well be that familiar refrain: 'One barrel for one; two barrels for two; three barrels for three * * *'. Be that as it may, Karl Eitel, director of the Bismark hotel, was revealed as a staunch advocate of the doctrine of preparedness. To the skeptical, Eitel displayed a copy of a cablegram he dispatched to the Loewenbrau Brewery of Munich, Germany. "Strong possibility for beer importation by Christmas," the cable said. "Prepare 20,000 barrels finest Loewenbrau, hell und dunkel."

In case you're rusty on your German, "hell und dunkel" are the perfectly polite Teutonic designations of "light and dark."

FAMOUS PILOT TO TOUR U. S. AT 230 MILE AN HOUR AVERAGE SPEED

"World's fastest and safest transport plane" with which Major James H. Doolittle (inset) will set new inter-city records in 9,000-mile flight.

CHICAGO.—A nation-wide dramatization of commercial aviation of the future, when American business and professional men can breakfast at home, have lunch and transact important business in cities 1,000 miles away and be back with their families for dinner, will be staged next week with Major James H. Doolittle, world-famed flyer, playing the leading role.

Doolittle will take off from the Municipal Airport here November 23 on a 9,000-mile flight along the principal airways reaching from Chicago to the Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific coasts in "shellighting," a new ship of his own design which he claims is "the fastest and safest transport plane in the world," and with which he plans to maintain an average speed of 230 miles an hour between stops throughout his tour.

His epoch-making flight will be the longest ever attempted for the purpose of establishing new inter-city speed records with a transport plane carrying passengers. Four persons will accompany him. His speed will be just double that of the present average of planes operated by American commercial air lines. His ship, which is the last word in airplane design and equipment, is capable of a speed of more than 245 miles an hour.

The plane is equipped with a 700-horsepower Wright-Cyclone engine of advanced design, an improved N. A. C. A. radial engine cowling, automatic variable pitch propeller and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Griffin are here keeping house for Russell Griffin.

Mrs. Lela Northrup and Miss Rosella Mendelsohn spent Sunday in the F. M. Thornton home.

"A spoonful of water contains 250,000 potential horse-power," says a scientist. That isn't water.

Kosciusko county republicans rescued six of the positions from the record breaking flood of votes.

Mrs. Chas. Bishop spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Armstrong, south of Rehoboth.

The young people's class of the Lutheran Church will hold a bake sale Saturday at 10 o'clock, at Zonker's Store.

Mrs. Delora Curie and son, Elgin, accompanied by C. W. Hanna, made a trip to Jackson, Mich., Monday on business.

Mrs. Belle Ridgway is better at this time, from gall stone attacks. She is still at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Dema Curie.

Due to Thanksgiving next week, all news matter will have to be in early as we expect to issue The News on Tuesday, in order to get Wednesday delivery.

Mrs. Russell Griffin, who was in the Garrett hospital, is now at the home of Mrs. Alito Swain at Auburn, but is not getting along very well. She is still under the care of her physician.

Earl Smith has worked first trick in Fort Wayne for a couple of days. On Monday Miss Rosella Mendelsohn, Mrs. F. M. Thornton and Miss Geraldine accompanied him and spent the day in the city.

Among those from here who attended the Lutheran Young People's Convention at Auburn Sunday were Mrs. Grace Dilley, John Dilley, Curtis Northrup, Joe Woodcox, Virginia Shull, Geraldine Thornton, Ruth Curie, Effie Belle Freeburn, Mary Curie and Rev. Fabianske.

M. E. Leighty has resigned as the head of the county home, same to take effect on March 1st. The board of commissioners refused to accept the resignation, but Mr. Leighty states that he does not care to reconsider. He is now serving his fourth 4-year term, and in these years has developed the home into a real admirable place for the old folks of the county. Mrs. Leighty has resigned as matron, also.

Fish & Game Club Information

Bird Bands

All game birds liberated by the department of conservation in 1932, and nearly all liberated in 1931, carried numbered leg bands for identification. For several years the U. S. Bureau of Biological Survey has banded migratory birds. States adjoining Indiana also have banded their liberated game birds. It is earnestly requested that any such bands found, together with all possible information as to location, date and cause of fatality, be sent to this department, which will forward to the proper office any bands other than their own. Statistics compiled from this information will prove invaluable in the future game program. The state of Ohio, which has planted pheasants near the Indiana line, is especially interested in learning through the recovery of bands, the migrations of its birds into this state.

Both cars were damaged considerably but no one was injured, excepting Clifford Milliman, who has a stiff neck, due to being shaken up.

and rabbits (Nov. 11.) Pre-season reports indicate a good crop of both species. This department is making effort to improve game conditions in the state. It is its sincere desire to afford, not to prohibit, hunting to those who are financing the game conservation program by taking out licenses. But it appeals to the hunters to be fair to the game; to obey the laws; to kill for sport and not for greed or profit; to not shoot out the game population of any area; to not reduce coveys too much; especially to spare pheasants which the department is trying to establish; and in general to mind the future of game.

Division Activities for 1932

The report of the fish and game division for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1932, will show, among other things, that the division:

Produced at the five hatcheries and planted over 2,000,000 game fish fry; removed 26,000,000 game fish fry; removed 5,380 predatory fish from the waters of the state; rescued 6,460 game fish from receding waters; staked off breeding grounds in 32 lakes; cooperated under contract with seven sportsmen's organizations in rearing black bass in ponds and furnished 110,000 fry for that purpose; investigated 44 cases of alleged pollution; closed to fishing two trout streams in LaGrange county; continued the trout survey and White river survey in cooperation with Indiana University; operated three game reserves and practiced game management thereon; produced at the two game farms 8,851 pheasants and 707 quail; planted 7,387 pheasants, 431 quail and 72 rabbits; distributed 3,975 pheasant eggs; established a quail demonstration project in cooperation with the U. S. Bureau of Biological Survey; maintained a game warden service of 65 men who made 1,546 arrests for violation of the fish and game laws; organized or reorganized 31 sportsmen's clubs; kept contact with state and local conservation organizations; made an exhibit at the state fair; maintained a field worker in cooperation with the National Association of Audubon Societies who delivered 350 bird lectures to 67,000 people; was charged with the custody of property of the appraised value of $700,000.00; expended $29,000.00 for lands and structures and $18,000.00 for equipment; purchased 307 acres of land; operated 63 motor cars.

No More Fish Applications

By a new departmental order now in effect, the division of fish and game will accept no more applications for fish for stocking waters. The division itself will ascertain and select waters which are the most suitable for the respective species of fish. Fish produced at state hatcheries will be liberated in public waters only, or in such private waters as may be accessible to the public for fishing. The waters to be stocked in each county, or in each river system, will be selected by the division, having regard to need for stocking, available food, absence of pollution, number of fishermen served by the water, and suitability generally. Data will be procured from time to time, records will be kept, and each system will be charted.

The reason for the new order is that under the former practice of stocking on application there was an unequal and inequitable distribution and also there were too many instances of abuse of the privilege and too many requests for fish for personal and private gain. The fish are produced at the hatchery by public money derived from license fees, and these fish therefore should inure to the benefit of the payors. The new order will provide a more systematic method of stocking, will save time and expense in planting, and so will permit the fish to be held longer and to grow larger at the hatcheries.

Game Warden Service

For October the statistics of the warden service show: Arrests 106; convictions 91; cases pending 10; cases dismissed 6; fines and costs $2,062.55.

A Washington evening was observed by the Ladies Literary Club at their meeting last week at the home of Mrs. Millie Shull.

New Version of Legend Concerning St. Patrick

The legend of St. Patrick driving the snakes out of Ireland, as told in "Wonder Garden," by Frances Jenkins Olcott, is that St. Patrick found Ireland filled with snakes, serpents, demons and toads, and determined to rid the country of them. So he gathered them all together and bade them go to the top of Crochan Acla. Some refused because they knew they would be forced into the sea from the mountain top. St. Patrick, knowing they feared the sound of a bell, rang one very gently. Immediately they rushed to the top of the mountain and from there over the side of a cliff into the sea.

Some of the reptiles, however, hid in a cave near the edge of the sea. The saint rang the bell again, but in vain, as the surf drowned out its chimes. The reptiles were safe until he flung the bell over the mountain to and into the hollow where they were hiding. It fell on their backs and they plunged into the sea. Never since that day have snakes been seen in the land and some folks say that the bell lies hidden under the earth in the hollow of Crochan Acla.

The legend is symbolic of the fact that St. Patrick cleansed Ireland of its sins and brought it the faith—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Governments by Soviets, That Replaced Czarism

A definition and explanation of the term "Soviet," made by Webster's New International Dictionary, is as follows: "Soviet: A council, specifically, either one of two governing bodies (village soviets, town soviets) in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, established as a result of the Russian revolution of 1917 and by the constitution of the republic of July, 1918, and later by the constitution of the union, July, 1923. These soviets are the primary organs of a government based on the principle of communism, seeking to give the power to the working classes. They are the supreme local authorities; consist of representatives, chosen annually, of workmen (elected by shops, organizations, etc.), soldiers, and peasants; and send deputies to the higher soviet congresses: volosts (rural district), uyezds (county), guberniyas (provincial), oblasts (regional), and the congresses of the constituent republics. All these soviet congresses meet annually. The highest governmental body of all is the union soviet congress, composed of representatives of town soviets and of representatives of the provincial soviet congresses. This congress elects the union, central executive committee."

Black Prince's Ruby

Gems have played a great role in history, arousing the passions of men, willing to fight for or steal them. What tales the flashing Black Prince ruby, now among England's crown jewels, could tell! Its known career began with the murder of Abu Salih, a native of Granada, by Pedro the Cruel, who was obliged to sacrifice his ill-gotten treasure in payment for help given to him by Edward, the Black Prince. In the subjugation of his rebellious subjects. Next the blood-red stone was heard of at Agincourt, where it flashed in the crown-encircled helmet of Henry V. It was then that its talismanic qualities were first noted, for, so chroniclers relate, it saved the life of the king when he was beset by assassins.

Great Appetites

Fondness for pickles seems to have been a characteristic of famous personages as well as of ordinary mortals, both ancient and modern. The early Greeks and Romans and other ancient peoples were especially fond of pickles, and historical records from antiquity down to modern times tell us that Cleopatra, Tiberius, Julius Caesar, Napoleon and our own Washington and Jefferson were among the world celebrities who liked the familiar appetizers that we moderns know so well.

The cucumber, most popular form of pickle, is one of mankind's oldest foods, and was first cultivated in northern India 3,000 years before Christ.

Brilliant Constellation

The Southern cross is a constellation situated near the Antarctic circle. It consists of four bright stars. The two brilliant stars, which mark the summit and foot have nearly the same right ascension. The constellation, therefore, is almost vertical when passing the meridian, and these two stars act as pointers to the Antarctic circle. The constellation becomes visible at about north latitude 30 degrees, but haze and fog near the sea horizon will usually obscure it until a latitude six or seven degrees farther south has been reached.

Carcassonne

You may have never been to Carcassonne in France, and like the old man in Nadaud's famous song, you may lament, "I never shall see Carcassonne," but you have heard of it and read of it: the famous walled city which still stands as it did in the Middle Ages, with its double line of fortifications and 50 towers. The citadel dates back to the Fifth century when it was occupied by the Visigoths, while the cathedral of St. Nazaire is of the Eighth century. The city is so old that Julius Caesar saw it 2,000 years ago.

Pilgrim Fathers' Lives Sustained by Hominy

Hominy, golden grain of the plumed Indian maize beaten into coarse meal. Gift of welcome to the Pilgrim fathers from their red neighbors. Among the dishes of early American cookery, what the Cato and Lodges are to the sons and daughters of the American Revolution.

Of hominy as a food of the colonists, wrote Captain Smith in 1629: "They commonly fed upon milke homint, which is bruised Indian corne pounded and boiled thicke, and milke for the sauce."

"Their ordinary diet is poane and omeline, both made of corn," wrote Lord Baltimore; and "William Penn: "Their diet is maize, sometimes beaten and boiled with water, which they call homine." One waggyish article relates, "Our entertainer made him (a newcomer) own that a plate of hominy was the best rice pudding he had ever eat."

Today we commonly refer to the coarse meal made of white corn kernels, from which the rough fibrous part and the germ has been removed, as hominy grits. Hominy is the term more generally applied to the whole corn grains hulled by lye immersion—Exchange.

Writer Has Some Doubt About Weather Control

A scientist thinks that weather eventually may be controlled by electricity. We contemplate with awe the bringing on of a thunderstorm by pressing a button. Will powerful sirens warn the people of the storm's approach so they will stop the superfluous watering of their lawns and shut the northwest windows? For we do not suppose that the electrical rain-makers will so far defy established natural laws as to bring rainstorms from unheard of directions.

The rains should be quite orderly and never freakish. Ruskin said: "As men do not walk on their heads, there are natural laws that clouds do not disobey." We have always thought that man would, one of these days, determine when rain should fall and when it shouldn't, and electrical control may be the secret. But we have profound doubts of his being able to do a thing when a Gulf of Mexico hurricane comes ashore.—F. H. Collier in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

When Water Freezes

There is no difference between the freezing point of water that has been heated and that which has not been heated if the water is pure. In the case of tap water which is nearly pure but contains dissolved air, heating the water may drive out some of the air. This has no considerable effect on the freezing point, but may make a difference in the character of the ice produced. Hot-water pipes are reported to burst from freezing more often than cold-water pipes. This is not because of a difference of freezing point of the water, but is probably because the water in cold-water pipes contains dissolved air, which separates on freezing and forms a slushy ice; while when water in a hot-water pipe freezes, it is more apt to become under-cooled and then freeze rather suddenly, forming compact ice free from bubbles, which is more apt to break a pipe.

Composed Famous Song

A negro year book says that Richard Milburn was the composer of "Listen to the Mocking Bird." Mr. Septimus Winner, composer and publisher, induced Milburn to whistle this song before him while he wrote down the birdlike notes. The song was afterward published by Mr. Winner in Philadelphia in 1855, and during the years 1855 to 1865, it was popular with minstrel companies and serenading parties. The front of the piece reads "Words by Septimus Winner—Music by Alice Hawthorne." "Alice Hawthorne" was one of the pseudonyms used by Mr. Winner on his title pages.

Magna Charta Reminder

The organization known as the Society of the Daughters of the Barons of Runnymede was organized in 1915 by Mrs. Robert G. Hogan of Catonsville, Md., who conceived the idea of an organization for women similar to a men's organization, the Barons of Runnymede, which was organized but undeveloped on account of our entry into the World War. The membership is limited to those who can trace their ancestry in a direct line to a baron who in the year 1215, A. D., compelled the signing of the Magna Charta by King John at Runnymede. The organization is American.

The Danger

The football game guests reached the house before their host, and Mary was just getting the doorway out of its known hiding place, when David protested:

"We'd better not go in before they come. They have a dog, you know." "Oh, yes, I know," she returned nonchalantly, "but the dog has a lame leg. He won't hurt us."

"Well," returned her escort, "I was afraid he might bite us, not kick us!"

Today's Tasks First

Today is the appointed time to get your job done. Never put it off until tomorrow, for tomorrow will never come. Inertia is one of the greatest of our sins. Do today what should be done today—tomorrow will find its own tasks.—Griff.

Double Victory at Pleasant Lake

The boys and girls traveled to Pleasant Lake last Friday night and won both games with the score 14-23. The boys remained in the lead all evening, winning the first half 8-5.

The St. Joe girls made the first score of the evening and also remained in the lead the whole game. However, the game was close enough to be interesting until the last quarter; then the St. Joe girls outclassed their opponents with some fast playing and accurate shooting.

Boys Trounced by High Scoring Avilla Quintet

Avilla continued its scoring spree at the expense of St. Joe last Saturday night, winning quite easily by their uncanny ability at snagging field goals when needed.

This lanky crew of boys presented the best exhibition of basketball shooting that has been seen in the St. Joe Gym for many a moon. In four games this season the Avillians have averaged forty-three points per game. Incidentally, St. Joe finds but small consolation in knowing that the local club scored more points against the "giants" than has been scored by any of the other three teams.

The victors outscored the locals by only three points the second half, but the tremendous lead, piled up in the second quarter, was too much for the "wounded tigers" to overcome.

Girls Win Third Straight Victory

The girls came through with another victory when they beat the Avilla girls 10-16. At the end of the first quarter Avilla was in the lead by one point, but the St. Joe girls started out with new determination, gained the lead again, and held it the rest of the game.

The school furnished a playlet for the Farm Bureau meeting last Wednesday evening at the community gymnasium.

Miss Borthwick attended Home Coming at Defiance last Saturday and saw her Alma Mater win over the Findlay football team 19-0.

"This girl has blue eyes, not skinny or fat."

"His hair is sandy and will weigh about 120 pounds."

Saved by the Bell!

Here are the latest reports about the grand prize fight, which started September 6 and will finish in April. The teachers are still leading, as usual, but the pupils have been showing a slight gain in the last few weeks.

Today the teacher feels rather tough and the pupils haven't their lessons, so it looks like a victory for the teachers. First a right to the jaw, on uppercut to the chin, a left to the ear. (Of course all the socks are but questions.) The round of forty-five minutes is almost over but the teacher comes forward with an old hay-maker to the left ear.

"Earl, prove proposition 18."

"What? Can that be the bell already?"

Again the class is "saved by the bell."

Both games with Hamilton this Friday night should prove quite interesting to the St. Joe fans. Let's see a good crowd.

NEWVILLE

John Dove and Terry Traxler spent Monday in Fort Wayne. Mrs. Prudence Schram, Mrs. Ida Rose and Mrs. Thelma Keener spent Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. Grace Foster.

Mrs. F. A. Thomas was presented a large birthday cake, by Mrs. Lu Reigh Strong, Saturday, that being her birthday anniversary.

Mr. Doe Stringer and lady friend of Auburn, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank O'Dell and family were guests Sunday afternoon of Mr. and Mrs. James Foster.

Mrs. F. A. Thomas was the dinner guest Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. George Strong. In the afternoon Mrs. F. A. Thomas, Mrs. George Strong and Mrs. Harry Henderson called on Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Myers to see their new son.

The Christian Aid Society met Thursday with Mrs. Kate Fusselman and elected the following officers: President, Mrs. Prudence Schram; vice president, Mrs. Lillian Washler; secretary, Mrs. Mildred Enzor; treasurer, Mrs. Geraldine Webster; pianist, Mrs. Grace Foster; chorister, Mrs. Lillian Washler; Chairman Flower Committee, Mrs. Schram; devotional, Mrs. Mary Schondelmeyer and Mrs. Kate Fusselman. The next meeting of the society will be at the home of Mrs. Mildred Enzor, December 1.

Mrs. Mary Scoville is here from Angola visiting relatives. Mrs. Maud Patten spent Monday afternoon with Mrs. Lemuel Wilson.

Mrs. F. A. Thomas called on Mrs. Frank Miller at West Milford, Monday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Richards and family spent Sunday at Edon, Ohio, with Seldon Kintner.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Traxler, Kenneth Gaff and Miss Mona Traxler were Fort Wayne visitors Saturday.

Seven women from this place are employed at the Garment factory in Butler. They drive to and from work.

A dinner in honor of W. L. Strong's 83rd birthday was served November 11, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Strong to the following guests: Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Strong, Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Schondelmeyer, Hugh Strong and Mr. and Mrs. George Strong.

Rev. and Mrs. Coburn and four children from Coburntown, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Diehl and son from Butler, Mrs. Kate Fusselman of this place and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mann of west of Milford, Ohio, were the dinner guests Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Fusselman the occasion being the first wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Mann.

NEWVILLE (Intended for Last Week)

The Missionary Society met Tuesday Nov. 8, with Mrs. Mary Washler.

Mrs. Estella Fuller, of Garrett, is here visiting Mr. and George Koepp.

Mrs. J. H. Benner is home from a three weeks visit with Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Koepp near Butler.

Mrs. LaVina Rude and children of St. Joe, spent Thursday evening here with Mrs. Vera Miller.

Evelyn Mendenhall, of Ray, Ind., was the guest over the weekend of her sister, Elsie Mendenhall.

Mrs. Redena Ellis is here from Marion, Ohio, visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Richmond.

The DeKalb County Brotherhood had a meeting and supper at the Mt. Pleasant Church Wednesday evening, Nov. 9.

A son was born Oct. 30 to Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Myers. Also a son was born to Mr. and Mrs. George Koepp, Oct. 31.

Mr. and Mrs. Austin Koepp, of Butler and Mrs. Bethel Shaffer and son, Russell, spent Sunday evening in the Ivan Smith home.

Arthur Arnold and family from Hicksville, Mrs. Jessie Fusselman and Mrs. Dorothy Clark were Monday guests of Mrs. Rhea Smith.

Members of the U. B. Sunday School will give Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Stark a shower, Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Nelson.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Clark enjoyed a 6 o'clock birthday dinner Tuesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Smith, given in honor of Mr. Smith's anniversary.

Rev. C. W. Moore, Coral Platter, Weldon Reas and the Misses Dorothy Wasson, Mona Traxler, Allen Gaff and Helen Washler attended the Young People's Conference at Auburn Saturday.

CONCORD

Mrs. Ada Messenger spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Bassett.

The safest of drivers these days are the ones who leave their cars in the garage.

Mr. and Mrs. Oren Rude are the proud parents of a girl baby, whose name is Thelma Jean, born Friday morning.

Mrs. Hattie Draggoo had a birthday dinner for her son, Clifford, some days ago. Those present besides the family were Mrs. Vanille and daughter, Fern of Auburn.

The people in this neighborhood are very busy people, some digging potatoes, some butchering, gathering in cabbage, making sour kraut, cutting wood and some moving and so goes the world.

Mrs. C. Jackson entertained at Sunday dinner in honor of Mrs. C. B. Jackson, the birthday of Mr. C. B. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Perkins, Mr. and Mrs. Holl Jackson, and Mr. and Mrs. Ford Jackson and daughter, Iola.

Mrs. Ira Bone and Mr. Frank Smith, of Willard, Ohio, celebrated their birthdays Sunday at the home of Mrs. Bone. Those present were Mr. Frank Smith, of Willard, O., Mr. and Mrs. Don VanFleet of Garrett, Mr. and Mrs. Clouse of Auburn, and Mr. and Mrs. Will Scott of Hicksville. A bountiful dinner and a good time in general were enjoyed by all present. In the evening came Mr. and Mrs. Jess Provines of Auburn, Mr. and Mrs. Lancaster Morr, Mr. and Mrs. Earnest Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Krise, Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Fetters and family and Mrs. Hattie Draggoo. Popcorn and home made candy were served.

NEWVILLE TOWNSHIP

Last Wednesday the Newville Township Home Bureau met with Mrs. Agatha Roberts in an all day meeting. Three guests were present, Miss Coburn, Mrs. Platter, and Miss Luella Bess Platter. Eight members were also present, Mrs. Emma Kline, Mrs. Jennie Bidlack, Mrs. Millie Enzor, Mrs. Daisy Roberts, Mrs. Lena Piernman, Mrs. Blen Moore, Mrs. Mildred Kling and Mrs. Agatha Roberts. A pot luck dinner was served and was fine. The meeting began on time which is as follows: Opening exercises, reading of minutes were approved. Roll call, responses, "What I am Thankful for." Many good answers were given. Flower collection, 16c. The First Thanksgiving 16 cents. The First Thanksgiving Day was given by Mrs. Millie Enzor. Mrs. Daisy Roberts gave her project work demonstrating after this work was completed. They had election of officers as follows: Mrs. Agatha Roberts, president; Mrs. Almira Conine, vice president; Mrs. Lena Piernman, treasurer; Mrs. Mildred Kling, secretary; Mrs. Blen Moore, chorister; Mrs. Lena Piernman, pianist; Mrs. Mildred Kling, press correspondent.

The next meeting, a Christmas number, will be held December 14th.

LUTHERANS HOLD FATHER AND SON BANQUET

Monday evening, November 14, in the basement of the church the first Father and Son banquet of St. Mark's Lutheran Church was held.

Judging by the success of this one it will not be the last.

The Fathers and Sons met in the auditorium of the church, fifty-one in all, and at the appointed times were paired off and marched to the basement where the ladies of the church served the banquet.

Merritt Sechler acting as toastmaster. After surrounding the table and standing with heads bowed Ed Pfauwer returned thanks. Joe Woodcox was the song leader and after singing several songs J. P. Buckingham

SUBSTANCE SIZE OF A PEA LUBRICATES MILE-SQUARE AREA

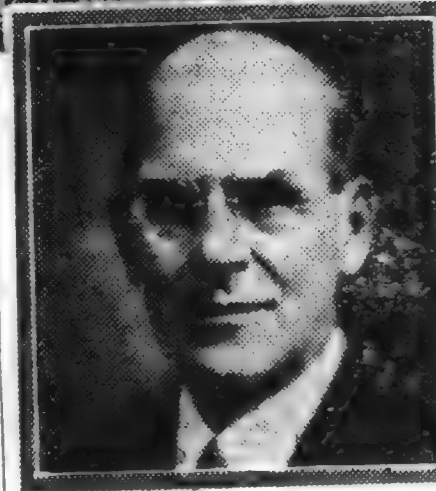

A REVOLUTIONARY new motor lubricating fluid has been perfected which has as its chief ingredient a highly lubricative colloidal (gel-like) substance so finely subdivided that a volume the size of a pea would cover a mile-square surface with a thin self-lubricating film.

This startling statement was made by Dr. G. A. Abbott, head of the chemistry department of the University of North Dakota and state oil chemist, at Grand Forks, who is a nationally recognized authority on oils, following his exhaustive tests with the fluid.

The fluid, which was used in pre-conditioning the motors of both an automobile recently driven 745 miles at Halifax, Nova Scotia, and an airplane flown 35 minutes at Winona, Minn., after all oil had been drained from their crankcases, was perfected by W. V. Kilder, former newspaper man of La Crosse, Wis.

The minute colloidal particles of the substance, when introduced into a motor by adding the carrier fluid to the regular crankcase oil, are attracted to the surfaces of the pistons and cylinders, forming a very thin but smooth and uniform lubricating film that thoroughly fills the finest pores and crevasses of the metal. Dr. Abbott said, "As this lubricating coat wears away it is continually renewed by fresh deposits of the colloidal particles in the oil stream. These particles, which readily pass through the finest filters, carry electrical charges that serve to repel and prevent them from collecting into larger masses and settling out. It is very probable that the fluid also contains some stabilizing agent in small quantity to prevent settling. "Thus when a motor thoroughly conditioned with this substance is run after all oil has been drained from it, the film established upon both iron and the colloidal substance, for the cavities of the metal are still filled with sub-microscopic particles of the latter. As the mottled surface is ground down these particles are smeared over the protruding metal spots, which strongly attract and hold them. In this way a continuous film of lubrication is maintained until the metal is worn down to the limit of penetration of the particles into its pores. "From the physical and chemical properties of the fluid investigated it is reasonable to expect practical engineering tests to show a marked increase in motor efficiency, due to better lubrication," Dr. Abbott added. "This should cause the motor to run cooler and should result in a saving of fuel and in longer life of pistons and rings."

gave the welcome address. A toast to Sons was given by D. B. Ridgway followed by a toast to the Fathers by Carl Goodwin.

Rev. Bradley from Columbia City gave the address of the evening his subject was "The Price of Success." Rev. Bradley proved himself a good speaker bringing out many points that will be of benefit to both Father and Son. Harvey Hull, Joe Woodcox and Wm. Staman sang several songs which everyone enjoyed. The banquet ended with singing, Bless be the tie that binds.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Warstler, of west of Concord, were Sunday evening callers at the Chas. Bishop home, west of town.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Randall returned home Tuesday evening from a week's visit in Chicago, with their son, Harry, and family. They arrived home in the blizzard. In fact it was the largest snow ever known here for the first attempt.

WHERE DID I PLACE THAT PAPER

How many times during a year do you ask yourself this question?

How much time do you spend searching through drawers and pigeonholes for some valuable paper or document you have mislaid?

Then, too, there is the constant danger of absolute loss of something that is valuable by theft or careless destruction.

A safe deposit box in our vault relieves you of all this uncertainty, worry and loss of time.

Get the safe deposit box habit. It is a constant comfort.

NUMBER 47

WHAT A RED CROSS MEMBERSHIP MEANS

The little Red Cross membership button is a badge of honor. Many are wearing it, for it tells the story of helpfulness in time of stress and need. In a few more days the membership campaign for 1932 will come to a close. Thanksgiving marking the end of the roll call.

There is no need to enumerate all that the Red Cross is doing. Many in DeKalb county are able to testify to the benefits of this great organization of helpfulness. This year alone several thousand barrels of flour have been distributed and great quantities of material have been made into clothing.

The DeKalb county Red Cross nurse is doing a service which is invaluable. Her work in the schools is educational and paves the way for pupils to learn how to prevent and combat disease and lend valuable assistance in the time of sickness, accidents or pestilence.

The county nurse is indispensable. However, her work will have to be given up if this year's drive does not net enough money to pay her salary. No appropriation was made by the DeKalb county council this year for the Red Cross nurse.

The dollar given now by those more fortunate than their fellowmen will go a long way toward helping the needy this winter. When the Red Cross solicitor calls, do not hesitate. Join now.

In St. Joe, the town has been divided into an east and west section and the Ladies Literary Club will provide solicitors for the west while the east will be taken care of by solicitors from the Culture Club. The township soliciting is in the hands of the Home Bureau, Mrs. Gertrude Borthwick, chairman.

DISPOSED OF PROPERTY BY A WILL

The following bequests are made by the late Mrs. Catherine Otto, of Spencer, in her will admitted to probate in the DeKalb circuit court:

To Verda Yountz, $200.
To Otto Stanley, Vada and Virginia Yountz, children of Verda Yountz, $200 each.

The residue of the estate to Verda Yountz, Mary Lochner, Lydia Gerig, Dora Schlatter, Christ Koble, Solomon Goldsmith, Emma Conner, Nellie Gerig and Solomon Koble.

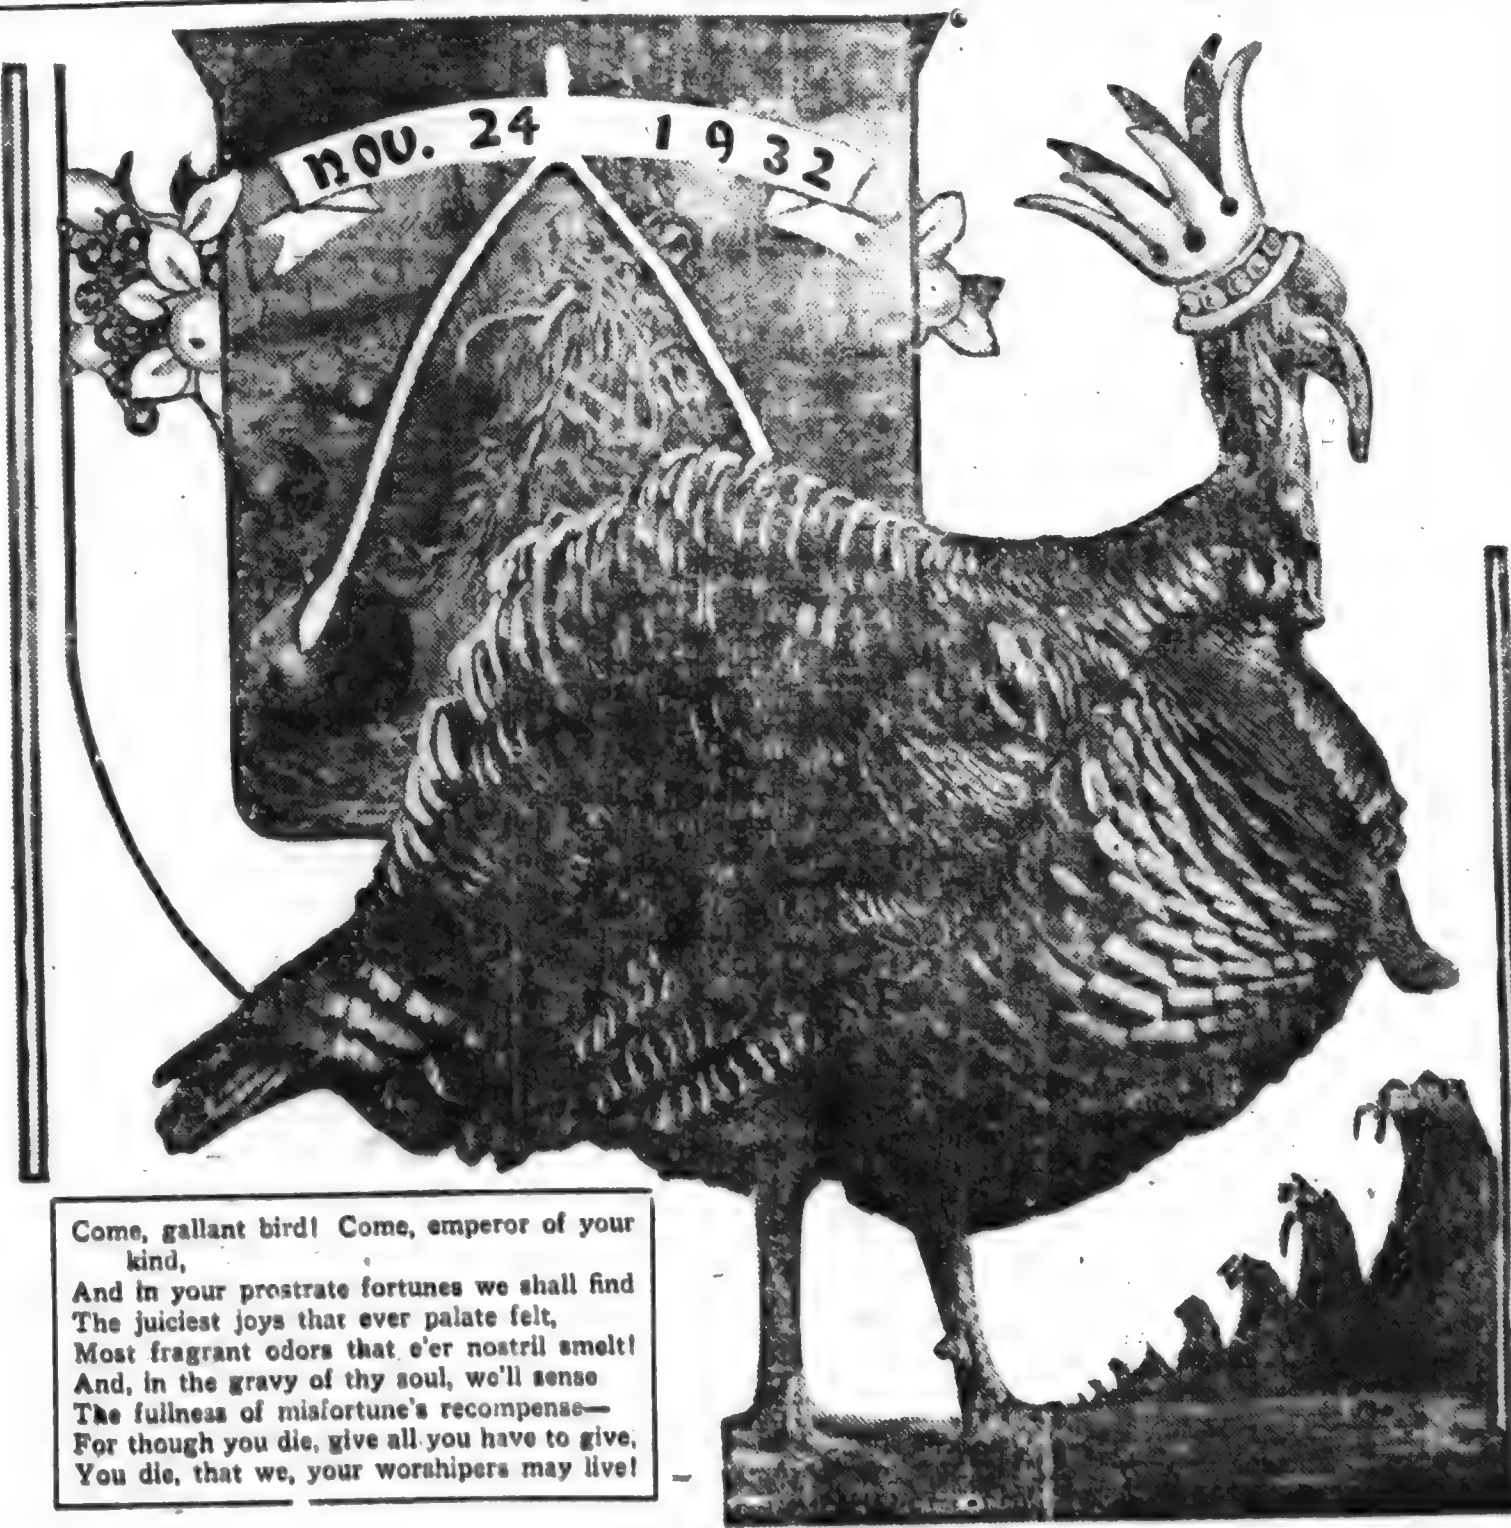

Mrs. Otto stipulated that the money left to Otto, Stanley, Vada, and Virginia Yountz should be held in trust by Solomon Koble, Solomon Goldsmith or Ben Gerig until the Yountz children become twenty years of age.

A nephew of Mrs. Otto, Solomon Koble, of Fort Wayne, was nominated in the will for executor. The will was signed February 24, 1931, with W. G. Erick and Clyde G. Rectenwall as witnesses.

TRAVELERS ARE GIVEN SHELTER OVER NIGHT

Many homeless men, wanderers and unemployed, are going thru the country these days, seeking food and a berth for the night. This constitutes a problem of no small magnitude everywhere. There is a considerable drift

AUTOCRAT OF THE DAY

Come, gallant bird! Come, emperor of your kind,
And in your prostrate fortunes we shall find
The juiciest joys that ever palate felt,
Most fragrant odors that e'er nostril smelt!
And, in the gravity of thy soul, we'll sense
The fullness of misfortune's recompense—
For though you die, give all you have to give,
You die, that we, your worshipers may live!

from the larger centers of population, toward the smaller towns, villages, and countryside.

Last winter many men were given a place in the local town hall. Here they were given shelter where they could be shielded from the cold. Plenty of coal is provided for keeping the building warm, for the fire fighting apparatus is housed on the lower floor, and the liquid chemicals must be kept from freezing.

All that is required of the wanderer is that he keep up fires and clean up all mess before leaving. This winter, all appearances indicate that many will obtain shelter here. Many of these are men of considerable culture, and do not have the earmarks of the well-known near-do-well type of professional hobo.

SUING DEKALB COUNTY FOR BACK SALARY

A suit to mandate the county council to make an appropriation to pay a balance of $460 alleged to be due under a contract with the county commissioners was filed Wednesday in the DeKalb circuit court by Mrs. Betty M. Leighty, matron of the county asylum.

Mrs. Leighty's husband is Malcolm E. Leighty and they entered into a joint contract with the commissioners for a four year term, starting March 1, 1929, and ending March 1, 1933. His pay was to be $1,500 a year and that of Mrs. Leighty $780.

The complaint, prepared by Attorney H. W. Mountz, says that the council has made appropriations annually to pay Mr. Leighty in full, but that only $600 was allowed for Mrs. Leighty for the year 1931 and only $500 for the year 1932. The monthly claims of Mrs. Leighty were allowed in full by the commissioners, but could not be paid in full.

The court is asked to issue a writ of mandate requiring the council to make an appropriation sufficient to meet the terms of the contract. When the commissioners met for their November term, Mr. and Mrs. Leighty submitted their resignations effective March 1, but the commissioners refused to accept them.

BOY GETS 90 DAYS FOR STRIKING STEPMOTHER

Lewis Loftus, a St. Joe youth, was fined $10 and costs and was sentenced to the state farm for ninety days when he pleaded guilty in the DeKalb circuit court Wednesday afternoon to a charge of assault and battery. The affidavit was signed by his stepmother, Mrs. Ada Loftus. She stated that Lewis struck her on November 3 and it was also said that he beat his father. The youth told Judge Endicott that he asked his father and stepmother for some money and that when he was refused he lost his temper.

Loftus served time in the state reformatory for stealing and was sent back to the prison for violating his parole. He is crippled, having an artificial leg.

He was taken to the farm on Thursday by Sheriff Hoff, together with Hubert Myers, who was sentenced for stealing from Harold Baker.

A MOCK TRIAL AT HARLAN, NOVEMBER 29

A mock lawsuit will be held in the high school gym, November 29th. Wm. W. Spindler, one of our prosperous farmers, has filed an affidavit against Harold E. Greenwood, of Harlan, for the theft of twelve chickens on the night of June 12, 1932. Mr. Greenwood declares his innocence and has engaged the well known law firm of J. E. Amstutz and Donald Fryback to defend him. The prosecution is in the hands of Prosecutor C. H. Kinsey assisted by deputy Victor Guibard. Carl Oetting has been appointed special judge to try the case. Sheriff Hugo Oetting and court reporter Maxine Amstutz will assist during the trial.

Witnesses for the plaintiff are Wm. Spindler, Esther Greenwood, Geo. Roller, Clifford Zellmer, Harry Foke, Sophia Emme and A. K. Mumma.

Defense witnesses are Harold Greenwood, J. C. Wertz, Amy Spindler, Agnes Hass, Harold Stiver, D. D. Boston, David Mumma. Mr. Greenwood declares he is innocent of the charge. While the prosecution declares they have sufficient evidence to inflict capital punishment. The case is to be tried before a jury and no admittance is to be charged. Everything free. Remember the date, November 29. Time, 8:00 o'clock.

Mrs. Inez Hadsell was unfortunate in losing a horse, one day last week. The animal was old, and apparently not ailing, and dropped dead while being worked.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Golings have moved from the Draggoo farm, east of town, in with his parents, south of Concord, for the winter. They will return to the Draggoo farm next spring and assist Roy Keller in raising melons.

Because of the lack of business at Spencer, the Standard Oil Filling Station has been closed.

Charles Thayer, of Hicksville, accompanied by Mrs. Chas. Jackson, were afternoon guests of Mrs. Eva Sheffer, Sunday.

Foreclosure on the Joseph W. and Lulu L. Gerig farm in Jackson township, is asked by Samuel A. and Jennie Squires. A judgment of $4,100 is asked.

THANKSGIVING: A Parable

THE frail boats of these Pilgrims had been delivered from the vast and tumultuous masses of the dark sea. Under the frowning battlements of the black forest they lifted their roof trees and muscled their walls with oak, laid open the new soil and cast the shining grain, forgetful in labor and hope of their great loneliness.

AND now their strong, small cabins stood, seamed with snow, in the utter whiteness of the clearing. The blue smoke of their sturdy chimneys drifted warmly against the black wall of the wilderness and their hearths were ruddy with deep embers.

THE harvest was bountiful. The dark barns were musty with maize and baling pumpkins glowed in the light of the candle. The walls of the cabins were festooned with dry herbs and at each door hung the frozen carcass of a wild beast.

THE dark ocean thundered with winter storms. The vast wilderness frowned. Death lurked in the forest and the clearing. Men had died from ax wounds and arrows. Children had perished of starvation and disease and young wives had died in motherhood. Over each door hung the weapons of hunt and warfare. Life was grim and heroic with Odyssean uncertainty.

BUT there were the rooftree and the precious fire, grain in the bin and the stripped carcass by the door. This was their home; only death could dispossess them. Their minds and their hearts were their own and not even death could dispossess them. Here a man might speak as he pleased and pray as he pleased. He could not ask for more, having known the wrongs of oppression and the terrors of the wide sea and a strange land.

AND so a day was set aside for Thanksgiving to God for His great goodness, for the boon of life, for rooftree and fire and food and the privilege of the thankful heart. On that day, between the stormy sea and the awful wilderness, these people sang and feasted on the small bounty of the first harvest.

—Hubert Kelley, in the Kansas City Star.

AMNESIA OR ABSENT-MINDEDNESS, WHICH?

An Ann Arbor man had a lapse of memory for a period of ten days, in which he could not recall a thing which had happened during that time.

He applied for aid of Indianapolis police to set him straight. For some unknown reason, he drove from Ann Arbor in his car, without telling his wife he was leaving. What happened after that he does not know.

Cases of amnesia are becoming quite common of late. Colonel Robins (dry leader) disappeared from his home, and, for a time, it was feared he was kidnapped by hostile wets; but later accounts revealed his whereabouts, in the small mountain town of Asheville, N. C. He was discovered by a nephew whom he failed to recognize.

None of these places, nor their people "have anything on" St. Joe. While it doesn't exactly illustrate amnesia, we have some who are absent minded, for instance a man called in our sanctum and asked if we had any locks. We told him all we had were at home. He then begged our pardon saying he thought this was a dry goods store.

Then, we had a gentleman who parked his car in front of the Kinsey Hardware, where he left it and hunted for it for hours, and thought it had been stolen.

Another man walked into a house, hallooed, before he discovered he was in the wrong house.

Still another case, a man was walking along the street and stepped into a hole, in front of which a pile of dirt had been placed, he had to climb over the dirt before he stepped into the hole.

Another fellow failed to open up his place of business; in response to a telephone call, inquiring the reason, the gentleman answered, "We do not do business on Sunday." And it wasn't Sunday. This fellow must have been dreaming it was vacation time.

And they do say L. B. Meek started to cut a man's hair, when he wanted only a shave. The hair cut was half finished before either customer or barber noticed the mistake. The hair cut, of course, had to be finished, then followed the shave. Maybe, this wasn't a case of absent mindedness after all.

Then Charlie Koch called a prospective customer to come over and look at a cow he had for sale. The customer came to see the cow, Charlie led him to the stable, but, no cow, he had forgotten he had sold it the day before, to another man.

The household goods of Mr. and Mrs. Hoyt Thomas were moved Monday from the home of Mrs. Ruth Davis.

Diphtheria, in some sections of Indiana is rapidly spreading. In Allen county 15 new cases are reported within the past week.

Indiana corn crop is reported as husking out on an average of 37 1/2 bushels per acre this year, which is better than expected. The quality is good in most cases although considerable ear worm and mold damage is reported. There is much outstanding corn in this county.

MAKE YOUR WORD AS GOOD AS YOUR BOND

---Then Be Thankful

IF you are known in your community as one who keeps his word, you have laid one of the foundation stones for sound credit. Reputation counts a great deal when you come to borrow money. You can build a reputation if you follow these few principles: Be honest; be industrious; save some money; manage your daily affairs wisely.

All these things one can be truly thankful for and even in times of depression you are put to the test of wise management in your personal affairs.

Peaceful as a cemetery today.

Useless warning: don't overeat.

Now we are all AMERICANS again.

Four more years and we'll have another headache.

And these are the days when political promises are forgotten.

Next in order is the grand march of the political job hunters.

We have one heritage of which depression can not rob us—our appetites.

Back to the farm, boys! Right now it's a good place to get all you can eat.

The people have spoken again.
Now let's see how much good it will do.

A popular song is something sung by half the world to annoy the other half.

"Operation Cures Criminal Mind," says a headline. Probably killed the cuss.

Diaries would be more interesting if they told the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

It would be quite a help if the novelist with the ingrowing mind knew as much about life as he does about himself.

Some people aid the needy by orating over the radio—others by digging down. There may be a caller at your back door now.

The bird who cleaned up the Christmas shopping matter early in October is now making an intensive study of the seed catalogs.

A Texas longhorn steer has been added to the Oklahoma City Zoo. There was a period, a while back, when Western exhibitors were on the lookout for a Democrat, but times have changed.

DAY OF JOY

What are you thankful for this Thanksgiving Day?

Wait a minute. It is a falling, characteristic of Americans, to attempt to express nearly everything in terms of money. Or, at least, in terms of prosperity.

Most of us have the notion that Thanksgiving Day as a national festival was born in much the same spirit—a gratitude for good fortune. To some extent, it was.
The Pilgrim Fathers were thankful for crops that ensured them against starvation in the barren winter that lay ahead. But unquestionably their joy was not confined to food.

They thanked the Almighty for liberty in government, freedom of worship and the simple joys of happy homes.

So, this Thanksgiving Day, let us not be thankful merely in proportion to our prosperity.

Let us remember and be thankful for these more important elements of life—our families, our health, our friends.

Many a home that is trying to make a small chicken serve as Thanksgiving feast for a half dozen hungry mouths has more of genuine love and happiness to be thankful for than some of the places where butlers serve giant turkeys on silver plates.

And if we are away from home, forced to dine at a public eating place among strangers, let us be thankful for the love of far-away home folks and friends.

Such is the real Thankgiving spirit.

IN WHAT STATE IS CHICAGO?

A movement in on foot to confer statehood upon the City of Chicago.

The suggestion comes from Prof. Chas. E. Merriam, political scientist, University of Chicago.
The object is the avoidance of the confusion which results in the overlapping of governmental authority as between the state and that municipality.

Article IV, Section 8, 1st clause, of United States, reads:
"New States may be admitted into this Union; but no new State shall be formed or erected within the jurisdiction of any other State, nor any other State be formed by the junction of two or more States, or parts of States, without the consent of the Legislatures of the States concerned, as well as the Congress."

BICENTENNIAL

"The fizzle made by the Washington Bi-centennial celebration in 1932 should be a warning to us not to repeat it when the year 2032 comes around."

The Pathfinder, Nov. 19, 1932.
More than 700,000 separate and distinct, functioned actively during the celebration period.

A conservative estimate by the United States George Washington
Bicentennial Commission claims that more than a million different Bicentennial Celebration programs took place during this nine months period.

More than thirty million
George Washington trees have been planted since February 22.

Abroad, seventy-eight countries have participated in the Bicentennial Celebration. This was a spontaneous movement, without official invitation from our Government.

The Government of Poland issued a special postage stamp in honor of the Bicentennial Celebration.

In Vienna a new municipal house was named after George Washington.

FOR THE FULLER LIFE

Interest in physical education is growing. Everywhere physical culture colleges and so called life extension institutes are springing up.

All will agree that this attention to hygiene and physical training is an excellent thing.
But it seems odd that so many should lay stress on physical culture merely as a means of prolonging life.

The value of physical education in extending life, is after all, only incidental. Its real merit is in making life worth living.

A general extension of the period of life is of interest mainly to the actuary. More appealing to the average man or woman is the new zest in life that comes from physical culture and health culture. It is less the desire to live longer than to live more fully that is increasing the ranks of the physical culturists.

A hearty appetite, a perfect digestion, a 100 per cent efficient liver, a clear brain and a general physical exhilaration—give us these as the reward of physical culture, no one worries much about the problem of life extension.

AN OLD YULETIDE RACKET

Christmas card racketeers are at it again. The game is to mail boxes of cards which have not been ordered, with the request that the recipient either return the cards or remit the price.

It is plain, unadulterated hold-up. Chambers of Commerce, responsible business houses and trade associations agree that the scheme is thoroughly reprehensible and unite in urging people not to fall for it.

The Cleveland Better Business Bureau has gone so far as to issue a statement of the legal rights of persons who receive un-ordered merchandise. These rights are:

1. The goods need not be accepted.
2. The goods need not be returned.
3. The goods need not be paid for.

Recipients, of course, have no right to use such unsought commodities. But they can legally put them aside without even notifying the sender that they do not want them.

One effective plan is to inform the sender that the goods are not wanted and ask him to send a personal agent to get them. When the agent arrives, a bill for storage is submitted with the goods.
This is guaranteed as a sure-fire way of getting one's name scratched off the sucker list.

THE CHRISTMAS HOLIDAY

These are the days when the head of the household takes a long, deep breath before the final plunge into the Christmas holiday season. Not again will he see the surface until the days after New Year's when the interesting statements of account will manage to present themselves with deadly accuracy.

Meanwhile he is not unconscious of strange parcels in many shapes and sizes which are littering the hall and shelves and he strongly suspects that only a little while and the evening hours will be filled with unraveling spools of red and tinsel ribbon and acres of white paper. Already there is the Christmas card problem, and not a soul in the household has taken pains to remember whether there was or was not a card from the Does last year. But, be that as it may, there is a growing stack of envelopes which soon must be carted down and mailed.

It was only yesterday that the butcher solicitously enquired whether it would be a turkey this year; and of course it will. Not less than 10 pounds, and perhaps 12. The head of the household will reflect with a sigh that with the first plates he will utter a cheery, "Go ahead, folks, don't wait," which means that by the time he gets around to his own helping the first customers will be all aglow and ready for their second.

But Christmas is Christmas nevertheless, most precious and significant and mellowing of all festivals. The stores hang heavily with gay things, bestirring remembrance and awakening old friendships. Somewhere far off there is a mind turning back to a familiar hearthside, cherishing old Yuletides and wondering, a little heart sick, how it would feel to be back there again.

Eloquent with suggestion, this season with its glowing feast of generous spirits and forgiving hearts. Not even Old Scrooge wants anyone to lack a touch of joy at this season. Given the opportunity, humanity is tender toward its fellows. Christmas makes the opportunity, and so the stores are jammed by thousands and the parcels multiply. For it is the moral nudging of kindness, of remembrance, and of common understanding.

Very well. Do it early.

RESPECT THE LAND OWNER

As the hunting season is now on, it is timely that a word of caution be given to those who are careless in their observation of the game laws.

This applies with equal force to trappers. Some hunters and trappers seem to be possessed with the notion, that a hunting and fishing license gives them the right to hunt, fish and trap, wherever they will.

This is far from the facts. One must have, besides the license, permit from owner, or renter of a property, before they can legitimately hunt. A written permission must be had of owner, before one can lawfully trap. We have had for many years, a Fish and Game Club in this vicinity, the object of which, is to preserve both fish and game for future needs. And it is exasperating to find that so defiant an attitude is assumed, by some local, and by more hunters who hail from the cities, those who ruthlessly destroy by killing or crippling pheasants, quail and partridges, without leave or license of owner of lands. Some farmers, and land owners are up in arms over this lawless spirit, that does not hesitate to openly defy the law, but will, in addition, curse the owner who orders them off their premises. And, it is furthermore, more than hinted that if this lawlessness does not cease, most stringent measures will be taken. A word to the wise is sufficient.

WHAT WILL THEY DO?

A conference will decide the fate of The Olive Branch Church, on the Noy Road, near Jimmy-town, a small rural church in Ohio, which has been abandoned for worship services. There are many churches of this kind scattered throughout the land, who have closed their doors, on account of lack of interest, loss of membership, and various other reasons. In the case of this church a contract was drawn up wherein it was left in the hands of the community for the holding of funerals. All articles of the contract have not been carried out, in the complaint of those interested in preserving this building for the aforesaid mentioned purpose. It seems that these people, while not primarily interested in attending worship, the purpose for which the building was consecrated, nevertheless, do want a place when they have "shuffled off the mortal coil," where they can enter head first and come out feet first.

THOUSANDS TO VISIT CHICAGO STOCK SHOW

Over 12,000 of the continent's finest farm animals, representing 35 different breeds, will be on view when the nation's premier agricultural show, the International Live Stock Exposition, opens its doors at the Chicago Stock Yards November 26.

The show opens on the Saturday after Thanksgiving and will close the following Saturday, December 3. Chicago will be host during Stock Show week to thousands from other states and foreign countries who are interested in the progress of agriculture as it is here so magnificently displayed.

Judges From 15 States

According to E. H. Helde, Secretary-manager of the Exposition, the leading livestock authorities of fifteen states and two foreign countries will be called upon to judge these finest specimens of the livestock farmer's skill that will parade the huge arenas in review of the judges.

Livestock will be on view that have come as far distant points as British Columbia and Texas, California and Connecticut. Farm crops will be on exhibit from every state in the Union, province of Canada, and Australia.

Despite the low price levels of farm and livestock products, the nation's breeders of purebred livestock and the country's producers of pure seeds and grain are continuing their work of improvement of animals and crops which will be exhibited and matched in the keenest of competition at Chicago's forthcoming livestock show in larger number than ever.

Called "Supreme Court"

Because the Exposition, since its inception in 1900, has occurred the same week every year, at the close of the agricultural Fair season, it has come to be recognized as the final court in handling down national championships.
Consequently only the best exhibited, it being the hope of every exhibitor to attain the prestige which goes to him, his farm, and his stock on any premiums won in the hundreds of classes and contests of this Supreme Court of American livestock shows.

Railroads will offer the lowest fares ever for this event, and for those who drive, ample free parking space will be provided near the Exposition buildings at the entrance to the Chicago Stock Yards.

... let us show you why GOOD printing pays!

Communications for this column must be plainly written, bear the writer's true name. If desired will be omitted in the column is yours and we welcome your contributions either in a

"NOW IS THE TIME HERE IS THE PLACE"

The time, the place, and you, should be shaking hands in congratulation. Because—here is a time, when you and opportunity should be able to do much good, with little cost to yourselves.

Winter has now asserted itself by taking charge of our activities. The needy are now forced on our attention and we are reminded of our duty as citizens.

Now is the time to clean out our wardrobes of clothing not in use, there are people who can use these garments. These gifts can be made without any financial burden to ourselves, because they are already paid for. Charity done in this day and age is looked upon as both honorable and unoffensive, in that, all people are in need to some extent.
Therefore, both the giver and the receiver need not be humiliated because we are all in the same boat.

The time is here, when those of us that have a surplus of money or clothing, should trade or give to those who have not. There is no sacrifice in giving away the things we do not need, clothing, etc. So there ought to be no hesitancy on our part in matters of charity in times as these.

If any individuals or organizations, plan to be on the giving side, in this day of reciprocal duty now is the time to act. Next summer will be rather too late.
If you do not want to give thru the established organizations of charity, then give where you know it will do good, without a doubt, "Now is the time, here is the place!"

A Rightnow.

AND WHAT SAY YOU?

Thanksgiving is not far off and, as usual, there will be found some ungrateful people who are sure to ask, "What have we to be thankful for?" I, for one think we have much to be grateful for. In fact, so much that my gratitude is so great for the blessing vouchsafed to us that is can be best expressed in a prayer of thanksgiving. The prayer would run in this wise.

Our Father we thank thee, that in this time of distress, when poverty and destitution stalk the land, when jobs are few, and willing laborers many, when children are crying for bread, thou hast delivered us from the hand of the oppressor, the meddlesome cranks who would take away our liberties, and hast confounded our enemies, the preachers, and hast given us for our next president, Franklin D. Roosevelt, who has promised us beer.

We know that when thou taughtest us to pray, "Give us this day our daily bread," thou didst mean our daily beer. We thank thee especially our Father, that thou didst give us Al Smith to teach the cowardly W. C. T. U.
the protestant preachers, and all other "bigots" the error of their way. We thank thee that thou anointed Al did slap the W. C. T. U.
in the face, and—make them,
(a lot of them at least) like it, for did they not gird up their loins, march straight to the ballot box, and give Al's second choice for president enough votes to elect him?

And, dear Lord, if it isn't asking too much, use thy good influence on Franklin, to give our friend Al, a good secretarial position, for he wrote that platform, that good platform, which promises us good beer. We would not ask thee more, dear Lord, for this is all we wished for, if we get our beer it is enough. Do this we beseech thee, and thine will be the glory forever. Amen.

A friend of booze and Liberty.

HORSE SENSE

A farm family should be proud of its farmstead, the road leading by it, and the countryside surrounding it. There should be no unnecessary ugliness allowed, and the effect upon the landscape should be considered when trees are to be cut, fences built, and new buildings planned.

Mulch the strawberry patch during the latter half of November.

Fall pruning in the apple orchard is just as good as waiting until next spring.

Whereas possible, select sons of meritorious sires, out of dams sired by meritorious sires.

Soybeans should be dry before threshing. Damp soybeans spoil easily in storage.

For cool weather and short driving the car generator should be in good condition and charging at a good rate.

While a satisfactory ration must supply certain nutrients and vitamins, there are several sources of each of these ingredients.
The ingredients to be used in a ration should be determined largely by cost and availability.

Small cracks and knotholes in the back and side walls of the laying house may stir up a lot of trouble in the way of colds.

In general, prune immediately after blooming or during the dormant season.

A kitchen as bright
and cheerful as a SUNROOM

Wouldn't you like to have your kitchen so light and free from shadows that work seems to hurry itself along?
You can quickly have such a kitchen. Securing it is neither difficult nor expensive. Simply put a new 150-watt Edison Mazda Daylight lamp in the central ceiling fixture (which should be of the totally enclosing type) and a 60-watt Edison Mazda lamp in the shaded fixture above the sink and in the one above the range.*

*If you haven't these fixtures, ask us to tell you how little it will cost to have them installed.

Now even washing dishes will be easier and less tiresome. For now you can see clearly, quickly and easily.
What's that? You'd like to try it? Well, we're ready.

Local Briefs

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Hess, of Painesville, O., spent Friday afternoon and night with Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hull.

Mrs. Jos. Knisely and family are at the Fred Meiser home at Auburn for a month or so, leaving here last Saturday.

If you have friends away who would appreciate hearing from home, why not send The News to them regularly. We can do it for you.

The Lutheran Missionary Society spent Thursday at the parsonage in Spencer. The regular business session was held and then sewing was done for the Indian children in the Mission school in Montana.

Not to be outdone as a turnip raiser, Tom Brunson brought The News office a specimen which weighed 6 pounds, and has a circumference of 26 inches, thus topping off the one brought in by Sam Armstrong, four inches in girth, and four pounds by weight.

The season for reading is approaching and we wish to advise you not to subscribe through traveling salesmen, for the reason that so many times clubs are made up of cheap, worthless reading, and by calling at The News office, you make up your own combination.

During the past week, three complaints regarding shooting within the corporation has been made, and this of course is against the law. Let us say, please refrain from this before someone is hurt and action is commenced. There really is no safe place in town to shoot.

The tax levy for Jackson township remains unchanged, in spite of a tax hearing on the $1.70 rate proposed by trustee Weaver for 1933. Out of the three units protesting their rates, but only one was changed, Smithfield, when 4 cents was reduced and that from the special school fund. Keyser township remains $1.76.

After driving a number of our roads the past week, we have come to the conclusion that the force of men, who have charge of Roads Number 1 and 8 in DeKalb county, are to be congratulated upon their work in the recent snow. They are in the best shape of any of the state roads in this section. Our county roads are in excellent condition for traveling also.

The R. H. C. met at the home of Mrs. Pluma Hamilton Tuesday afternoon. Thirteen members and four guests answered roll call. The response was "What can we do as individuals to help the new administration." Two new members joined the club at this meeting, Troas Carpenter and Sally Scholes. The club adjourned to meet with Mrs. Hazel Washler November 25.

Hicksville's fire bell, which has served the town for nearly fifty years has in some manner become cracked and can no longer be used for fire alarms, owing to the fact that it is considered dangerous. The bell has been used for calling council meetings and fire department meetings. The village council are considering the purchase of an electric siren for fire alarm purposes.

Readers having court work to do for which newspaper legal advertising is necessary, will confer a favor on the St. Joe News by asking that the legal notices be inserted in this paper. You will be helping the home paper and meeting the law's requirements just as well as having the legal advertising done some place else, and then we can reach the people that will be most interested.

We had our special session of the legislature and we are going to have a new president, why then worry about our taxes. This attitude seems to prevail in DeKalb county, because at a meeting of the DeKalb County Taxpayers Association, Friday night, only a small attendance was had. Sam Cleland, of Fort Wayne, gave a talk and the meeting was presided over by Howard Grimm.

Filling stations erected in recent months within the right of way of state roads must be moved, according to an edict of the state highway commission. Likewise strings of lights across the highways placed there by certain commercial concerns and red flash lights are taboo. Cars should not be parked within the limits of the highway over night as it may prove a disastrous affair, all these rules are for the safety of the traveling public.

Mrs. Dasly Woodcox is suffering with neuritis.

Make those pennies go farther—school tablets at News Office.

Vernie Monroe and family spent Sunday at Marion, Ind.

Don't forget to phone your items to The News. Call No. 45.

Get a receipt book at News Office. With or without a stub. 45¢.

Emmett Epler is home from Chicago for a short time, where he has been working.

Some new post cards at News office to be used for sending sick friends. Ask to see them.

Floyd Reasoner, of Ft. Wayne, was a guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Reasoner, Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Quance and children, of Auburn, were Saturday guests in the J. C. Hull home.

Have your glasses fitted by Benj. F. Griest, Eyesight Specialist, Office in American Bldg., Hicksville, Ohio.

Mrs. Margaret Hull, of Helena, Ohio, arrived Monday afternoon for an extended visit in the J. C. Hull home.

Several families from the Lutheran Sunday School took potluck dinner and spent Sunday in the Ed Miser home at Garrett.

Envelopes, tablets for letter writing, ink and whatever you need for your correspondence can be purchased at News office. See our line.

A son, Paul Gene, was born to Mr. and Mrs. George Tustison, on Friday. Mrs. Herbert Currie, of Garrett, is here taking care of her sister.

Willis Cox and family, Mr. and Mrs. O. K. Shull and daughter, Virginia and Miss Priscilla Borthwick, were shoppers in Fort Wayne Saturday.

S. H. Stage, of Ligonier, was a guest of L. B. Crothers from Monday until Friday. The gentlemen are old time friends and enjoy an occasional visit.

Hollis Dille and family are new residents of St. Joe, moving in Monday to live with Mrs. Mary Sechler for the winter, and to look after each of their mothers.

Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Tully and Mrs. Iva Tyler, of Ligonier, were over the weekend guests in the Wm. Randall home. Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Pincheon, of Fremont, Ind., were Sunday guests.

When you move or have any change in your address, please notify this paper by letter or card, as the government now charges for this service, if you neglect to take care of it.

Among the real estate transfers is found one of John P. Hoff to St. Joe Valley Bank, lot 14, Leighty add., $180.16. This is the former Geo. Bleeks property near the grist mill.

Mrs. George Walter, who underwent an operation at the Souders hospital at Auburn, is reported as getting along fine and she is expected to be able to return home by Saturday.

Your Kodak films can be purchased at News office and you can also leave your order for prints here. Our customers are pleased and a trial will convince you. An enlargement free on first order.

Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Andreas and daughter, Mrs. Neva Hursh were Saturday afternoon and Sunday guests in the Henry Miser home, near Bremen, Ind. Clayton Wyatt and wife of Fort Wayne accompanied them and visited his sister in South Bend.

It is reported now that there are five active candidates for the postmastership here to succeed Meade Baker, whose term will expire within the next year. To the victor belongs the spoil, and there will be many who will think they are entitled to the appointment.

A marriage license was issued last week to Clayton Baker, 21, farmer of Wilmington township, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Baker, and June Ridgway, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Derwood Ridgway of this city. Miss June is a graduate of 1931, and is a very charming young lady and we see no reason why she should not make a splendid farmer's wife. We extend congratulations.

Funeral services for the late Jefferson W. Jackson, of Grant township, father of Ward Jackson, former county treasurer, were held on Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock from the late home with H. C. Willis, editor of the Waterloo Press and Eugene Hubbard of Waterloo, officiating. Burial was made in the cemetery at Waterloo. The deceased was 80 years, 10 months and 11 days old. He was born January 31, 1853, on a farm in Wilmington township.

TAX AMENDMENT CARRIED IN 71 COUNTIES

The referendum on the income tax amendment to the state constitution November 8 failed. It was favored by a majority of the citizens who considered the proposal but a majority of all the citizens voting in the state did not endorse it, which is a requirement of our state constitution. Seventy-one of the 92 counties in the state gave constitutional majorities to the proposal, all usually considered as strictly rural sections.

The estate Farm Bureau organization was very active on the referendum, having advocated income tax measures in various sessions of the legislature during recent years as a means of securing government revenue to replace or reduce levies on farm and other property. To carry, it was necessary that the amendment receive a total favorable vote of 787,261. The "yes" vote on the amendment totaled 695,791 falling by 91,470. The "no" vote on the proposal totaled 208,276.

EVERY WOMAN HAS HER OWN CONCEPTION

What constitutes an ideal husband?

The women of the Northwood Christian Church, who have submitted to their pastor, the Rev. R. Melvin Thompson, essays portraying their views on this subject, say: "The ideal husband is cheerful; he remembers to mail letters and carry out the ashes; he is on time for his meals and doesn't forget anniversaries." "A week before, the men of the church wrote 'on an ideal wife.'"

In retaliation, several of the women wrote at length on the attributes of an ideal husband. All agreed he must be a Christian. One wrote that "no man could qualify as an ideal husband if he waited until the dinner was soggy," before he showed up for a meal. Quite a revelation, this. We are reminded of the lines of the Scotch poet, Burns, who was led, in one of his poems, to exclaim: "Oh wad some power the giftie gie us, to see our sells as ither see us 'tweed from mony a blunder free us, and foolish notion." But to our notion, the best definition of an ideal wife is that given in the Bible, in which is described one "who is as a tree early in the morning and putteth her hand to the distaff," etc., etc., those, and other qualifications, which memory does not at this moment recall, and which causes the bard to exclaim: "For her price is above rubies."

These humble duties are, to a large extent, not required in an age of canned goods, canned music and can openers. Just at this point, we recall an incident of a lady in a neighboring town, which shall be nameless. This lady was chatting with the genial proprietor of the grocery; the factory whistle blew; where upon the lady exclaimed "Oh my God! there goes the whistle and dinner is not ready." She thereupon ordered a few canned goods and pickles, and such things as required no preparation, and, we presume, presto, hubby sat down to a sumptuous meal. Was she an ideal wife—or, just modern?

HARLAN

Union Thanksgiving services will be held in the Lutheran Church Wednesday evening. Rev. A. K. Mumma will give the address.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Lutheran Church met recently for a social evening with Mary Louise Emmet. Progressive games were played and at a late hour delicious refreshments were served. Those who enjoyed the evening were Mrs. A. K. Mumma, David Mumma, Mildred, Bernice and Chauncey Lake, Marjorie and Robert Kurts, Rosa Fillman, Bernice Thimlar, Lewis King, Mildred and Howard Amstutz, Agnes Hass, Dorothy Fuelling, Fern and Richard Yerks, Robert Perkins, Olive Murphy, Lloyd Pfierman and Dorothy Gerig.

GIVING THANKS IN DARK DAYS OF REVOLUTION

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S Thanksgiving day proclamation at Valley Forge took great pains to put before the soldiers "the tremendous reason for this most special acknowledgment of the divine goodness."

Of today, looking back with a full knowledge of the great trials and sufferings placed upon the Continental army in that winter of misery at Valley Forge, may perhaps wonder at the fact that this Thanksgiving day originated with the Pilgrims, who set aside a day for thanksgiving at Plymouth immediately after their first harvest, in 1621. The Massachusetts Bay colony first observed such a day in 1630 and frequently thereafter until 1680, when it became an annual festival in that colony. Connecticut also had a similar festival annually from 1647 onward. Usually these days for thanksgiving followed the harvest, and were set aside primarily to give thanks to the Lord for the blessings he had bestowed upon the Colonists. During the Revolution, the Continental congress appointed one or more days for thanksgiving each year, except in 1777, when not even a congressman could find any blessings to point out to his constituents as reason for rejoicing. These Revolutionary Thanksgivings days usually were founded upon some military success and fortune smiled wanly indeed, upon the Continental army in 1777—the winter of despair at Valley Forge.

Valley Forge Observation. Washington's Thanksgiving day proclamation at Valley Forge came after the snows and the hunger and the sufferings of that terrible winter of 1777-78 had departed and spring smiled again upon the fertile valleys of Pennsylvania. The occasion was the entrance of France into the war as an ally of the Colonies. The Valley Forge Thanksgiving May, 1778, was a military celebration, with the chaplain of brigade directed "to offer up thanks and deliver a discourse suitable to the occasion." Then there was cannon fire and music, and cries of "Long Live the King of France!" "Long Live the Friendly European Powers!" and finally a general running race and the hymn, "The American States!"

Celebrations of Peace. Another special Thanksgiving day was ordered by General Washington at Newburgh on the Hudson, April 19, 1783, eight years to the day from the shot fired at Lexington. Ultimate peace had been assured ever since the surrender of Cornwallis, but the question had become alarmingly acute ever since: How was it possible to keep even a remnant of the army alive to receive the treaty of peace? Six months more of this starvation, this utter discouragement as to the use of it all—the harassed general dared not think of what his poor boys might be driven to do to end it all.

The joy with which the information was at last received from Sir Guy Carleton that a cessation of hostilities was announced can scarcely be imagined. Immediately, the commander in chief issued his proclamation and directed that a public religious service and thanksgiving should take place on the same evening, April 19. This was probably the happiest Thanksgiving America has ever experienced, writes Estelle Harris in the Bicentennial News, published by the Alexandria Va., Gazette in co-operation with the United States commission for the celebration of the two-hundredth anniversary of Washington's birth. A country gained glory and honor, and home around the bend of the road. December 11, 1783, the gloriously solemn day appointed by congress, Dr. John Rogers preached his famous sermon, announcing: "We have taken our place among the nations and empires of the earth."

Presidential Proclamation. The first Presidential Thanksgiving proclamation named November 26, 1789. As far as the people were concerned, they could join in with any and all services, for they felt the nation was saved again now that the great Washington was at the helm. As for Father George himself, he was entirely too busy to write much in that diary of his, that is such a precious legacy to his people. Here is all he says: "November 26. Being the day appointed for a Thanksgiving I went to St. Paul's chapel, though it was most inclement and stormy—but few people at church." The signing of the confederation articles was the especial occasion.

Quelling the insurrection in Pennsylvania was again a deliverance from danger, and cause for great rejoicing on the part of all the people, and a proclamation was made, appointing a day of thanksgiving, for the general welfare and stable condition of the Union. This was issued from Independence hall, and February 19, 1795 was thus set apart, on which day the nation was "with devout reverence and affectionate gratitude, to return thanks for its national blessings and improve their continuance." As with all of George Washington's papers, this proclamation abounds in patriotism and counsel of the highest order, both as worthy of emulation today as yesterday.

Much Reason for Thanks. In looking back to these special Thanksgiving days of early American history, no patriotic heart can help feeling the beauty and appropriateness of these gatherings. Also, the part they played in keeping the little nation as one ideal family, until it could walk alone, the American fathers holding before it the truth on which the foundation rests, liberty, equality, integrity. For whatever else has or has not happened, the foundation of this nation still rests securely and there is much to be thankful for on Thanksgiving day. The stars have not faded in their course and freedom still reigns. The good earth has blossomed and fruited for her overlord, man, as in 1607 and 1776, and now that autumn has marked the finish of her harvest for this year, old earth in drawing back her cap, her chlorophyll and her chemicals into her storeroom, to be covered with snowy blankets instead of green grass—conserving and renewing all her power, making ready for next summer's spread of glory.

Spiritual Significance. The Thanksgiving dinner may be as it often has been, hallowed, and take on a sacramental character. It is not more than a week past it is wholly out of keeping with the true spirit of the day, which is one of profound spiritual significance, emphasizing as it does the relation between God and man. It is possible to spiritualize the most commonplace, and even material things, as one meal in "the upper room" was spiritualized twenty centuries ago, and has survived both as a sacrifice and a thanksgiving.

Chapel Services were conducted on Tuesday morning by Rev. H. Brown of the local M. E. Church.

Due to heavy snow fall blocking the roads, school was dismissed on Thursday and Friday of last week. Several children were absent on Wednesday because the busses could not make their full routes.

With the class of next week's work, three months of the school term will have been completed.

The penny soup line on Tuesdays and Thursdays continues to increase. Nothing quite so good as good hot soup on a chilly day.

The Freshmen Party

The Freshmen class held their party on Saturday night at the home of the class president, Alice Baker. Everyone had a good time in spite of the bad roads and difficult times in getting there.

Basket Ball practice was held up for a time or two due to bad weather.

Due to the absence of some of our reporters, class and general school news is late in coming in. Yours for better weather.

Spencerville-Waterloo Game at Waterloo

Spencerville 26; Waterloo 35

Waterloo, Nov. 18.—The boys played a good game outside of a little roughness. The Spencerville boys took the lead for the first three minutes. But the floor was strange to them and they could not get together. At the first quarter Waterloo was leading 10-4, at the half they were leading 22-8, and then at the third quarter still leading 22-17.

The high point man for Spencerville was M. Furnish, who played forward. Camp was high point man for Waterloo.

DEMOCRATS ATTEND OX ROAST AT HARLAN

About 2,000 Democrats attended the Roosevelt frolic given last Thursday night at Harlan by Springfield and adjoining townships.

The event celebrated the fact that Springfield township went Democratic for president for the first time in its history. It was said.

Aaron Reichelderfer, veteran Democratic leader, provided the ox for the ox roast which preceded the speaking program. The committee in charge of arrangements was composed of Carl Oetting, Hugo Oetting, Dr. J. C. Emmes, Jacob Amstutz and Henschel A. Woods. Carl Oetting called the gathering to order and presented Jacob Amstutz who presided. Mr. Reichelderfer made an address of welcome. The Democratic county officials-elect were presented.

The speakers included Samuel C. Cleland, county chairman; Fay W. Leas, Henry Hipskind, Samuel D. Jackson and Alexander M. Campbell.

Music was furnished by the Harlan high school orchestra, under the direction of Don Fryback and by the Shadows. The speaking was held in the Harlan high school gymnasium.

Athletic Association Organized

The Athletic Association has been completely organized now and has been handling the athletic activities. About seventy pupils from the Junior and Senior High have paid the twenty-five cents dues and become members. All members are admitted to the games at a reduced rate.

The president of the Association is Robert Wiers, the vice president, Keith Daily, the secretary, Eugene Freeburn, and the treasurer, Walter Gee. A council made up of two members from each class is the rule and regulation of the association. The council members are Helen Washler, Charles Thornton, Eloise Draggoo, Merlin Simanton, Jean Myers, James Reddy, Mary Jane Curie and James Stewart.

Enid Curie and Beatrice Storer were elected yell leaders at a recent pep session. and Reign Schondelmayer and Robert Mussler are assistants.

The maypole has been erected for the smaller children since the merry-go-round has broken down due to old age and hard usage.

The county superintendent, Carl F. Stallman, visited the St. Joe School last Thursday.

The Seniors took their annual trip to Rice's Studio last week. We hope they all "looked pleasant."

The school house was practically deserted the first morning after the heavy snow. One bus and one teacher were unable to get to school at all. The absences were quite unavoidable, but according to the new state law they must be counted. That brings the percent of attendance down considerably.

Another six weeks has rolled around, and after the tests this week everyone can go home for a little vacation. There will be no school on Thursday or Friday of this week.

Hamilton Takes Double Victory

The St. Joe girls lost their first game of the season last Friday night 16-27. They admit that their opponents outplayed them but it has only made them more determined to fight all the harder the next time. Their next game is with Auburn and they intend to make it no easy game for Auburn.

The boys game was close during the first half ending 15-16, but Hamilton came back strong the second half and won 28-48.

Teacher: How do they get logs out of the Mexican swamps? Coral: They haul them out on snow sleds.

The high school lost its post graduate student last week when June Ridgway decided she would prefer to be a house wife rather than a school girl.

American Spirit Shown in Washington's Order

In the darkest hour of the American Revolution, at Valley Forge, Gen. George Washington made December 17, 1777, Thanksgiving day by general order. That spirit eventually broke the American power of the British crown. In the Presidency, Washington proclaimed the celebration, though his example was followed only occasionally by other Presidents and the states had no uniform rule of observance. It was a growth. Notable and significant of the meaning is the fact that in 1863, with the nation yet unguilted in the civil war, exhausted, bankrupt, President Lincoln issued the Thanksgiving proclamation which since has been repeated year after year by succeeding Presidents. The South long repulsed the feast as a Puritanical, even, therefore, a Satanic invention; yet for half a century the South, too, has known the spirit and has joined to make the day one of national participation.

For all the hands that wrought for us,
For all the minds that thought for us,
For all the men who looked ahead
And saw us living in their stead;
For kindly hands that sow for us
And shining fields that grow for us,
For all the thoughtfulness of toil
And all the benisons of soil,
We thank Thee, God—and may we live
To dream and hope, to work and give,
With eyes beyond and hearts to bless
A world of so much loveliness.

Ruhle Jackson and son, Palmer, and Mr. G. F. Markle and sons, Maurice and John, attended the funeral of Frank Moore held at Poe Friday afternoon. Burial took place in the Harlan cemetery.

A large crowd attended the services held at the local Mennonite Church Sunday evening when Rev. Eli Oyer, of Woodburn, who recently made a trip through White and DeKalb Counties in Tennessee with Rev. E. M. Slagle of Archbold, O., related some of their experiences on this journey.

Mr. and Mrs. Abner F. Gerig and son had as their dinner guests Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Stuckey and daughter, Dorothy, of Woodburn, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Snyder and son, Junior, of near Auburn, Mrs. Emma Grabbill and sons, Max and Paul, and the Messrs. Furman Smith, Robert Snyder and Elmer Smith.

Hebrew Money

The monetary system of the Hebrews was based upon the Babylonian system of weights. The ratio of the value of gold to silver was 1:13.13 and prevailed over all western Asia.

WHAT MOTHER REALLY WANTS

EVERY WOMAN WOULD LIKE A RANGE LIKE THIS!

Give Mother what she really wants—a new General Electric Hotpoint Range. Mother knows that Hotpoint is fast, far more economical, as clean as electric light—thanks to Calrod, General Electric's fast, new heating coil in the Hotpoint range. The big, insulated Hotpoint oven cooks meats in a still, moist, flameless heat with practically no shrinkage. That saves money—enough to pay for the Hotpoint over a period of time. Hotpoint does not use blacken pots and pans nor soil kitchen walls—a big saving in money and work. Automatic timing and temperature control make it possible to cook with scientific accuracy—preventing waste of food, curbing or time. These features also permit cooking of foods without constant watchful waiting. There are scores of reasons why G-E Hotpoint is the range every woman would like to have. Come in today and let us show you how practical this gift really is.

SPECIAL PROGRAM FOR NEXT P. T. A.

The regular meeting of the P. T. A. will be held at 7:30 P. M. on Tuesday, December 6. Earl William Kinsey will entertain with instrumental music and Joe Woodcox with two vocal selections: "All Praise to Thee Eternal Lord" and "O, Great and Mighty Wonder."

Along lines of practical helpfulness to teachers and parents will be an address by Dr. Louis N. Rocca, who for many years was a favorite and popular speaker in Fort Wayne circles. Dr. Rocca is now associated with the New York Life Insurance Company of South Bend.

Business of importance will be considered and your interest and attendance is urged. The results of the membership drive will be given and the class securing the highest number of paid memberships will be named for the award. Have you joined yet? The dues are twenty-five cents for husband and wife or the same rate for but one.

NEWVILLE LADY IS GIVEN DIVORCE

A judgment for a divorce, $1,700 alimony and $125 attorney's fee has been entered in the DeKalb circuit court in favor of Emily A. Kline of Newville township, against Daniel F. Kline. The couple were married thirty years ago and have grown children. Mrs. Kline in testifying November 22 told Judge Endicott that her husband was cruel to her and the children and that they quarreled over money. They divided evenly a claim of $14,000 against a closed Hicksville bank before the divorce case was started.

Attorney W. D. Stump represents Mrs. Kline and Atkinson & Husselman are counsel for the defendant.

CLOTHING NEEDED

Anyone who has any kind of clothing or footwear which they wish to give to families that need them may leave them at the Willard Hurns Store or The News office, and it will be distributed immediately.

We have several requests for shoes for school children of many sizes. Used and outgrown ones will do.

O. K. SHULL, Trustee.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Woodcox and son, returned home Monday evening from a week's visit with their children in Detroit, Mich.

Miss Frances Smith spoke at Indianapolis Friday night at the P. T. A. Miss Smith enjoyed the trip and the welcome she received.

Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Darwood Ridgway were Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Hollabaugh and baby, of Spencerville and Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Baker of north of St. Joe.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Cox and son, Dean, were entertained to dinner on Thanksgiving Day at the Simon Mutchler home near Brighton.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hull, Mrs. Margaret Hull and F. B. Loighty and wife, were among the Thanksgiving Day guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Quance at Auburn.

Aged Spencerville Citizens Pass Away Last Week.

AUGUSTUS CUPP

The passing of Mr. Cupp, as a citizen of Spencerville, marks the end of one of the oldest citizens of this community. His life, from his early married life until his death, was spent entirely in this locality. His life's ambition, while lived in a quiet, unassuming manner, was somewhat diversified, vocationally. He was a farmer, a town dweller, a manager of other peoples farms, a horticulturist, and later a liver of a quiet retired life.

He was the care taker of the public school building during his prime years and was liked by the student body. He was a loyal citizen to his home town, contributing to all worthy activities. He became an ardent lover of athletics—the home team was always his choice. He was fearless in his convictions, leaving an impression of having had a mind of his own.

His political faith was Democratic, which possessed him with a natural abhorrence of autocratic and oppressive governmental measures, opposing the onward march of the common man. His care of domesticated animals and pets conveyed to his neighbors, the fact that he was kind to animal life. He was a good horseman.

His health was good until later years. He met with an accident in the Steward saw mill at the middle period of life, which slowed up his vitality to some extent, but his health generally was good.

"Gust" as he was familiarly known, will be missed from this community.

Augustus Cupp was born in Massillon, Ohio, July 3, 1852, one of a family of eight. He moved to Spencerville when he was 14 years of age, where he has resided since then. He was married to Annie Clemmer January 14, 1888, at Spencerville. One child was born to this union, T. E. Cupp. Mrs. Cupp passed away in 1918. He was married to Norah T. Baker in 1919. She preceded him in death by three years.

Mr. Cupp passed away Friday morning at his home in Spencerville.

He was a member of the local M. E. Church and has been an active member of the K. of P. Lodge to the time of his last illness.

He leaves five step daughters and two step sons.

Funeral services were held on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the M. E. Church, Rev. Howard Brown, officiating. Interment was made in White City cemetery.

MARIA HOBAUGH

The grim reaper has called this community's oldest citizen away to the great beyond. Her 88 years were spent largely in Spencerville in a cozy cottage home, in what the Spencerville citizenry called "Upper Canada."

She was a lover of the simple tranquil life of the home, her clay pipe and tobacco contributing much to that comfort, a custom among many women of her yesterday. Her leisure hours were taken up by the reading of books, many books. The reading matter of the neighbors was always at her disposal. She admired and took an active interest in young people, in and out of her own home, and not until ill health defeated this interest, did she cease her interest in humanity.

She cared for only the necessities of life, those necessities that she felt were essential to the common, common sense valuations of life. Her home life was cheered by her pet dog and parrot, and they always fared well on their regular meals of fish and crackers.

The latter part of her life was spent living alone and under the care of her son William, who came home from Oregon to care for her during the later years of her life. The community regrets its loss.

Maria Rummel was born July 16, 1844, at Beverly, Randolph County, Virginia. She was married to John Hobough in 1860.

There were three children born to this union two of whom died in infancy and William, who survives his mother. In 1870 they moved to DeKalb County, Indiana, where they lived since. Mr. Hobough preceded his wife in death eight years.

Mrs. Hobough passed away Thursday morning at the age of 88 years, 4 months and 8 days. Her death resulting from burns accidentally received in her home. Surviving is her one child, William, four grandchildren, eleven great grandchildren and hosts of relatives and friends. Mrs. Hobough has been a faithful worker in the Methodist Church as long as she was able, and her deeds of kindness have made her life a blessing to many who knew her.

"Servant of God, Well done, The glorious warfare is past. The battles fought, the race is won and thou art crowned at last."

The funeral was held from the M. E. Church, Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock with Rev. Howard Brown officiating. Burial was made in White City Cemetery.

PROPERTY IS GIVEN TO WIDOW'S SON

By the terms of the will of the late Maria Hobough, the aged Spencerville woman who was burned to death, the estate goes to a son, John, of Spencerville, excepting $100 to Lela Umbenhour and an organ to Anna Erick, Wm. G. Erick, of Spencerville, was nominated in the will for executor and he qualified by filing $1,200 bond in the DeKalb circuit court, with Wm. B. Erick as surety. The estate consists of $600 in personal property and $400 in real estate. The will was executed July 23, 1925, with Wm. B. Erick and Wm. M. Allen as witnesses. Elsewhere in this paper will be found the notice of Mr. Erick's appointment.

School supplies of every kind will be found at News office.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Staman, Vernie Monroe and family, Ralph Sechler and family, Rev. and Mrs. A. H. Fabianske, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bowen and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Myers of Fort Wayne were Thanksgiving guests in the home of Mrs. Mary Sechler.

Mr. and Mrs. Iona Woodcox and family, along with fifteen other friends, enjoyed Thanksgiving in the Daniel Bodiker home, south of Butler.

Merritt Sechler entertained to Sunday dinner Mrs. Cora Lode-wick and Ralph Roswell of New Mexico, Mrs. Alice Lewis and the Mavis family of Auburn, Mrs. Jennie Sechler and Mrs. Hattie Widney of this place.

Quite a number of the local Legion boys attended the meeting at Auburn Monday evening. Plans for their annual membership drive were launched, a big feed, and an address by J. L. Farley, congressman elect, giving his stand on the bonus question, featured the evening's program. John Crothers, Marwin Place, Harvey Hull, and Chas. Bassett, were among those from this section in attendance.

THE SEASON OF DANGERS

The proverbial thin air is not the only thing upon which should fall the warnings which annually come at this time of the year from watchful family physicians and public health officers. It would pay all to heed them and heed them well.

During the changeable days of autumn and winter people should be careful in their habits. Influenza in epidemic form can make its appearance with startling suddenness under the proper combination of atmospheric conditions and human carelessness. And the common cold thrives on the same sort of combination.

Certain rules are almost essential in fall and winter if one is to escape these ills which are always annoying and often serious. These simple rules are dress sensibly, eat carefully, sleep regularly and make sure body poisons are being thrown off properly. Where body resistance is strong weather changes are not to be feared.

No other three human maladies cause as much discomfort and economic loss as influenza, grippe and colds. Through them millions of production days are lost between November 1 and June 1, virtually every employed man and woman losing at least one day's work a year because of one or the other of them.

Could medical science exterminate the germs responsible for these human disorders, it would thereby bestow upon mankind the greatest of all benefactions. But while waiting for this long-hoped-for benefaction the public should make the fullest use of known methods of prevention.

GIFTS

"The gift derives its value from the rank of the giver," someone wrote long ago—a falsehood. "In giving," another old pronouncement goes, "a man receives more than he gives and the more in proportion to the value of the thing given;" and that, while true so far as it repeats the more ancient saying that 'tis more blessed to give than to receive, in its remainder, transparently unworthy. For was there not the widow who cast into the treasury of the temple at Jerusalem more than all they that were casting into the treasury a farthing—all her living? By the teaching accounted Divine, the teaching commemorated and acclaimed on Christmas Day, hers was the greatest gift of all.

Ralph Waldo Emerson wrote: "The gift, to be sure, must be the flowing of the giver unto me, correspondent to my flowing unto him." That is said to reach the heights of clean thinking. "For the gift without the giver is bare."

Quite obviously, if profit there may also be loss of mind, a bit too sharp pursue thought upon gifts and giving too eagerly. The ancient error of looking the gift-horse in the mouth is one pitfall. Doubting gift-givers did that to see how old the horses were and why the givers were giving them away. All the analyses of giving demand, as a duty, discreet restraint.

Away with the thought, too, that Christmas giving is a game of trading blind. Gifts and giving have been a stimulant of thought among the poets and the thinkers since the beginnings of literature. A modern writer who appropriates philosophy as his particular dish declares that a death in the family is a "provocation to philosophy." Little less than that is a gift, whether from a member of the family or from someone else.

Adam Grant's Daughter

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

OLD Adam Grant, editor and proprietor of one of the great western newspapers, never wanted it said of him that he gave preference to any member of his own family—in the matter of positions on his staff.

That was why his lovely daughter, Eve, found herself established in a small flat in New York, surrounded by and observing the contents of a hundred and one magazines. Laboriously and very intelligently she was studying the world of fiction from the magazine standpoint.

"When you've mastered the analytical sense and can express it in words that convey your meaning to the readers of my paper—then and then only can you have a position on my 'staff'." Old Adam had told Eve. "If you stay at home here among your friends you won't get anywhere. Hop-off to New York for a year and pick that pretty head of yours with first-hand knowledge."

Aunt Clem, her mother's sister, had come along with her to see that she ate three square meals a day.

It was Aunt Clem who, bored at times into reading the personals in the papers, came across the advertisement that gave her an idea.

It read "Old magazines wanted by writer." And there was a name attached which made Aunt Clem smile secretly.

Aunt Clem sighed in relief. The small flat was becoming like a storage room for magazines.

She consequently answered the advertisement and left a huge bundle of magazines in the called for.

Not by the proverbial candle, but beside a well-lighted table, young Avery Weldon carried on his as yet embryonic authorship. But he was working desperately hard to succeed and was reading fiction in the magazines voraciously in order to get a drift with the market.

That was how the huge pile of old magazines happened to be on the floor beside him. He couldn't quite afford to buy all the new ones and his advertisement had brought him many.

"By jove! This is funny!" Beside the title of the stories were fine marginal notes of criticism, couched in terse but most expressive language.

"Medium. Not bad. Piffle. No point. Wishy-washy. Very good. Why was it given space? Doesn't know men. Needs to study women."

Avery swiftly picked up the publications that had printed his own work and with a somewhat shrinking heart opened the paper. Yes, there beside his own story which he had in a moment of stupidity called "A Rose of the Desert" he saw the words, "Author in the making but sadly lacking the human touch."

Avery puffed a bit furiously at his pipe. The hall was lit straight on the head. Avery knew that.

And because a real author must not be strictly conventional or too awfully bound by laws of society, Avery got up, put on his hat and stroled toward the apartment building from whence his magazines had arrived.

The elevator took him up to the fifth floor and there he found him. And in another few moments he was standing at an opened door. Aunt Clem herself was out, but Eve answered his ring.

Avery didn't know what to say now that he was there and with Eve's calm eyes gazing at him he felt that he made rather a sorry story of the incident of buying the old magazines. But Eve was very nice about it and invited him in.

"I didn't even know my aunt had cleared them out," she said, as he followed her into a magazine-strewn room.

"I wanted so desperately to chat with the critic who had jotted those remarks down that I chanced coming here," he said, boyishly. "My dad has given me a year to make good in story writing, bless him." He went on, seeing the kindling interest in Eve's eyes, "and I believe if you'd be so good as to help me, with criticism, I could win out."

"I know you could," was Eve's unexpected answer. "I see it somewhere in the deep places of your stories—I would love to help you."

She told him then about her own dad and who he was and all about home and Avery laughed. Then he pulled a framed letter from his pockets—a letter written some six months before, and handed it to her.

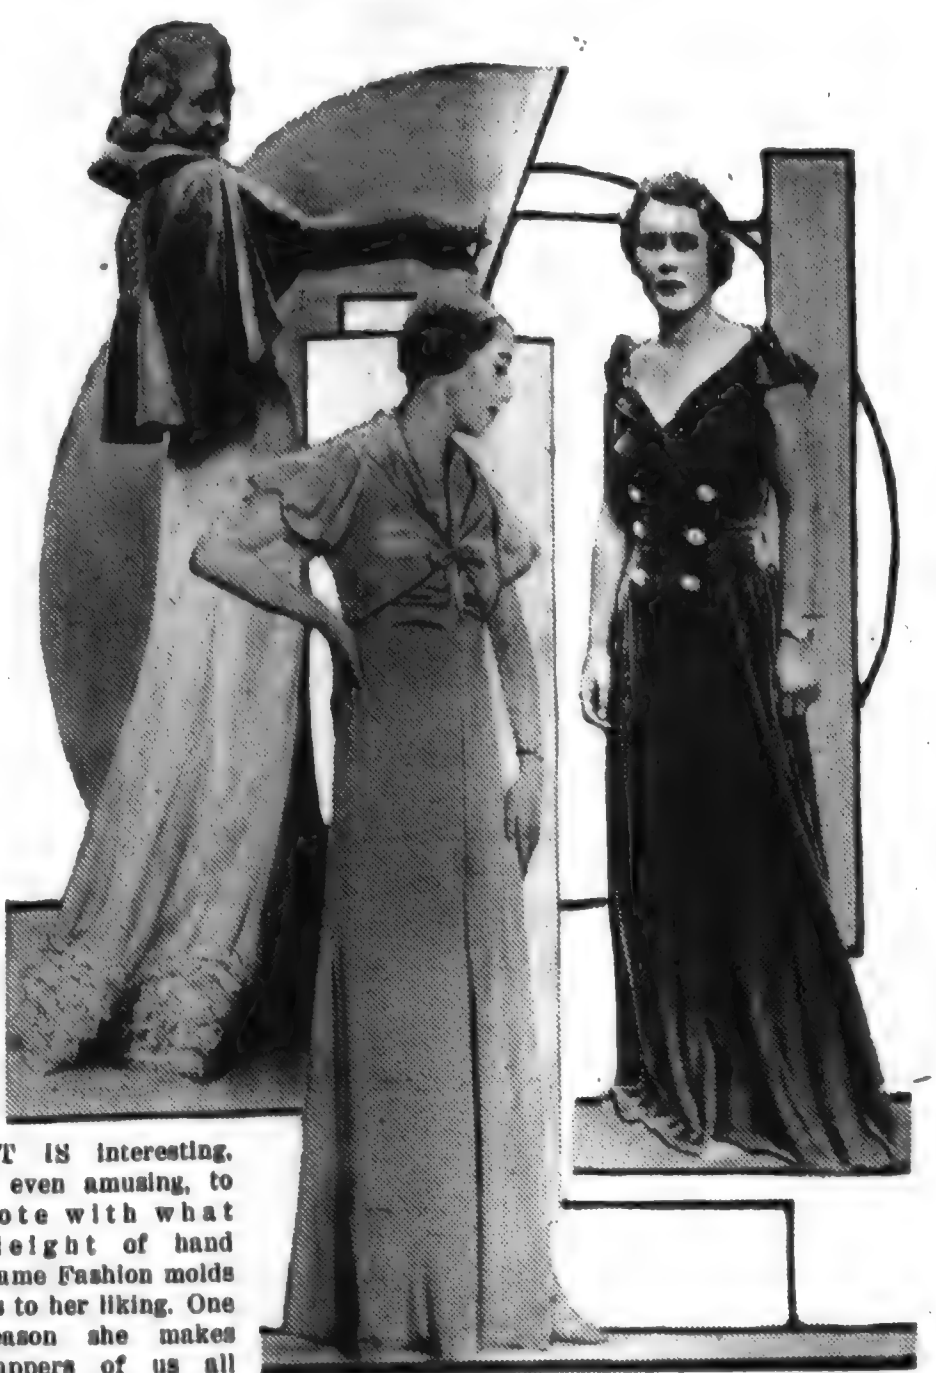

"Avery, my boy," it ran, "while you're messing about with your writing, just take time to look up Old Adam Grant's daughter. She's gone to New York to make good, too. Fine girl, too, from what her dad says, but then, perhaps I say the same to Grant about my boy." Eve read no further until she had cast accusing eyes at Avery.

"I like that! Six whole months and you've never even taken the trouble—" "And darn glad I am, too," said Avery. "If I knew you all this time, I doubt if single story would have left the typewriter—I should have been bumped into a dream so glorious I—oh, I say, Eve, when do we go back home—I'm longing for the time when I can get down to hard work and make use of all this study to do the big work that only you can help me with."

Aunt Clem came in and smiled—she knew a thing or two.

New Silhouettes in Style Parade

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IT IS interesting, even amusing, to note with what slight of hand Dame Fashion molds us to her liking. One season she makes sappers of us all with skirts amazingly brief, waistlines a negative quantity, sleeves conspicuous by their absence, the picture topped with a "boyish bob" the very essence of youth, and then—the mood of this capricious creature changes. Behold! The fair sex in the style parade, particularly when it comes to formal dress for winter 1932, transformed into beings of imposing dignity, tall, stately, "real ladies," if you please.

So it is, in the season as now is, we find ourselves bowing to the mandates of fickle fashion who insists that the skirts of our evening gowns be lengthened even unto touching the floor, that our shoulders be broadened through various devices even at the risk of appearing top-heavy, and that waistlines become normal with bust-line raised (the new corsets and foundation garments are designed to do just that). Thus the transformation goes on until due to the long skirts and high waists we find our selves looking as if inches and inches had been added to our stature.

When we come to analyze the situation, we sense that many of our current fashions are directly traceable to various period influences. We are, for instance, frequently reminded of the quaint Victorian age, likewise the early 90's, which indulged in all sorts of feminine fads and fancies.

The quaint little shoulder capes of the long ago are the inspiration for the prettily shirred wrap which the lady to the left in the picture is wearing. As adorably feminine as in the 1890's is this cunning cape which happens in this instance to be styled of ruby red velvet. The skirt goes floor-length, widening at the hemline and taking on rows of wee ruffles just as skirts used to do in the long, long ago.

However, the above described is only one phase of the question, for fashion is making a versatile play upon "lines" gathered from many a past era. The gown centered in this group is typical of this movement toward what is known as the directorio period throughout the story of fashions as told in days of yore. It is of green crepe. Its little hole-looklike jacket is tied so as to accent the new high bustline which so many designers are featuring in their newest creations.

Then again fashion's followers are called upon to consider the silhouette as it appears on the present-day style program from an entirely different viewpoint. We refer to the new, very new, long-waisted effects which go way back to medieval times for their inspiration. More than one noted designer is working along these lines, with the result that some of the most successful gowns brought out this season have long body-fitting waists which join their skirts low on the hips. The handsome velvet hostess gown pictured to the right suggests this type, although in a purely modernized way.

ACCESSORIES ARE HIGHLY IMPORTANT

"There is just one rule for fashion this year and that is 'buy fewer things, but the best quality your money can buy.'"

Asked for the season's ten commandments by which the well-dressed woman must abide, Miss Helen Cornelius, associate editor of Harper's Bazar, made it emphatic that the above, single commandment held for every woman, be her income what it may.

According to Miss Cornelius, this year of grace will see the buying tendency one of getting the best for your money—quality will be spelt in capitals.

Sending a message to the young women whose salaries are small, the stylist begs that one heed the importance and elasticity of accessories. She suggests that the wardrobe fund be well-nigh exhausted in a few tailored gowns and the surplus be invested in new all-important collar and cuff ensembles.

Nap Fabrics Are Seen Everywhere This Year
Velvet is everywhere this year. Paris is going in heavily for all sorts of nap fabrics.

There are crepe velvets of varied thicknesses—some soft and pliable as chiffon, some heavy and thick as woolsens. There are fur velvets—those which look like ermine, like caracul, like breitchewants.

There are soft silk velvets made into gowns whose skirts fall in soft voluminous folds, and heavy cotton-back velvet dresses with full flaring skirts whose hems cover spaces each a yard and a half in diameter.

Velvet is used only for dresses and coats, for evening wraps and gowns, but for daytime suits, for pajamas, for lounging robes and negligees, for cocktail suits, for gloves and shoes, for hats—in fact, for practically everything modern women wear.

Velvet Picture Hat
The wide brimmed picture hat of black velvet is the best thing that has come along for many a day, if you are the type to wear any big hat at all.

Field Velvets

Weather to Order, Plan of Russian Scientists

The Russians have decided to make their own weather. So optimistic are they that an artificial rain institute has been started at Moscow, and others are to follow. Russia is largely dependent upon the crops grown on the farms, and scientists state that presently they will be able to plant out a regular scheme of fine weather and of rain occurring at just the right times. Experiments made by means of planes and powerful ground transmitting stations have shown that much can be done in the way of bringing down rain by means of powerful high-tension currents. It has also been possible to break up hailstorms by bombarding them with great bell-mouthed cannon firing blank charges. When the approach of a hailstorm is signaled by telephone the gunners are called to their stations and every effort is made to cause the hail to fall in districts where it will do the least damage. The vibrations set up by the bell-mouthed cannon frequently bring down the hail and prevent it from traveling to places where it might do damage.

What Can You Do For The Pains Of Rheumatism?

Pain Ended In Few Minutes, This Way

It has now been discovered by thousands of rheumatic sufferers that the pains of that distressing disorder can be eased in as little as a few minutes... relief and comfort in almost as little time as it takes to tell!

Doctors advise two tablets of Bayer Aspirin taken with a full glass of water. Then rest for a few minutes... and that is all. Pain is eased quickly—sometimes almost unbelievably.

Relief comes so fast because of the peculiar quick-dissolving property of Genuine Bayer Aspirin. The tablets you take dissolve almost INSTANTLY in your stomach. And thus you get practically instant relief. The fastest, safest relief—it is said.

TAKE 2 BAYER ASPIRIN TABLETS
DRINK ONE FULL GLASS OF WATER
Remember it is Genuine Bayer Aspirin which claims this quick-dissolving, quick-acting property. So be careful that you get the real article when you buy. See that any box or bottle you purchase is clearly marked "Genuine Bayer Aspirin." And that any tablet you take has the name "Bayer" stamped on it in the form of a cross. Then you will get quick relief.
Remember that when you buy Bayer Aspirin you are buying the heart.

St. Joe Wins Over Spencerville

A hard and fast game was played at Spencerville last week between the St. Joe team and the Spencerville boys. The local boys failed to accomplish much during the first half which ended 13-4 in favor of Spencerville, but they went in the second half with new vim and vigor and held their opponents to one field goal. At the end of the second half the score was tied 16-15, and after two overtimes the game ended 25-26 in favor of St. Joe.

The next basket ball game is with Leo, December 9. Both teams are hoping for a victory.

Miss Bonnie McSorley spent the Thanksgiving vacation with her grandmother in Fort Wayne.

The high school pupils are slowly recovering from the shock of their six weeks test grades.

The Juniors had a class party at the home of Ruth Baker last Wednesday evening. The members and their guests enjoyed the social activities and refreshments. There was plenty of fruit salad, sandwiches, pickles, cake and cocoa with seconds for all those who could hold it.

The guests of the Juniors were Eloise Draggoo, Beulah Storer, Violet Baker, Wilma Wade, Connie Harter, Esther Richards, Gertrude Kitchen, Robert George, Marshall Morris, Robert Wiers, Hollis Akins, George Simanton, Priscilla Borthwick and Gordon Noffsinger.

SPENCERVILLE SCHOOL ACTIVITIES MADE PUBLIC

Chapel Services this week were conducted by Rev. Fabianske. He talked on the topic of things for which we are thankful.

A new flag was placed in the assembly room on Tuesday of this week. Hurrah for Old Glory!

This week was test week. How we dread 'em! But they are over now.

The Senior Class held their party at the home of LaNore Laub on Friday evening. Those present were Lloyd Laux, Charles Kimes, Forrest Brattain, Howard Dermott, Luella Meek, Hazel Stinman, Paul Hensley, LaNore Laub, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Wolf, Ida Reed, Mr. and Mrs. Laub, Loren Laub, Roy, Roger and little Frank Laub. Games were played and the hostess served a delicious lunch of chicken sandwiches, baked beans, cake, cocoa, pickles, and peaches with whipped cream and nuts. All left at a seasonable hour having expressed themselves as having had a good time.

School was closed on Thursday and Friday for Thanksgiving vacation. Everyone seemed happy at the prospect of another vacation so soon following the one caused by the snow.

The Spencerville basket ball team lost the game to the St. Joe team on Tuesday evening by a score of 26 to 25. For the first three quarters of the game there was little interest shown, but during the last quarter St. Joe came through and realized they were playing ball and tied the score at the end of the quarter. There were few spectacular plays but both teams showed good team work, and two overtimes were necessary for St. Joe to win the one point which spelled victory.

Penny Soup Proves Popular

For the past three weeks the Home Economics Girls have been serving soup twice each week. A long line of youngsters pass by a table and receive a wholesome bowl of hot soup for the sum of one cent. This is made possible by the donations of vegetables, milk, etc., which are constantly coming in. Those which are not perishable are stored in the school basement for future use. Anyone wishing to contribute please call the school house.

The following people have so far contributed some of the ingredients for these hot soup dishes: Ben Drerup, Claude Laub, Ray Farver, Calvin Laux, Frank Ryan, Clyde Hart, Milt Spiller, Mary Calaway, Chas. Brattain, Clarence Sponhour, Mrs. Gust Hafner, Wm. Corman, Mrs. Frances Chapman.

BUYS FARM NEAR OSSIAN, INDIANA

Clarence Hart and wife purchased a 120 acre farm, 4 miles northwest of Ossian, Ind., and they moved this week, to a nearby place, so as to be there to make some needed repairs. The tenant will leave the farm on March 1st, when the Harts will settle down in their own home. We are sorry to see them leave the community, as they had been residents here for all these many years, being born here.

Clarence was one of the charter members of the Fish and Game Club and always took part in the club activities, and the boys will surely miss his enthusiasm.

We hope they will like their new home. The News will keep them posted on the doings of their home community.

RED CROSS EX- PRESSES APPRECIATION

The DeKalb County Chapter of the American Red Cross wishes to express to the hundreds of its friends all over the county its appreciation for their loyalty to the Annual Roll Call.

The success of the Roll Call this year was due to the heroic efforts of Mrs. Dr. J. W. Thomson, of Garrett, County Roll Call Chairman, and the splendid corps of workers in each community.

The chairmen were: Miss Inez Knapp, Auburn; Mrs. Harvey Judson, Ashley; Mr. Harry Trumbull, Butler; Mr. Eugene Willis, Garrett; Mr. Fred B. Leighty, St. Joe; Mrs. Clyde Rectenwall, Spencerville; Mr. J. B. Munn, Waterloo. The township chairmen were under the direction of Mrs. Howard Steckley of Auburn. They were: Mrs. Lola Carper, Mrs. Sarah Gunshouser, Mrs. Sarah Dannenburg, Mrs. John Moore, Mrs. R. L. Harding, Mrs. John Shore, Mrs. Dora Wilder, Mrs. Ruth Wilder, Mrs. Lottie Mills, Mrs. Lazel Boger, Mrs. Edith Davis, Mrs. Gertrude Borthwick, and Mrs. Lulu Mertz.

The local chapter is striving to merit the confidence placed in it and to do all within its power to relieve the burden of care that has fallen temporarily upon the shoulders of many in each community.

As chairman of the DeKalb County Chapter, I want to express my personal gratitude to each worker and contributor and trust that you have already received your recompense, in the realization that you are helping someone in need.

John Paul Price
Chapter Chairman.
Mowitza Campbell,
Executive Secretary.

A NEW FARM VENTURE

Winter farming is all right in some localities, but not until this week did we know that it could be successfully practiced here. But it can be and "is been," Monday of this week, O. E. Ginther cut and hauled in his fourth crop of alfalfa hay, and soy beans were hauled in and threshed.

REPAIR ROAD ONE

Some resurfacing stone is being put on road number one, between here and Butler, preparatory to getting the road in condition for black top next spring.

The Romance on the Tree by Martha Banning Thomas

HER eyes were blue
And her cheeks were pink,
She was dressed in the latest style:
Her hair was curled,
And in all the world,
She had the prettiest smile.

His eyes were black,
And he wore a coat
Of vivid, beautiful red,
His shoes were shined,
And he looked refined
From his toes to the top of his head.

"I wonder if he Could care for me,"
She thought with a gentle sigh,
"He looks so trim,
I'm fond of him,
And his collar stands up high."

He glanced her way
As if to say,
"I wish I could get nearer,
For at every glance
You do entrance
My heart... and but grow dearer."

So there they hung
On the Christmas tree,
A doll and a soldier-boy,
And they longed to know
Each other so
With a wistful kind of joy.

At early dawn
On Christmas morn
A child came down the stair,
"I'll marry," said she,
"Those two on the tree,
For they'll make a handsome pair!"

NOVEMBER TAXES 5% DELINQUENT

Tabulations made in the office of County Auditor Frank E. Lyon show an increase of 50 per cent in delinquent tax in DeKalb county within the last year.

The total tax unpaid at this time is $130,950.50. A year ago it was $86,060.13, an increase of $44,890.37.

The collections of delinquent tax made by County Treasurer Merritt M. Maxwell during the fall taxpaying period were $20,121.64. Of this, $3,154.07 was on tax due up to January 1, 1931. The amount unpaid of tax due at that time is still $52,724.95.

Of delinquent tax payable for 1931, payable in May, 1932, the treasurer collected $16,967.47 this fall. The amount left unpaid is $37,513.41. Of the second installment of 1931 tax, due this fall, $20,712.14 went delinquent. This was approximately 5 per cent of the total charged on the books.

The county officials report that a large number of taxpayers apparently are taking advantage of the new law passed last summer reducing the penalty 3 per cent, to which is added 8 per cent interest charged for the period the tax is unpaid. A considerable number of taxpayers made partial payments on their tax.

EDWARD SHILLING CONFESES TO BURGLARY

Edward Shilling, a youth of eighteen living east of St. Joe, confessed to Sheriff John P. Hoff and his deputy, Herbert N. Grimm, Sunday that he burglarized Harry G. Hursh's store in Spencerville the night of November 9.

An entrance was gained by forcing open the rear transom and the loot consisted of $24.98 in cash, an overcoat, a leather jacket, a shirt and a pair of shoes.

Shilling was released a year and a half ago from the state boys' school and he was suspected of the crime because of his absence from the Hursh store since the robbery, and before this time, he was a daily loafer about the store. He was finally caught wearing the clothing and was taken into custody.

An affidavit prepared by Prosecuting Attorney R. W. Sharpless was signed Monday by Mr. Hursh. Shilling entered a plea of guilt.

ty when taken before Judge Endicott Monday afternoon and was sentenced to one to ten years in the reformatory.

PLANS BEING MADE FOR ANNUAL PEST HUNT

At the Thursday evening meeting of the Fish and Game Club, plans were inaugurated to secure a list of sportsmen for the annual pest hunt, which will take place on Monday morning, December 26 and continue until Saturday evening at 8 o'clock, when all pests must be in hands of the committee at the town hall.

In order that any member of the club enter to hunt, he will be required to advance 25 cents. Any person not already a member can join the hunt by paying 50 cents, which entitles him to a 1933 membership in the club.

At the present time there is a membership of 62.

The club will meet on December 22 at the school house, serve a lunch and then choose sides for the hunt. The committee in charge of the feed is Grant Baltz, Walter Keesler and Ed Storer.

A joint committee was chosen, consisting of Harry Loucks, Lester Coburn and Frank Leighty. Their selection of pests and the number of points are reported as follows:

Hawk	1000
Owl	500
Crow	250
Red Squirrel	50
Barn Rat	150
Starling	100
Ground Mole	100
(Shrew Not Pest)
Sparrow	5
Mice	5

Every man and boy ought to join for the good of the community in this annual drive for pest elimination. For your convenience, you may join at St. Joe Filling Station, Meek's Barber Shop, Hursh's Grocery Store, and News office, besides any member can take your enrollment fee.

LEGAL NOTICE

The Advisory Board of Concord Township will meet at their regular meeting place on Friday evening, December 16, to consider additional appropriation of $80.00 to Fund Number 33 or transportation of pupils, on account of added bus; and to Fund Number 34 added power, $20. ### P. T. A. ADDRESSED BY DR. ROCCA

Patrons, teachers and friends of the P. T. A. listened with keen interest to a high-class program given in the gym on Tuesday evening.

Earl William Kinsey rendered two piano solos: "Firefly" and "Starry Night." Accompanied at the piano by Prof. Cox, Joe Woodcock sang "Ally Praise to Thee O' Lord" and "A Great and Mighty Wonder."

Dr. Louis N. Rocca, of South Bend, spoke on education and its relation to St. Joe and community as a cross-section of America, being typical in all general aspects of the country as a whole. He claimed to be telling nothing new; but the truths re-iterated by him were a bit startling and most surely provocative of serious thought.

The speaker paid a high tribute to the teachers and gave them due credit for their careful training for, and devotion to, their profession which is so largely responsible for the high standard of citizenship maintained in America.

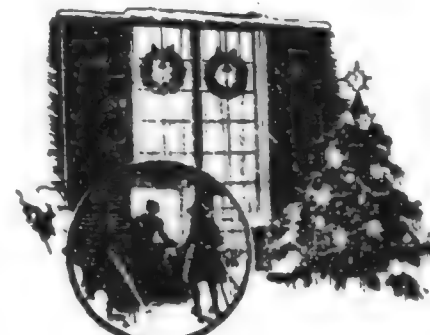

Attention was directed to the fifty-fifty basis upon which parents and teachers must work in order to succeed. He said it is absolutely necessary that each must be able to get the other's viewpoint in dealing with the child. Educating a child does not mean solely the pouring in of book knowledge but in inculcating right principles of living and in developing traits of character which make the child able to deal with his fellows in happiness and harmony. Dr. Rocca said, "You are, as I am, just what your parents made you before you started to school." The efforts, necessary as they are, of parents and teachers to undo and correct the habits formed in early childhood cause constant conflicts, much unhappiness and embarrassing situation, hence the great importance of the proper training of the pre-school child. Parents were urged to give more attention to five things: how to live, how to dress, how to think, talk and act. Also, an admonition to remain firm on the subject of morals was given.

The program committee is deserving of commendation for procuring such an able and noted speaker as Dr. Rocca. The president conducted a business session. The membership committee reported 47 members. The Sophomore class earned the three dollars which was the prize offered to the class getting the greatest number of paid memberships. They were hustlers and out-did the other classes by a wide margin. Much praise is due them for their zealous work.

The Hot Lunch Committee wants to give a dinner before Christmas to worthy and needy children. Donations and workers will be needed and a generous response was indicated.

Your ELECTRICAL DEALER....

..has gifts for every Christmas need....

DOWN through the ages light has been the perfect symbol of Christmas and the Yuletide spirit. Indoors and out, the message of sparkling, colorful lights is understood by all.

Your electrical dealer has every type of colored lamp, from tiny Christmas tree strings to varicolored, powerful lights that will shine out into the night and illumine the surroundings. He has, too, warmly artistic floor and table lamps for gifts... practical lamps and fixtures for utility purposes... all can be found in his shop at Christmas time.

For those who prefer labor saving devices, those magic gifts which change a woman's whole life, your electrical dealer again has provided with glistening, efficient appliances that are miraculously simple to operate. There is something in his shop to make a home more "homey" from first rising until "time to put out the lights," after a happy Christmas day.

Ask your dealer to introduce you to this fairland of gifts!

MAKE YOUR WORD A S GOOD AS YOUR BOND

---Then Be Thankful

IF you are known in your community as one who keeps his word, you have laid one of the foundation stones for sound credit. Reputation counts a great deal when you come to borrow money. You can build a reputation if you follow these few principles: Be honest; be industrious; save some money; manage your daily affairs wisely.

All these things one can be truly thankful for and even in times of depression you are put to the test of wise management in your personal affairs.

Live and learn—how to live.

The "hit-and-run" motorist wins no plaudits from the grandstand.

Original man: A chap who hasn't yet been caught stealing the other fellow's stuff.

The boss can pick out those who cinch their jobs by delivering the goods. They don't laugh at his stories.

Well, at any rate, Old Man Depression knows what the people think of him.

Just because a fellow exclaims "razberry" is no sign that he wants to eat a few.

There's a vast difference between "boloney" and "boloney," but we have 'em both.

The age of discretion is whenever you are able to use the brains the Lord gave you.

Europe is probably wondering if it would cost more to lick us than it would to pay us.

One of the greatest assets to a business man is the ability to collect after the sale has been made.

Fortunately a newly elected president is not expected to answer all of the fool letters sent to him.

We agree with an exchange that a small town has its advantages. There are not so many traffic cops to cuss.

We hear much about the crime wave that is sweeping over the country, but to us it appears to have the aspect of a tornado.

SINK OR SWIM

We do not wonder that so much of our local and community trade goes out of this town and to nearby cities.

Every day and night the radios are flooded with extravagant and enticing advertising of firms in the cities who are reaching out to corral everything in sight or hearing.

Many of these radio ads are masterpieces of fiction, but they get results. They are so alluring in their phrasology they just draw the buyers in like flies buzzing around a cake of honey, regardless of the true value of the articles offered for sale.

We would like to warn our local business firms of the danger of personal or community apathy, of the dire results of failure to meet city methods and city competition.

We do not wish to be misunderstood. We are not talking for the sake of securing ads for this paper. Our future is dependent upon the success of this town and community, just as are the futures of our merchants and other business firms. We sink or swim together—and we prefer swimming to sinking.

Shall we talk it over, friends? Or shall we just drift with the tide until it sweeps us out of sight?

CAN'T COME TOO SOON

President-elect Roosevelt assures the farmers of the country that one of his first acts when he enters the White House on March 4, will be the rehabilitation of agriculture, the raising of the prices of products of the farm to the point where producers will be able to live and meet their obligations, instead of starving and losing their holdings.

It is the one thing above all others that is needed to rehabilitate the country as a whole. With agriculture prostrate and unable to buy, no other industry can prosper. Country-wide prosperity can only come through the maintenance of a balanced buying and selling program. And there can be no effective relief for unemployment until such a program has been put into effect.

There is a growing sentiment among members of congress that some means must be evolved whereby a minimum price will be established for products of the farm that are consumed in this country, with the privilege of selling all surplus products abroad at prices sufficiently reduced to meet foreign competition. The latter provision would avoid the possibility of a great surplus that could not be sold at home.

Some of the wisest heads in congress are working diligently to produce a program that will achieve the desired results and still work no hardship upon any class of our citizenry.

It is to be hoped both parties will labor in harmony in this great undertaking. This is no time for party squabbling. The immediate and future welfare of the country should stand above all political considerations.

ONLY ONE EXCUSE

So much emphasis has been laid upon the unwisdom of postponing Christmas shopping until the rush hours of the last week that those who do not heed the injunction would seem to be impervious to both argument and appeal. That there are still some of these latter is apparent but their ranks are thinning rapidly.

For years past there has been concerted effort to avoid the confusion and the congestion which make what ought to be a season of happiness and enjoyment one to which a large proportion of people look forward to with more or less dread.

Everything favors early buying. The earlier shopper gets the pick of the Christmas stocks when they are fresh and complete. The task is performed in much less time and still leaves more leisure for making selections and inspecting merchandise.

The strain upon salespeople, upon those charged with delivery of goods, the long hours they are compelled to work and the crushing labors they must perform because of a disposition on the part of some to postpone their Christmas shopping to the eleventh hour have been pointed out again and again with much but not complete success.

Besides making it easier for themselves and for the stores and their clerks, to serve them the early shoppers confer a boon upon the overburdened postal service and express carriers.

There is but one valid excuse for last minute buying and that is financial inability to do it sooner.

CONSIDER THE MISTLETOE

It is a heartening thing to observe the mistletoe in as much demand as ever regardless of the reputed brassy promiscuity of the modern kiss. Perhaps, after all, the flapper of today is only flattering herself and is not so much ahead of the past as she believes.

However that may be, there seems to be no diminution of the mistletoe's sentimental significance since the day when Thomas Bayly celebrated it in his lugubrious poem. Many recall the couplet:

"The mistletoe hung in the castle hall,
The holly-branch shone on the old oak wall."

Well, the holly-branch can still hang on the oak wall or on the modern walnut veneer wall, or whatever you have, and so can the mistletoe—hang naively between the portieres, with its challenge to bashful youth to put it over once anyway. Custom decrees that maidens shall be wary, but not too wary; a trifle of a scream, a gasp of utter surprise, and it is over, and on the whole very satisfying. If you doubt that, notice the patronage given to your mistletoe and in particular notice your aunt as she marches by it.

This is, in fact, a relic of childhood, which is sufficient guarantee of its innocence. Ever since the apple tree of Normandy sent the parasitical mistletoe to England it has been the glistening tit-bit of the Christmas party. Since young men—or is it only young men?—do like occasionally to kiss young girls, here is a sort of sportsmanlike arrangement. Nothing prevents the lady from detouring around the mistletoe. If she does not care to do so, that obviously is a self-sought peril, justly punished by a kiss. If she simply does not perceive the hazard, well isn't that life for you? An unanticipated danger and high adventure all in a breath.

NO MANDATE FOR MURDER

The recent election may have represented, and did represent, a certain mandate against Prohibition; but it assuredly represented, no mandate for drunkenness, no mandate for murder and manslaughter in the reckless and wanton pursuit of mad driving under the influence of alcohol.

We make this comment upon noting, since election, a distinct recurrence of a wave of drunken driving. It may be a coincidence, or it may be a kind of morose let-down in "celebration" of wet victories. If there is not to be loss of the ground gained against Volsteadism, there should be an immediate movement against every manifestation of drunkenness back of a steering wheel.

Whoever, of whatever social or economic estate, undertakes to drive a car while under the influence of alcohol becomes automatically a public enemy. The courts should deal severely with every case. Fines will not suffice. Let there be some good stiff jail sentences and this moron-madness will be effectively arrested.

News-Sentinel.
Thus sayeth the dripping wet News-Sentinel. "A certain mandate against Prohibition; but it assuredly represented no mandate for drunkenness." Can you beat it?

Opposed to drunken driving, but also opposed to Prohibition of the thing that makes drunken driving possible.
"Whoever, of whatever social or economic estate, undertakes to drive a car while under the influence of alcohol becomes automatically a public enemy. The courts should deal severely with every case. Fines will not suffice, etc., etc. Of all inconsistent things, this protestation against drunken driving, by this advocate of 'personal liberty' is surely the raspberries."

"The courts should deal severely with every such case." We agree, for, now the business is outlawed. What should the courts do, if and when the 18th Amendment is repealed and the Volstead law becomes a dead letter.

Every issue of the News-Sentinel is so wet you can wring the booze out of it, yet the editor of same has the audacity, the temerity, the unlimited gall, crust, call it what you will as to insert the editorial we have just quoted, in a recent number of his paper.

If prohibition is to take the count, then to punish these drunken drivers is a rank injustice. For they have received their mandate. The News Editor's editorial is a most severe indictment of that "personal liberty" he so staunchly advocates.

IT BENEFITS ALL

Where is there a man with senses so dull he cannot derive supreme satisfaction from the sight of sidewalks and stores jammed with Christmas shoppers? There is none.

Nothing so pleases the merchant for he measures his own prosperity by the size of the shopping crowd. But it is not only the business man who can take satisfaction in the congested stores and streets which mark this particular season of the year.

To the factory worker these crowds mean employment and good wages. To the citizen of any community these crowds mean prosperity for his home town or city. To society these crowds mean peace and the lightening of the burden placed upon society by the dependent.

One thing most Christmas-gift buyers overlook is that the gift benefits not alone the recipient. The Christmas shopper is placing capital at the command of industry and business, giving employment to labor and giving to the community its very life blood—business. Recognition of this fact makes even easier and pre-Christmas conversion of hoarded dollars into gifts.

Like a boomerang, the money society spends for its Christmas shopping comes back to it. From producer to consumer to producer again—and all men are producers either with capital or their labor.

BUNDLES

Bundles, more bundles and still more bundles. Bundles, rather than people, will be walking the streets from now on until Christmas. There is much truth in the cartoon picturing the typical man bringing up the rear like an overloaded clothes tree. Bundle time begins about six weeks before Christmas and ends after the gifts that do not fit or suit have been exchanged at the store.

A bundle is an indefinable mass done up in brown paper and tied with string. It exists for the purpose of being carried. Bundles may be divided roughly into two classes, those that are forever coming undone and those that seem utterly incapable of coming undone.

Bundles are such frequent incidents in life that no well-directed household would think of going without a supply of brown paper and string for doing them up. It is a curious fact, however, that no matter how large and miscellaneous the supply, it is rarely ever possible to find just the right size sheet of paper, while the string is almost invariably too short. A parcel is a bundle trying to put on airs.

Persons who make up bundles hold the belief that the greater the number of knots the stronger the bundle. On the other hand, persons who open bundles would as soon spend the principal as cut a knot. Between the two the labor expended annually in the United States in tying and untying bundles would be sufficient to build a broad highway from Portland, Maine, to Portland, Oregon.

One good bundle deserves another, it seems. At least it invariably happens that when one bundle must be carried away or brought to the house there are others to occupy the attention of the other arm.

SIX VOTES DID IT

The Garner bill, to resubmit the question of repeal of the 18th amendment "was lost in the house by a narrow margin of 272 to 144, six votes short of the two-thirds majority required for adoption." The Democrats plan an immediate attack on the problem of modifying the Volstead law. Speaker Garner hopes a beer bill will be ready for action before Christmas.

It seems that the Democrats are somewhat hasty in their efforts to make this once more a wet nation. They no doubt construe the election of the Democratic nominees as a mandate from the people to overthrow the dry regime. Whether or no, this is assuming the right attitude, it is a fact that those holding seats in the Senate and House, were elected for a different platform, and represent a mandate to whom they are accountable for their actions. Thus, this precipitate act of Garner's and those of his ilk, will create an unfavorable impression on those classes, prone to weigh and consider an action before passing judgment.

If the election of the Democratic ticket, does represent a mandate of the will of the majority for downright repeal of the Amendment, (and there is reason to doubt it;) those Democrats should, at least have bided their time until they, by virtue of all rules of governing elections, saw themselves officially installed into the offices to which they were elected, this will be some time during 1933. No mandate from the people makes it imperative that Congress overthrow the 18th Amendment, nor yet attempt the modification of the Volstead law.

The hasty action, the vociferous rantings of the mob, against the principle of prohibition, ought to show the sober individuals, and well thinking individuals, the true character of those whom we have chosen to represent us in the halls of Congress, four years after the next fourth of March.

MORTUARY

Funeral services for Owen Cook age 9 years, who died Wednesday night following an illness from Hodgkin's disease were held Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock from the home of the parents southeast of Auburn and at the M. E. Church at Spencerville at 1:45 with Rev. Howard Brown officiating. Burial was made in Scipio cemetery between Harlan and Hicksville.

Owen, son of Frank and Dessie Cook, was born in Scipio township, Allen County, Indiana, July 13, 1923 and departed this life at his home near Auburn, November 30, 1932, at the age of 9 years, 4 months and 17 days.

He leaves to mourn his departure his parents, one sister, Dortha, one brother, Paul, all at home, his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Rupert of near Harlan, two great grandmothers, Mrs. Wm. Mettert and Mrs. Mary Cook, besides a host of other relatives.

A kitchen as bright and cheerful as a SUNROOM

WOULDN'T you like to have your kitchen so light and free from shadows that work seems to hurry itself along? You can quickly have such a kitchen. Securing it is neither difficult nor expensive. Simply put a new 150-watt Edison MAREDA Daylight lamp in the central ceiling fixture (which should be of the totally enclosing type) and a 60-watt Edison MAREDA lamp in the shaded fixture above the sink and in the one above the range.

"If you haven't these fixtures, ask us to tell you how little it will cost to have them installed. Now even washing dishes will be easier and less tiresome. For now you can see clearly, quickly and easily. What's that? You'd like to try it? Well, we're ready."

Home Education Plans

"The Child's First School is the Family"—Froebel.

Constructive and Educational Playthings for Children

Ray Trum Nathan

How many parents realize the advantages derived from living and elemental things as Christmas gifts—a pot of growing flowers; seedlings; a bowl of goldfish; a bird; a four-footed friend; a magnet?

Even in the city there is room for a tiny turtle or a bird, and if you reside in the suburbs, I would suggest a rabbit, or a guinea pig as a play-fellow. Whatever it is, it must be the child's own and he must learn to be responsible for its welfare. This idea of entire responsibility will add deep enjoyment if gently, patiently and unwaveringly insisted upon.

The more common domestic animals rarely bring perfect joy because they seem to belong to the entire family. However, if one is singled out to be the child's very own property—his to care for and protect, always—it will prove a marvelous inspiration and a real factor in the gain of scientific knowledge. For, primarily children want to know the whys and wherefores, and what better or safer mental stimulus can they have!

I have in mind the gift of a bowl of goldfish with a bit of coral to a very small daughter. We elders found it difficult to answer her queries satisfactorily. In fact, it resulted in our looking up everything relating to it that we could find and reducing it to such form as a childish mind could grasp and absorb. This proved a great pleasure and profit to our little one, who, as she grew older, never lost interest but added to her store until a goodly-sized aquarium has been acquired. This in turn led, of course, to the interesting study of water plants, the mineral world, drainage, and studies of the infinitesimal in proper sequence.

The development of plants from seedlings is another source of perpetual wonder to the eager, growing child. A small window-box where intensive gardening can be carried on, a miniature kitchen garden which can be utilized by Mother, the planting of beans which grow easily or the cultivation of some sturdy flowering plant like the geranium or fuchsia which requires so little effort for the amount of pleasure gained—all these possibilities for the child's enjoyment are quite within our grasp, and, in comparison, the manufactured, costly toy is commonplace.

Nature gives so bountifully of her riches that parents and teachers should take advantage of every opportunity to arouse in the minds of boys and girls a love for them that is strong enough to make personal sacrifices for their proper care.

SPENCERVILLE

Many little folks in this vicinity are entertaining the chicken pox.

The attendance at the Methodist Sunday School for Sunday, December 4, was 81, collection $3.07; Lutheran Sunday School attendance, 72, collection, $3.02.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Gloyd, of near Hicksville and Mr. and Mrs. Isadore Badiac and sons, of near Fort Wayne, were Sunday guests of Mrs. Emma Gloyd.

When you move or have any change in your address, please notify this paper by letter or card, as the government now charges for this service, if you neglect to take care of it.

William Hobaugh made arrangements and left here Wednesday morning for Denver, Colo. Mr. Hobaugh formerly resided in the west before coming home to look after his mother.

The Young Ladies Social Club met on Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Ruby Kraft. Mrs. Vernie Rhodes became a new member. Prizes were won by Mrs. Ellen Hart, Miss Marjorie Hollabaugh, Miss Alein Rhodes and Mrs. Bernice Wilder.

The Cozy Corner Club met on Thursday with Mrs. Zephia Steward. The ladies at this meeting decided to make Christmas gifts for the poor children of this community. The guests were Mrs. Alice Appleman, Mrs. C. G. Appleman Mrs. Alice Miller and Helen Loreina Rhodes. The next meeting will be held on Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Floyd Dean south of town.

GARAGE FOR RENT

A good building, well located, on paved road, has gas tanks and pumps already installed (Texaco); electric lights. Inquire at News office for terms.

RED CROSS TO RECEIVE MORE FLOUR AND READY MADE GARMENTS

The local chapter of the American Red Cross has just received word that an additional shipment of flour is to be received in a few days. This shipment will contain 484 barrels, making a total of approximately 1500 barrels received to date.

The cotton materials received a few weeks ago have all been distributed to the various community organizations in each community responsible for making them into garments. A great many garments have already been made and delivered to those in need. Approximately 8000 yards of materials were in the first shipment.

Mr. Price, Chapter Chairman, received notice today of a shipment of ready made garments to be delivered in the next two or three weeks. This shipment includes:

Hosiery, 96 dozen; underwear, 64 dozen; trousers and knickers, 16 dozen; jumpers, 19 dozen.

The chapter hopes to have this material ready for distribution before Christmas.

The local chapter is anxious to be of service and requests those in need of four or clothing and who are unable to purchase them to get in touch with the Red Cross representative in that community.

JUST HELPED THEMSELVES.

A tank of gasoline, tank cap and a robe were removed from the Wm. Randall automobile on Tuesday evening while they were calling at the Greeley Wearley home at Spencerville. When about half way home the car stopped and Mr. Randall was confused, knowing that he had plenty of gas, but Mrs. Randall insisted that the tank was empty, and upon investigation, she was correct. The Randalls' visited about an hour and a half at the Wearley home, and the culprits did the work while the car was parked there.

THE TAX MENACE A GROWING CRISIS

By FRANCIS H. Sisson

President American Bankers Association

NO danger, economic or social, more seriously menaces our life, happiness and prosperity than the rising tide of taxes which threaten to engulf us. This is not simply a problem of the depression. It has been developing for many years, growing more serious all the time. The depression merely brought it to a climax. Unless drastic steps are taken to reverse this trend the problem will not end with the depression. It will continue to weigh down and retard progress for an indefinite period. In city, county, state and nation the ory of spending has run on. It is estimated that in the United States the total cost of all government is nearly five times what it was before the World War. Many localities have been brought to the verge of bankruptcy by their expenditures. While many have saddled their citizens with a debt burden that will darken their lives and hamper their progress for years to come.

The total cost of Federal, state and local government in the United States is estimated at forty-four million dollars a day. Based on national income in 1930, this represents about one-fifth the total income of our people, or about $110 for every individual in the nation. Total taxes in 1931 are estimated to have taken more than 22 per cent of the national income. It is a sobering fact that on the part of everyone when one day's income out of every four or five must be contributed to the maintenance of government machinery.

United States Government expenditures were reduced one hundred and forty million dollars during the first quarter of the current fiscal year. The recent action of bankers in calling a halt to unnecessary expenditures of New York City as prerequisite to loans will reduce the cost of government in the country's metropolis, which is second in its expenditures to only the Federal Government. No state in the Union, in fact, no other government on this hemisphere, spends half as much as this one city. These savings in Federal and municipal costs are only the beginning of a movement needed throughout the country, if we are to be led out of depression into prosperity.

Unless the people can be made to realize that money for governmental expenditure can come only from their own pockets as taxpayers, casting depressing effects on both individual effort and general business, there is an imminent threat that we may be forced to meet economic difficulties similar to those that have so seriously handicapped other countries. The question is not primarily one of merely paring government salaries or shaving budgets, but rather of curtailing government activities for which we cannot afford to pay.

The idea that money for these mounting extravagances can be raised by following the slogan "Soak the Rich" is utterly fallacious, for such a policy will simply exterminate "the rich" and eliminate sources of revenue. It is also important to realize that corporate business in this country is in no position to withstand the effects of indefinite advances in tax rates. Current earning reports reveal that fact beyond shadow of doubt. The tax base must be broadened, and it therefore seems likely that Congress will be called upon to reconsider the sales tax, at least as a temporary measure to help meet a critical condition in the nation's finance.

LOS ANGELES.—While the idea of the guarantee of bank deposits by some legally enforced plan seems to appeal to many people who give it casual thought, the fact is that it has not only failed in every instance in the eight states where the experiment was tried, but actually produced unsound banking and increased the number of failures. It was declared by the recent convention of the American Bankers Association held here.

"Guaranty of bank deposits carries an idea that naturally appeals to people in general on casual consideration," the declaration said. "However, in principle it is unsound and in practice it is unworkable. It has been tried in eight States and it has not only failed in every case, but it has resulted in increasing the number of bank failures. Tying properly managed banks to make up losses of failed banks is not only unfair and unreasonable, but it weakens the whole banking structure. Again, guaranty of deposits places the incompetent and reckless banker on an equal footing with the able and conservative banker, which encourages bad banking at the expense of sound banking. We are therefore opposed to the passage of any law carrying a guaranty of bank deposits and believe that it is against the interest of the people of the United States to develop any such system."

NATION'S LAW MAKERS SEEN AS HARD WORKERS

Banker Tells of Labor Put in by Members of Congress on Mass of Technical Measures

OUTLINING legislative procedure, Robert V. Fleming, President Riggs National Bank, Washington, D. C., gave the recent convention of the American Bankers Association a description of the difficulties and problems confronting the law-makers. Mr. Fleming said in part:

"The most important part of organization of the two branches of congress is election of standing committees. There are 34 standing committees in the Senate and 46 in the House. These are the workhorses of Congress and the real work of lawmaking is done in Committee Rooms."

"The task of legislating for 124,000,000 people is a tremendous one. Of recent years approximately 20,000 bills are introduced annually in the two Houses. Only a small percentage become law, but they must be weighed in committee, accepted or rejected, perhaps amended, reported out, and then considered on the floor."

"Lawmaking involves about 99% of hard and unglamorous work and about 1% of glory. Few tasks appear so easy and are so difficult as enactment of sound and satisfactory legislation. Few individuals in any line of activity work harder or longer hours than the chairmen of the important committees during a session. I have great sympathy for the members of Congress whose constituents expect undivided attention to every piece of legislation in which they may be interested. From my personal observation, they earnestly and conscientiously endeavor to do all that is humanly possible."

Public Hearings

"When a bill is introduced, referred to committee and printed the next step, if it is a measure of considerable importance, is to conduct a public hearing. The committee makes an effort to listen to anyone who cares to be heard either for or against a measure, although witnesses are frequently limited as to time. Members of the Cabinet and other officials of the Government usually testify on measures in which they are interested and furnish the committee information in executive session or otherwise. In this way the Administration takes a prominent part in shaping legislation."

"Due to pressure of work and the fact that it is impossible for members of Congress to be technical experts on every subject of legislation, the committees are inclined to give consideration to the merits of arguments presented in testimony and the recommendations of the Cabinet and other officials. It is therefore highly desirable, both from the standpoint of Congress as well as those affected by proposed legislation, that the latter have an opportunity to discuss frankly the effects of such legislation."

"We sometimes complain about the technicalities of legislation, but when we observe organized minorities endeavoring to force class legislation through one House it is a comfort to know such measures are frequently held up as time. Members of the Cabinet and other officials of the Government usually testify on measures in which they are interested and furnish the committee information in executive session or otherwise. In this way the Administration takes a prominent part in shaping legislation."

A Country Editor

Looks at Banking

THE editor of the Norwalk, Ohio, Herald takes a somewhat different view of the banking situation from a good many people. His idea is as follows:

"With rents falling and unpaid, real estate does not present a happy picture. Nor does the owner of carefully selected bonds feel any happier, with a bunch of them going wrong. A lot of folks very carefully invested in preferred and common stocks in the best companies in the world and have seen them fall to perhaps a tenth of what they paid for them, and no dividends at all. Some folks kept their money in savings accounts in banks, and some banks have closed and left them high and dry. But the situation is worth looking at very carefully."

"Our government authority, most banks that closed were really solvent but for frozen assets and popular timidity. Gradually the closed banks are coming out from under and depositors in even bad cases will get at least 50 per cent of their savings. That's tough of course; nobody likes to lose half of what they had scrimped and sacrificed and saved. But when you hoard and stick the roll of bills in a coffee pot or under a mattress, some plug-ugly comes along and burns your feet till you tell him to take it and welcome."

"And what about the great majority of banks that weathered the storm, met all comers and are doing business as usual, carefully and conservatively, but safely? What about the savings in those banks? They are a full 100 per cent today—and they are the only thing we know of at 100 per cent anywhere. After all is said and done, a good, well-managed bank is still the best place in all the world for money or savings. Right now in Ohio the banks pay the taxes on all savings and pay their depositors not interest on their savings. We can't think, just now, of many other investments that are as safe as a savings account in a solid bank. Why, even a savings account in a closed bank is actually worth more today than most stocks."

Coburn's Corners

Miss Charlotte Miller, sister to Mrs. Floyd Coburn, who has been ill for a long time is considerably worse.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Blair, of Jackson Mich., were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Hart over the week-end.

The Ladies Aid of Coburn's Corners was entertained at the home of Mrs. Karl Hart of Hicksville. The afternoon was spent in sewing. There was a good attendance.

The Young People's class had their devotional hour at the home of Miss Mary Nees Sunday afternoon. There were fifteen members present and two guests, Miss Alice Virginia Hart and Miss Martha Loy. After the lesson some games were enjoyed and popcorn was served.

The Friendly Bible Class of Coburn's Corners entertained the Sunday School at the Community Hall Friday evening. Their entertainment was in the form of a radio program from K.U.K.U. "Cuckoo, Cuckoo." We were delighted to hear such artists as Lowell, John McCormick, Madam Schuman Heink and others. The local talent was J. N. Scholes, Mrs. J. N. Scholes, Mrs. Cal Hart, Mrs. Flora Wilcox, Mr. Wilcox Coburn, Mrs. Cad Shull and Mr. Walter Coburn the teacher.

SPENCERVILLE SCHOOL ACTIVITIES

School work is in full swing. Everyone is trying to finish the full quota for the first semester.

The teachers attended institute at Auburn on Saturday.

The ladies of the community have been using the Home Economics sewing room to help out in the Red Cross work. They try to come on Tuesdays. This group of ladies thus helps to lengthen the soup line. Then, too, some of the children are at hand to supply for fittings and so forth.

Only fourteen days of school until another vacation. Hooray!

News of Lower Grades

Several of the children in the lower grades are out of school due to chicken pox. Billy Coburn, and Maurice Laux were absent from 1st and 2nd grades and Bobby Burns from the fourth grade. Naomi Dove was absent from school Monday on account of sickness.

Mrs. Glawe had the misfortune this week of losing her most beloved pet, her dog "Toodles" who died Tuesday of yellow jaundice.

Soup Day

The soup day is still as prosperous as it was when it started. Soup is still served on Tuesdays and Thursdays of each week. On Tuesday of this week, bean soup was served, and on Thursday vegetable soup, the amount taken in was $2.50. These two days have proved to be happy days to some of the children.

Spencerville, 31; Leo, 36

Spencerville, Dec. 2.—Leo Tiggers were little rough throughout the game. Spencerville boys played a clean game for what they had to put up with. The score at the first quarter was tied 8-8, at the half Leo was ahead 20-15, then at the third quarter Leo still had the lead of 26-21. And in the last quarter Spencerville came within one point of Leo when there was a minute and a half to go. M. Funnish starred for Spencerville with 13 points and P. Hensley also starred for Spencerville with 11 points. Maxfield starred for Leo with 10 points. Gratz and Darr went out on fouls which were on the Leo team and Maxfield got a technical foul.

FORMER RESIDENT WRITES FROM OKLAHOMA

Mrs. Nancy Hindman, of Jackson township, sends The News a letter for publication, written by Mrs. Gladys (Barney) Reynolds, of Mountain View, Oklahoma. Knowing that most of our readers will appreciate the word from our former citizen, we print extracts as follows:

Mountain View, Okla.
Dec. 11, 1932.

Dear Aunt Nan:—
Your letter was received and I was surely glad to hear from you.

We are having a terrible bad spell of weather and I have been thinking of you, so far north and wondering what it is like there.

A week ago it was so warm we hardly needed a fire and for the last three days we haven't been able to keep warm. These sudden changes are very hard on people. All the water pipes are frozen and everything nearly stops when these blizzards come.

I haven't heard from Emmons for some time, but talked with Carter today over the phone. He comes in quite often.

Dorothy graduates from high school this year, Edgar is 10 Christmas and Jack was 7 last July.

Times haven't improved much here yet—how is it there? The biggest part of the people here will be ruined, before things are adjusted, I think.

Did I ever tell you that I had Grandfather Barney's old what-not and table down and have them in my front room. I wondered if you still had all of your old furniture.

We are always so glad to hear from you and I think of you often, but like everyone I am so rushed I don't write often.
I hope you will have a nice Christmas and write me when you can. With love, Gladys.

MORTUARY

SHULL

Lucy Frances (Jones) Shull, daughter of James William and Nancy (Conwell) Jones, was born in Tuscarawas County, Ohio, March 7, 1851, and died at her home in Spencer Township, DeKalb County, Indiana, December 15, 1932, having attained the age of 81 years, 9 months and 8 days.

Mrs. Shull was next youngest of nine children born to the Jones family. Her father died when she was four years old, and her mother died seven years later, leaving her completely orphaned at eleven years of age.

After the death of her mother, Mrs. Shull lived with an uncle, Thomas Conwell Jones, of New Philadelphia, Ohio, where she grew to young womanhood.

In 1868 Mrs. Shull came to Indiana where other members of the family had located, and for a short time she was employed as teacher in the public schools.

November 28, 1869, she and Joseph S. Shull were married and began life together at their present location, one-half mile south of Coburn's Corners. They first built a log house which they occupied for twelve years, when they built the commodious brick residence where they have lived for fifty-one years, completing sixty-three years of married life.

Four sons and one daughter were born to this home: William C., deceased, Clement A. of near Hicksville, O. K. Shull of St. Joe, Daniel L. of Bucyrus, Ohio, and Mabel Suzanne, Mrs. J. Sherman Hart of Hicksville, Ohio.

Twenty grandchildren and eighteen great grandchildren also belong to this complete family circle which, until quite recently, was unbroken. The husband is still living at the advanced age of 81 years, and all the children except William C.

When Mrs. Shull came to Indiana she united with the Methodist Church, which was then an active congregation at Coletown, two miles east of the present home. After her marriage she became active in the church and community work of Coburntown, assisting materially with the music of the church and the religious and social activities of the community, although her church membership was not removed from the Methodist Church where she first united.

With advancing years she thought much about our present life's relation to the realm toward which we journey, and where she has now gone, and those investigations have qualified both her age and faith.

The funeral was held Saturday afternoon from the home with Rev. J. N. Scholes officiating, and burial was made in Alton cemetery by E. R. Kinsey.

CARD OF THANKS

We appreciate, indeed the kindness shown and the words of sympathy expressed, in the very sudden passing of our Wife and Mother.

Jos. Shull and Children.

NEW DEPOSITORY LAW SOON IN EFFECT

The DeKalb county commissioners will on January 2 receive proposals from the banks of the county for designation as public depositories. Similar action will be taken by the other taxing units.

For the first time, no bonds will be posted by the banks, but the banks will simply agree to pay the legal rate of interest, 2 per cent, on public funds. In accordance with the new state law, the interest will be diverted to a special fund under control of the treasurer of state. All taxing units will be affected by the law. When the amount paid to the state treasurer reaches $3,000,000 the interest thereafter collected will be retained by the respective units, but if it shrinks to $2,500,000 it will be built up again by like method to $3,000,000.

In the event that a bank defaults, the amount of public funds owed will be immediately available from the state treasury for the benefit of the political subdivisions affected. The state will then attempt to realize on the assets of the bank to reimburse the revolving fund.

As Christmas draws near we begin to take stock—to see what to put in the familiar old sock. We don't look for new things to put to the test, when the old ones, the tried ones, are ever the best. We look in our hearts to see what's in store and find there's more friendship than ever before. This year there's less lucre or that's what we hear; but good will's at a bargain although it comes dear. Handclasp are something well within reach, and greetings are presents that, certainly, each can give without feeling a strain on the purse (and certainly Santa himself could do worse.) Warm smiles are precious almost any place—but think of how little cost of your face! We don't need a moment to ponder and think, but with our best flourish and in good printer's ink, we fill up the sock with joy and with mirth and veil Merry Christmas for all we are worth!

CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENTS AS SCHEDULED

The following nights have been reserved for the Christmas entertainments in the following places:

Avoiding Extremes

There were many people who thought this bank was "over-conservative" in the days when everyone was talking of "new era" of never-ending prosperity.

Today we refuse to agree with the prophets of gloom who talk of a never-ending period of business and financial difficulty.

Neither the heights of optimism nor the depths of pessimism are justified in America. Let us all work together to quicken the pace of individual and community advancement.

"The end is here. The Confederate Veteran is compelled to surrender to the irresistible force of financial pressure." So reads a Nashville, Tenn., communication.

The Confederate veterans made an unconditional surrender once before, in 1864 if we remember rightly.

Arch Coleman, assistant postmaster general, has made an appeal to all postal workers, thru the Postal Bulletin, in which he cites "The Tragedy of a Broken Doll." He wishes to instill into the minds of the little recipients of these dolls, who are often heart broken to find their little treasures damaged. One has but to remember the keenness of our younger days when we found a gift from a loving parent or friend, had been destroyed or marred by mishandling, by carelessness of those entrusted in their keeping, to appreciate that childhood has not changed in this respect.

Northwestern University students, are not only supposed to stay sober, but restrictions are imposed on their printed expressions. Beer, or any associated word was ruled out of all university student publications yesterday.

According to Wm. R. Slaughter, publication advisor, "Beer" discussions have no place in college life; has nothing to do with students, regardless of what is done about it in Washington." There is considerable change of attitude along these lines, nowadays. One would infer, from fiction, based upon college life, years ago; that beer and ale were a part of the curriculum; especially is this true in tales of English college life.

Dickens' stories of Rugby and Oxford, present a marked contrast to the attitude taken toward beer drinking, by the faculties of American colleges of today.

Charges of child neglect, are becoming frequent of late. This, of course, will be attributed to the depression by many, and while it is true, that it is harder to make provision for those to whom we are responsible, yet, in many cases, it is in a great measure, an alibi.

Many a man will not deny himself candy, cigarettes, or even his moonshine, in order to provide sustenance to those of his own flesh and blood.

In the flush and halcyon days of youth, men obeying a natural urge for mating, seem to cast discretion to the winds, and without a reckoning of the costs, hastily assume the responsibilities of wedlock; some with the best of intentions, seeing nothing but roseate promises; others, careless of consequences, felicitate themselves that they can cast off the yoke when it becomes onerous. Too much care and caution can not be taken with youth, in instruction of the rights and responsibilities that attach to marriage and parentage. The lightness with which the subject is regarded, lack of instruction, and apparent parental indifference, is costing us our self respect, honor, spiritual and material welfare.

EVEN IF IT IS CHRISTMAS—

DON'T set up the tree so that it can topple over easily and don't place it near heating or lighting fixtures.
DON'T use lighted candles on trees.

DON'T use paper, cotton or celluloid ornaments. Incombustible trimmings may now be purchased.

DON'T allow smoking near the Christmas trees.

DON'T permit paper to accumulate.

DON'T be careless in the use of electrical equipment or in extending wiring.

DON'T give small children dangerous toys—such as those requiring alcohol, kerosene or gasoline.

DON'T neglect to keep handy something with which to put out the fire that does happen to start.

DON'T keep the Christmas tree up after December 31st. It becomes dried out after a very few days in the house.

We met a fellow yesterday, who actually has taken seriously the esteemed Will Rogers' recent statements with regard to Hollywood embargo on perfumes. That's the tragedy of having a wisecracking wisecracker essaying the role of editorial commentator, when he really belongs to somebody's "Follies." In Rogers' case, the lariat is mightier than the pen—or should be. News-Sentinel.

Something seems to be troubling the News-Sentinel editor, for this has been the third time he has taken a crack at our own Will, in the last week or so.

Rogers may be a wisecracker all right; but, we notice behind all his wit, often clothed in words of seeming levity, there reposes a deal of hard sense. The thing we like most of all about Mr. Rogers, is his freedom from narrow partisanship. He does not hesitate to flay members of his own party, when they need it. He is a real humorist, and, furthermore he is intellectually honest.

WHO WILL PAY

Who will pay the taxes after all property has been confiscated and all capital has at last found its way into the coffers of the government?

The optimistic answer is that that will never happen. Probably it won't. But we are coming closer to it than we realize. In some middle western states more than 50 per cent of the farms have been foreclosed and are being worked by lessees, not owners. In some cities it is cheaper to tear a good building down than to allow it to stand—because taxes on the structure are greater than the income it produces. In other cases it is cheaper to close a factory—because, under present conditions, returns are not great enough to meet the tax bill and the other running expenses.

It is very easy to advocate soaking the rich to help the poor. But over-taxation of capital is the surest way to produce distress, unemployment, depression. When people are afraid to invest their money in producing enterprises, because of fear of increasing taxation, the country faces a crisis from unemployment and actual confiscation of capital and jobs by taxation.

The Congress now in session must deal with an unbalanced budget. The next Congress will have the same identical problem. Unless expenditures are reduced, there will come a time when there will not be enough taxpayers to meet government's high cost.

DUCK SEASON CHANGED

"The wet press launches a bitter attack upon the 144—more than half of them 'lame ducks'—who combined to defeat the Garner resolution."

The action of these men, declares the New York American of the Hearst press, in a typical statement, "was a betrayal of their party and their party platform, whether they are Republicans or Democrats." Furthermore: "When one reflects that of those 144 votes—a veritable roll of infamy—81 votes were cast by 'lame ducks' who will not serve in the next Congress, the scandal stands forth of allowing Representatives who have been spurned and rejected by the people to continue the farce of acting as their Representatives." Literary Digest.

And why should not these 'lame ducks' act as Representatives in this session? Remember their terms have not yet expired, and, furthermore, they could not vote otherwise than vote against the Garner resolution, and be true to their constituency; theirs was a dry, and not a wet mandate, that placed them in power four years ago. Those who voted for the Garner resolution were the traitors.

It seems that the wets are going to start an innovation; they are going to have a December season for plucking ducks, instead of a spring season. They want to feather their nest with the plucking of these lame ducks; get their measure through with their aid, then, when, and if, the measure should pass, with the direful consequences which are bound to ensue, blame it all on this present administration. This is politics. This child of the wets, is going to prove a troublesome one. No wonder the wets want to shift the parentage of same, onto their shoulders. It was good campaign material to secure the wet vote, but its going to be mighty embarrassing to its real papa, if, and when he commences to raise Cain as he did in the good old days, when he bossed the whole kit and billy. The wets promised beer for Christmas, but beer and Christmas is not a good mixture.

COBURN TOWN

The offering Sunday morning was $4.11 with an attendance of 32.

Mr. and Mrs. Claud Mason took dinner Sunday with Will Hamilton's.

The Christmas program is to be given Sunday morning every class participating.

Miss Mary Ayers and Reynold Thomas were the Sunday dinner guests at the Jay Hart home.

The Young Married Peoples class met for pot luck dinner at Mr. and Mrs. Lehr Wilders Sunday. A bounteous dinner was spread for twenty-five. After a short business meeting St. Nick came hustling in with his bag and gave gifts to all good boys and girls.

The R. H. W. Club entertained their husbands and families at a supper Friday. The menu was, roast chicken, mashed potatoes and gravy, escalloped oysters, perfection salad, cake and ice cream, candy, coffee. After a delightful evening of games Santa came jingling in and distributed gifts to every one.

Sunday School officers were elected for the new year as follows:

Supt. Fred Hart.
Asst. Carl Hart.
Secretary, Dwight Koch.
Treasurer, Fred Laub.
Chorister, Bernice Wilder.
Asst. Dale Laub.
Pianist, Lenore Laub.
Department heads are to be appointed.

Church officers were also chosen for 1932 as follows:
Elders,—Claude Laub, Clyde Hart, Abner Trostel, Lewis Washler, Emmett Lay and Floyd Coburn.

Deacons,—Alvy Perry, Fred Hart, Mervin Place, Carl Hart, Claude Mason and Elwood Hart.

Trustees,—Abner Trostel, Claude Laub and Fred Hart.

Church Clerk,—Lewis Washler.

LITTLE SHERLOCK A SPLENDID PLAY

The Senior Class, '33, of St. Joe High School, presented on Tuesday of this week, a three-act drama, Little Sherlock.

The plot centered upon the mysterious disappearance of bonds, held by a Mr. Benton, whose family consisted of himself, his wife and two daughters, one of which had an insatiable appetite for detective stories, and who also had a penchant for doing a little sleuthing on her own account. How, with the aid of a boy friend, she succeeded (?) in her purpose, against the more sensible opposition of her family, furnished many an amusing situation. Of course there had to be a couple of affairs of the heart, and the loyalty of the sisters, toward their own chosen heroes, led to many a snappy attraction between them which furnished many a laugh. The recovery of the bonds, and the happy denouement, resulted favorably to four happy hearts, and the chronicles failed to state that they lived happily ever afterward.

We wish to congratulate the faculty, the class of '33, and all who participated in any way, in presenting this clever little play for their most excellent work, and for their manner of its presentation.

The opening of the show by the high school band, and the musical selections between acts, are worthy of praise.

Between the second and third acts Kenneth Gaff in neat presentation speeches, presented in behalf of the class, as a mark of their appreciation of the services of Mr. and Mrs. Cox, and as a token of esteem.

A fair attendance was accorded the play, but considering the fact that much preparation is being made for the Christmas exercises, which will be held shortly, it could be said to be a good attendance.

ON TO INDIANAPOLIS

Completion of plans for transfer of the Hoosier Taxpayers' Union's headquarters to Indianapolis from Fort Wayne for the duration of the legislative session were announced by the executive committee after a meeting in the Hotel English Saturday afternoon. New officers were chosen to fill the vacancies caused by the resignation of John H. Aiken, of Fort Wayne, as president, and of John Napier Dyer, of Vincennes, as first vice president. Judge Aiken, in his letter to the committee, said he was compelled to give up the post because his law practice would no longer permit him to give sufficient time to the work of the Union. Dr. B. O. Shook is chairman of the local county organization.

A LONG WAIT

My grandpa notes the world's worn cogs and says we're going to the dogs. His grand-dad in his house of logs, swore things were going to the dogs. His dad among the Flemish bogs, vowed things were going to the dogs. The caveman in his queer skin togs said things were going to the dogs. But this is what I wish to state: The dogs have had an awful wait.

Half the things you think matter, don't, while half those you think don't matter, do.

Home Education Plans

"The Child's First School is the Family"—Froebel.

A QUIET HOUSE FOR BABY

Hilda Richmond

The winter baby in a family where there are older children, particularly children not old enough to go to school, has a hard time getting the peace and quiet so conducive to good temper and health in small children.

Lively youngsters must play, and people going in and out will make a noise, while accidents constantly happen. In the midst of all this racket baby is supposed to sleep most of his time during his first months.

One determined young mother set aside a room for the baby, a room sorely needed for the rest of the family, and turned the living-room into a living-dining-room for the winter. It was not pleasant and it was not convenient, but it accomplished the purpose until the weather was warm enough for the lively three and five-year-old children to go out on the porch more, to play. If the kitchen had been large enough their meals might have been served there, but unfortunately it was too small.

"A baby is such a valuable and such a tender possession," said the mother, "that it is worth all the effort made to preserve a quiet place for him."

But the quiet room for baby did not mean that the other members of the family lost the use of that room entirely. If the children wanted to play some very quiet game or to look at pictures for a little while, they were permitted to enter. If the man of the house desired a quiet spot to read he knew where to find it, and there the mistress of the house sat to sew while the older babies had their naps. It was a haven of quiet to each member of the family circle and the only condition of using it was to keep it quiet.

"If young mothers only knew how easy it is to manage the quiet spot they would all have it," this young mother declares, "a warm, airy, comfortable place where noise is excluded so that baby can sleep peacefully. My baby never had a sick day, and he progressed in normal baby fashion so that by the time the windows were flung wide, and the older children were spending most of their time out of doors, he was as sturdy as heart could wish."

The following DeKalb county students are registered at Indiana University this semester: St. Joe, E. DuWayne Kinsey; Spencerville, Virginia Ginther and Ralph Beams; Garrett, Howard Denison and Frank Yarde; Butler, Charles Blume, Ferd Hampel, and Alan Miller; Auburn, Maxine Farley, William Husselman, Robert Summ, Mahlon Miller (medical school, Indianapolis), and LeRoy Wiltrout.

DO NOT CROWD PULLETS IN THE LAYING HOUSE

(By Prof. H. D. Munroe) A crowded condition in the poultry house is the main cause of many poultry troubles. Prolapse of the oviduct or pick outs, colds and roup and low feed consumption can often be traced to crowded houses.

A flock of pullets raised on range and then housed under crowded conditions are liable to get into trouble. These birds are used to being busy. If crowded into a house with nothing to do they often start feather picking. Feather picking soon develops into cannibalism. Prolapse of the oviduct, or pick outs, is the usual result.

During cold weather when the windows and doors are closed, crowded conditions cause dampness and this condition causes roup and colds. As the birds get to laying they eat more mash and drink more water. Under crowded conditions the moist droppings cause litter to become damp. If the windows are closed and the birds crowded the litter will not dry out. A damp house is very dangerous for poultry.

Crowded poultry houses and not enough hopper space offer go together. If there are too many hens in the houses many of the weaker birds do not get enough to eat for heavy production. These birds will lay for a while but will lose body weight and finally molt. Crowded conditions are a cause of low production.

Do not crowd too many birds into your winter houses. Allow four square feet of floor space for each bird housed. Sell the extra birds and give those that remain an opportunity to do their best.

Thank You

As the severity of the weather increases the hot lunches are more and more appreciated by the children. The continued donations of our patrons make it possible to serve wholesome food at an incredibly low figure. Also we have been able to serve those who do not have the necessary funds.

We wish to thank the following people for their generous donations in addition to those previously acknowledged: Mrs. Menno Gerig, Jacob Gerig, James Sylvestre, Ben Drerup, Clarence Sponhour, Clyde Hart, Frank Ryan, Wm. Cormany, Claude Laub, Roscoe Walter, Mrs. Chas. Kimes, Mrs. Cal Laux, Mrs. Gus Haffner, Mrs. Chas. Brattain.

The Basket Ball team has added another game to their schedule. They have played seven games and five more to play according to their schedule. They also have prospects of a few more games besides their following schedule:

Harlan	There	Jan. 6
LaOtto	Here	Jan. 27
St. Joe	There	Jan. 28
Hamilton	There	Feb. 10
Leo	There	Feb. 17

Spencerville, Dec. 9.—The boys won their game with Flint with a great margin 54-8. The Flint boys worked hard all the way through the game but they could not score. The game at the first quarter was 10-1 with Spencerville leading, at the half it was 20-3 with the same team still ahead, and at the third quarter our boys were still leading at 40-5. K. Means starred for Spencerville a total of 20 points and P. Hensley also gave Spencerville a total of 12 points. Goodrich, Harter, Ayers and Garman starred for Flint with 2 points each.

The Lutheran Church team played Scipio Church team. The Lutherans won over the Scipio team with a score of 29-20. This game was the preliminary to the High School game. Charles Agler was referee.

Merl Dean Furnish, Spencerville fast forward, did not play on account of being on business in Fort Wayne.

Types of Students

There are three types of students in every school. The first is the go-getter. He is always busy, doing something for himself or others. He is the one who works hard for honors—and gets them. He is interested in all school activities.

How wonderful our school would be if we were all of this type!

The second group is made up of students who intend to do great things—some day. A member of this group is the dreamer. When he sees others winning honors, he is inspired and is determined to do something equally great. But, somehow he never seems to get around to it. Once in a while he does try something, but he gives so little real effort to it that he can do nothing but fail. If he does not boost his school but finds fault with everything in his whole life and in the school. He never works because, somebody else will do it if he doesn't.

The third group is made up of the laggards, who do not even dream, but are willing to sit quietly and be satisfied with old things as they are. They follow the path that looks the easiest to them.

The go-getter decides what he wants, and goes after it. He boosts all worthy things. The dreamer is not sure what he wants, or, if he is, he hasn't the ambition to go after it. The laggard's only desire is to be a nobody and to be let alone, and he usually is. Are you a go-getter, a dreamer, or a laggard?

Mr. Slaton.

Gum-Chewing

Chewing gum in public is vulgar. A person chewing gum reminds me of a cow chewing her cud. Many people do not know how to chew gum. They think the proper way is to make the greatest amount of noise and to attract the most attention. If you wish to chew gum, please chew it in your own room where no one will be annoyed.

Virginia Bucher.

Two essays, by Mary Jane Chapman and Alice Sasser, are representing this school in the contest held recently.

The Lionssees, their coach, Miss Warner, their principal, Mr. Slaton, his wife and daughter, and Mr. Joseph Yoder enjoyed a bobbed party Tuesday evening, December 13.

The Public Speaking class is preparing for debates. The subjects are: "Should crime be punished?" "Should we forgive Europe of the War Debt?" and "Resolved: That at least one-half of our state and local taxes be derived from other sources than tangible property."

Mr. Wetzel is back in school after a three-day absence because of illness.

The entire school will appreciate the coming holiday.

The Leo Lions piled up a score of 36 to 20 over the St. Joe quins.

let Friday night, December 9, on the Leo court.

The Leo girls received the short end of a 31 to 19 score in the game with St. Joe.

The Lions expect to add another victory to their credit when they play the Woodburn Warriors Friday night, December 23. The Lionssees will attack the Woodburn sextette the same night. (Note—This is a home game.)

The basket ball game between Altona and the Leo Cubs was a hard fought victory for the home team.

The seventh grade pupils are painting pictures on glass.

Grade Six presented an Indiana Day program on Monday, celebrating the 160th anniversary of the state of Indiana. Poems, songs, and a variety of material concerning Indiana were presented. Grade five, the part of grade six from Mrs. Moss' room, Mrs. Delegrange, and Mr. Slaton were guests.

Grade IV received the P. T. A. Attendance Banner this month.

A number of pupils from Grade V have been absent for sickness.

Attendance in Room I has been very poor due to flu and colds.

Grade II is working on a play entitled "Christmas Candles."

The pupils of Room III are very enthused about Christmas. They have written to Santa Claus; however, they realize Santa has depression also.

Sophomores Have Party

The contest between the two divisions of the Sophomore class ends for the first semester with this week's paper. Jean Goodwin's side succeeded in getting the most number of lines for the school paper, and consequently John Kaellner's side will have to give them a party. It will be at the home of Miss Borthwick this Wednesday evening.

Those on the winning side are Jean Goodwin, Earl Kinsey, Eloise Draggoo, Kenneth Ridgeway, Merlin Simanton, Violet Baker, Clayton Baker, and Keith Wilmot.

The semester examinations will be given Wednesday and Thursday of this week.

Boys Win Over Waterloo

Hurrah! The boys' team sure won an exciting victory over Waterloo last Friday evening. Waterloo, being over confident, started out their second team, but St. Joe soon proved to be more than they expected when they won 19-23.

The crowd was rather small, but the few who were there did their share of yelling. A little boosting helps the team, so why don't you come and help?

The teams play Hicksville this Friday night and will assure you of a good game even though they don't always win.

Girls Take Third Defeat

One of St. Joe's guards, Violet Baker, proved to be an important factor of the girls' team. She was quite conspicuous by her absence last Friday because of a broken thumb. The floor work was up to par but St. Joe's shots wouldn't connect with the basket, and the game ended 30-41.

The Sophomores join with the school in wishing every one a Merry Christmas.

HOLIDAY PEST HUNT IS NOW ON

Under the supervision of the Fish and Game Club, the annual pest hunt started off Monday morning with its usual enthusiasm, and pests are being trailed to their hiding places by the 44 members entering this part of the club's annual activity.

This is an exceptionally large enrollment for this activity and the results will undoubtedly be surprising, when they meet next Saturday night at 8 o'clock to start counting the many pests caught during the week.

At the Thursday night meeting at the school house, the club was addressed by H. C. Hathaway and E. L. Harding, game wardens and they gave some valuable information to the boys on hunting, fishing and trapping. Every person carrying a gun must have a license regardless of age or be subject to a fine if apprehended by an officer. This is worthy of note as there are many youngsters doing this unthoughtfully.

After a lunch was served by the committee, Grant Baltz and Lester Coburn were chosen as captains and the entrants in this contest were then divided as follows:

A Toast to the New Year

THE OLD HOME TOWN

How often have citizens of St. Joe and Spencer, at some time or other been accosted with the remark: "Why don't you get away from this hick town, and go where the real jobs are, make some real money, and have a good time, this town ought to be buried?" Question sounds familiar, doesn't it? You've heard it time after time.

Just recently we read of a case of a young man who has a habit of coming into an Ohio town, not far distant, to harrangue its citizens with remarks very similar to the one quoted above. A newspaper printed in the town, for which this young squirt held a profound contempt, states; this young jackanapes was the "seventy-ninth in the bread line in Toledo, Friday."

There you are! Visions of better jobs, that is, better pay; is the siren that lures many a boy, many a girl, away from "the old home town," to seek fortune, or, at least, adventure in the cities. In normal times, 'tis true, better wages can usually be obtained in the larger centers of population, and the urge to better ones financial position, is laudable indeed, provided—that the objective for obtaining an increased wage is a worthy one. Owing to a class of pornographic literature, that finds its way into the smaller rural communities, the seductive nature of such trash, mis-called literature, furnishes the incentive for the need of better wages in many cases.

Our young prodigal, begins to despise the common-place virtues; the dull routine, as lived in the small town and country, palls upon him, as he visualizes the glitter, glare, activity and excitement of the city.

For awhile, every thing is rosy; he spends his money like a drunken sailor, 'till; one day he is informed, that, owing to bad business conditions, he must be furloughed. Empty of pocket, he seeks "the old home town," the despised "hicks," must see him once more.

But — and doesn't it seem strange, to hear your old companions extend their greetings, grasp your hand in a hearty shake, why, this is something different; even if you're broke, no one seems to notice. Among strangers, twas different things were all "jake," long's you had the coin, but you got a cold stare if you could not hold up your own end. Yes, the small place has its dullness at times, but it has its compensations as well. Even though it be contemptuously stated by the city denizen; "Everybody knows everybody's business," it is likewise true, that in times of sickness, distress, and in deepest sorrow, one seldom lacks sympathy and succor. After all, these are the things that count, the things that make us realize we are children of a universal Father; that there is something after all, in "the old home town."

SMITH

Murray A. Smith, son of Andrew and Susanna Smith, was born at the farm home of his parents, near Newville, in DeKalb County, on November 27, 1849, and departed this life December 25, 1932, age 83 years and 28 days.

Mr. Smith was first married to Rosy Wiers, and to this union one child was born, a daughter, who died when about one year old. Later in life he was married to Caroline Healey.

Mr. Smith lived nearly all his life on the farm where he was born. He died at the home of his half-brother, Mr. Manford Smith, of Hicksville, Ohio, he being the only near relative living.

The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon from the Newville U. B. Church, conducted by the pastor, Rev. C. W. Moore. E. R. Kinsey burying in the Newville cemetery.

LADIES LITERARY CLUB

The annual Christmas party of the Ladies' Literary Club was held last Wednesday evening at the home of Lora Leighty. Accompanied by active members had charge of the program, and presented a most interesting one.

After the business meeting the ladies enjoyed a clever little pageant, which depicted scenes from Christmas festivities of other lands. Later, a pantomime, showing all the holidays of the year crowning Christmas as their queen, was given. Next the ladies were highly entertained by a humorous reading by Parlia Hull, after which they adjourned to another room for a social hour. During this time the committee appeared with dainty refreshments on appropriately decorated tables. After this Nina Kees had charge of distributing the contents of an enormous pile, which when opened, disclosed an exciting pile of Christmas gifts.

These very practically turned out to be groceries, one for each lady, and this unique manner of conducting the gift exchange seemed very much enjoyed. Finally everyone departed, after reporting a very good time.

HURT IN FALL THURSDAY NIGHT

Falling over a board in front of the Blue residence on Fifth Street, Thursday night, R. L. Zimmerman, is confined to his home with fractured ribs, a badly injured wrist and shoulder. He was taken to the hospital Friday by Dr. Emme for an X-ray of his shoulder.

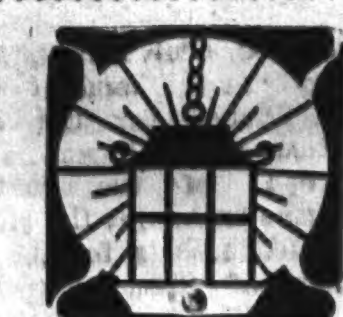

A drain had been dug up in front of the Blue home, next to the side walk and had been covered with boards. Mr. Zimmerman struck his toe on the board which threw him into the hole, receiving the above injuries.

The C. C. Club Gives Christmas Baskets

The C. C. Club met Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Amanda Rhodes for the annual Christmas entertainment.

Instead of the customary Christmas exchange, the club this year filled baskets for the needy families of Spencer township. Mrs. Ruby Kraft served as chairman of the basket committee, and with the assistance of members present, attractively filled 13 baskets with articles which bring joy to the hearts of little children. The average value of each basket was $1.25. Each contained candy, apples, pop corn balls, dolls, toys and games for each child in the family, also a gift for the parents.

The gifts were delivered by a Santa Claus, accompanied by carol singers.

The club members experienced a deep gratitude and enjoyment in the preparation, and felt the blessedness of giving.

THE GREATEST OF DAYS

From time immemorial, it has been customary for all peoples, tribes and tongues, to set apart certain days as memorials to important events.

These events, may be of religious or of political significance, sometimes of no portent at all.

But of all events, there is one of particular significance, overshadowing as it were, all others.

This is the observance of Christmas. No other day is so universally observed. No other day possesses a tithe of the interest as does this one, for it gave to the world the greatest character of all time. One whose influence is not only nation wide, but world wide. One who will not be forgotten when the so-called great, in all ages have passed into oblivion; when thrones have tottered, and altars fallen.

In our hectic times, when the heart of mankind grows faint, when we are tempest tossed through doubt and perplexity, we have one day, that arrives, with healing in his wings. It is a time when mankind for the nonce, lays aside the sordid cares of life, and puts into practice the maxim, "It is better to give than to receive."

When that son, or daughter, thinks of dear old father and mother, and writes that letter so long delayed. Yes, there are other anniversaries, joyous no doubt, but none that so inspires in us that greatest thing in the world to love.
